Committee Votes to Add 2 Members To NLRB

Ramspeck Proposal To Abolish Board Is Killed; Balloting To Be Reconsidered

By John B. Oakes,
Post Staff Writer

The first legislative step toward revision of the Wagner Act was taken yesterday as the House Labor Committee recommended adding two members to the three-man National Labor Relations Board.

This proposal, believed to have tacit approval of the Administration, was adopted by a 14-to-3 vote after the committee had turned down, 9 to 8, an effort to abolish the present board and set up a new one of five members.

The more drastic of the two suggestions, which would replace the existing board, was presented by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia. As defeat of the proposal by a majority of one was called into question because of a possible misunderstanding over a proxy, the vote will be reconsidered when the committee meets again this afternoon.

Roosevelt Declines Comment

President Roosevelt declined to comment yesterday on the Labor Committee's action, on the grounds that all Wagner Act amendments are pending legislation. But it was generally believed that the pro-New Deal committee followed the President's wishes in voting to enlarge the board as a move to forestall more drastic revison of the Wagner Act.

A well-informed member of the committee declared yesterday he expected no other important alterations in the act would be recommended, with two possible exceptions. A provision permitting employers to ask for elections in A. F. of L.-C. I. O. disputes probably will be indorsed, he said. And the "Garrison amendment," relieving the board of the necessity for determining the bargaining unit in A. F. of L.-C. I. O. rows, also may be approved.

Subject to Amendment

But whatever bill is recommended by the Labor Committee, it is almost certain to be subject to amendments on the floor of the House, with probable preference being given to the recent proposals of the special Smith committee investigating the board.

In addition to turning down the Smith Committee's recommendation to abolish the present board, the Labor Committee refused its assent to two other Smith proposals. These would have revised the Wagner Act's declaration of principles and would have completely separated the prosecuting from the judicial functions of the Labor Board.

The move to alter the declaration of principles was downed by a voice vote, but the proposal to establish an independent administrator to conduct all prosecutions under the Wagner Act is understood to have been dismissed without the formality of vote.

Decided on Hoffman Proxy

The 9-to-8 vote against abolition of the board was decided on the proxy of Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, bitter critic of the NLRB, whose ballot was cast by Representative Smith (Republican), of Maine.

Explaining that he voted "nay" for both Hoffman and himself, Smith declared that he thought he

Roosevelt Denies He Said Religion Bars Farley in Race

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday praised Postmaster General James A. Farley's recent plea for religious tolerance and denied telling anyone that Farley's religion would impair his Presidential or Vice Presidential prospects.

ROOSEVELT

The President said a column by Ernest K. Lindley in the March 4 issue of The Post, reporting that the President had so informed a Southern Democratic stalwart, was made out of the whole cloth. He said the rest of the column was equally false.

Lindley's column said the President told his visitor that he did not intend to run for reelection, that he favored Secretary of State Hull as his successor, but that Farley's religion, particularly in the South, hurt his chances for second place on the Democratic ticket.

The President told reporters he frankly was in a quandary as to what to say and asked for their help. He said he regarded Lindley's column as one of the respectable columns that he considered only about 20 per cent wrong, as against other columns that are 80 per cent wrong. He said he believed columns by Lindley, Mark Sullivan and four or five others are in the respectable class.

His predicament, the President said, was whether to answer press conference questions directed at columns in the respectable class and disregard questions aimed at those in the 80 per cent wrong category.

The President's remarks were prompted by a question on whether he had read the speech on political tolerance delivered Saturday night by Postmaster General Farley before the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

He said he thought the Farley speech was a perfectly grand thing.

Farley had said:

"We have never permitted the ideals of this republic to sink to a point where every American father and mother, regardless of race, color or creed, cannot look proudly into the cradle of their new-born babe and see a future President of the United States."

President Roosevelt said this brought up the question about which he was in the quandary. He recalled that at his last press conference a reporter had asked him about the March 4 Lindley column. He said his reply then that he had not read the column was perfectly true at that time, but that subsequently he had read it.

The President described what he termed his predicament and said he would like to have the help of reporters whom he believed sympathetic.

They know, he said, that there are all sorts of columns published in the morning and afternoon papers.

The President stressed that his rule is not to comment on anything appearing in columns. To do so would not only require daily press conferences but would mean one continual row between himself and the columnists, he said.

He next raised the question of whether he should differentiate between columns. Should he, he asked, disregard queries referring to columns he considered 80 per cent wrong and answer only those directed at respectable columns, such as those written by Lindley and Sullivan?

To do so would create a class, he said, and he must therefore apply his rule of commenting only on straight news.

He volunteered that all those present who knew him know that the Lindley story was made out of the whole cloth. He said he never said such a thing about Jim Farley and that the rest of the column was likewise untrue.

Because he had not answered the story, he said, some columnists are deliberately accusing him of giving out the impression that he had had such an interview with a Senator or Congressman as was reported by Lindley. This, he said, was the point. He told reporters they could see what a position that puts him in, since he had not commented on the column.

The President said his problem was whether or not to maintain his rule and answer as true or untrue, stories written by special writers. The situation that has developed does not make it easy for him when he lives up to the rule, he said.

A reporter asked if he intended to say Lindley's entire March 4 column was untrue. The President replied that he had never talked along that line with any statesman, distinguished or otherwise, from any point of the compass.

A Statement by Mr. Lindley

By Ernest K. Lindley.

It is the privilege of the President to confirm, ignore, or deny any newspaper column or story.

The column to which the President referred yesterday was published in The Washington Post of March 4, and in other newspapers to which my column is syndicated. It was a piece of straight reporting of information which came to me from sources whose reliability I have no reason to doubt. Within 24 hours after its publication I received word from several Democratic politicians confirming its substance and expressing the fear that they might be "on the spot" at the White House for having talked "out of school."

LINDLEY

One passage in the column was seized upon by opponents of the President to impute to him a sense of religious prejudice. Such an insinuation is, of course, utterly unwarranted. As everybody knows and as I wrote in a subsequent column, "there isn't a molecule of religious prejudice in the President" and "no public man in our history probably has done as much as Roosevelt to override and stamp out religious prejudice."

Any insinuation to the contrary must be keenly resented by the President and his friends and cannot be too vigorously repudiated.

Sales Tax Gains Favor In House

Poll Reveals Trend

Sales tax proponents appear to hold the advantage in the House District Committee as members come to vote today on the Nichols bill to substitute a combined sales and income tax plan for the present personal income levy.

An informal poll of the committee yesterday disclosed that at least two minority members probably will support Chairman Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, rather than the ranking minority member, Representative Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois.

Representative Paul Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, said he favored the new tax bill, and Representative Stephen Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, said he was inclined to the sales tax, although he had not reached a decision.

Randolph Plans Amendments

Chairman Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, disclosed he will propose several amendments to the Nichols bill, one of which would raise the sales tax base from 5 to 10 cents. West Virginia's sales tax, he said, starts at 10 cents.

A weakening in the ranks of defenders of the income tax was disclosed when it was learned that Representative George Bates (Republican) of Massachusetts, is en route to Panama with a House subcommittee and will not return to Washington until the latter part of the month.

Dirksen also revealed that he will be in his home district next Monday, District day, when the Nichols measure is scheduled to be called up.

Dirksen to Seek Delay

He said he will confer with Minority Leader Joe Martin, however, in an effort to have House action postponed. Representative Nichols indicated he will insist on House consideration of the bill Monday rather than wait for the first District day in April.

Dirksen and Bates led the House revolt last year which resulted in

Attack Enters 8th Hour, Premier Vows 'Moral Peace'

Chamberlain Defends Policy, Plans Changes In His Cabinet

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, March 19.—In a harsh, metallic voice, beating his hands on the table in the deep well of the old House of Commons, Prime Minister Chamberlain today used four words, "We intend to fight," to stifle peace talk and dwarf opposition counterattack.

To Hitler and Mussolini, he said, in effect, "Whatever you have decided, we are ready to meet it."

Pledges "Moral Peace"

In an hour-long statement, he pledged the empire to win "such a peace"—a "moral peace"—as was outlined by President Roosevelt last Saturday. His voice rose bitterly as he spoke of the Brennero meeting of "these gentlemen" (Hitler and Mussolini) yesterday, and he cried, "We are not likely to be diverted from the purpose for which we entered this war."

Later in the evening the British war aims were restated thus in the House of Lords by Foreign Secretary Halifax:

"It is no part of our purpose to destroy Germany, to seek a vindictive peace, or anything of the kind, but it is our purpose to see that liberty, as far as we can achieve it, is restored to the people who have been deprived of it; to convince Germany she is not entitled to exercise sovereignty above moral law."

Plan New Cabinet

The somewhat cautious attacks of Labor Leader Clement R. Attlee, Liberal Leader Sir Archibald Sinclair, and Leslie Hore-Belisha, ousted war secretary, all of whom urged the government to seize the initiative in the war, paled beside the strong, almost fiery, tone of Chamberlain's statement.

After he had spoken, it was learned in the Commons lobby that peace already had been patched up amongst the various parties on the basis of a new war cabinet which Chamberlain probably will form during the Easter recess. Members of Parliament agreed that, for the present, active opposition to the government had been squelched, and said the cabinet reshuffle would follow Chamberlain's own ideas on the subject; not the opposition's.

Chamberlain stiffly refused to be "hustled into adventures." He promised critics of the govern-

Daladier Wins Questionable Vote on Policy

300 Withhold Ballot As 239 Urge Quick Action as War Aim

By Henry Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Wednesday, March 20.—The Chamber of Deputies early today, departing from a wartime policy of unanimity, voted confidence in the government of Premier Daladier with only 239 ballots for the cabinet out of more than 500 deputies.

The vote was officially announced as expressing confidence in the government by 239 to 1, but in addition to the single ballot cast against Daladier, about 300 deputies abstained.

The motion of confidence urged Daladier to "take immediately and in all domains, measures indispensable to bring France's force to a maximum and to carry the war to victory in close accord with our allies."

Those abstaining explained their action was based on a desire to know the character of the new cabinet which Daladier is hurriedly forming in answer to the Chamber's insistent demand for a more energetic administration of the nation's war machine.

12-Hour Secret Session

A cabinet meeting, probably the last of its present membership, was called for 11 a. m. (5 a. m., E. S. T.). Immediately thereafter resignation of retiring ministers and the formation of the new government were expected.

The vote came early this morning after a 12-hour secret session of the lower house of Parliament in which critical members propounded many questions to Daladier concerning his conduct of the war, particularly the failure of the Allies to get aid to Finland before she was forced to sign a peace with Russia.

The secret session did not end until 3 a. m. today. The deputies then went into a public meeting to vote.

The upshot of the Chamber's long and searching inquiry was to leave

Roosevelt Defends Sale Of Warplanes

'Bunk,' President Says Of Charges That U. S. Revealed Secrets

By John G. Norris,
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, hitting back at critics of his warplane export policy, yesterday described as "bunk" assertions that vital American military secrets were being divulged by aircraft sales to the Allies.

He defended sale of latest type planes abroad as necessary to American defenses, contending there are no secrets of aircraft design, only secret "devices." The latter, the President said, are carefully safeguarded and stripped from planes when they are released for export.

Capacity Is Trebled

Inadequate American aircraft production capacity last year, he said, presented an even more serious National defense problem than the shortage of planes and pilots. Foreign warplane orders since then, have trebled plant capacity, he added.

This, Mr. Roosevelt declared, represents the year's most amazing and significant stride for preparedness.

Taking issue with the Congressional critics of his plane export policy, the President said the criterion of foreign sales should be to sell them what they will buy.

The President spoke on the eve of a House Military Affairs Committee inquiry into the matter, an investigation which found committee leaders in disagreement as to procedure.

Harter Demands Open Hearing

Representative Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the aviation subcommittee, had instituted the probe and called Secretary of War Woodring, Assistant Secretary Johnson, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of Air Corps, for this morning.

Last night, Chairman May of the full Military Committee announced the inquiry would be conducted by the whole group. Harter declared May planned to conduct a secret in-

Arms Depot Hit, Danes Report, In Heaviest Fire of War

BULLETIN

London (Wednesday), March 20 (AP).—The air ministry announced at 8 a. m. (2 a. m. E. S. T.), today that only one plane had failed to return the night-long raid on the German island of Sylt, signifying the end of the attack.

The ministry communique said: "Attacks made on Hornum (a military base on Sylt) last night, were spread over a period of about 7 hours. All our aircraft have returned safely with the exception of one which is overdue and must be presumed to have been lost.

"Information now available shows that damage reported earlier is very extensive and includes direct hits on slipways and hangars."

By Tom Yarbrough
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Wednesday), March 20.—Britain unleashed a grueling bomb attack on Germany's Sylt Island air base which for more than seven hours last night and today blasted at burning hangars, workshops and slipways in by far the longest and most sustained air attack of the war.

Hitting back at the Nazis for their 85-minute raid last Saturday on the admiralty's anchorage in Scapa Flow, British bombers were declared by the air ministry at 3 a. m. (9 p. m., E. S. T., Tuesday) today still to be freighting their explosives across 350 miles of North Sea to the base which Germany has used for her air raids on British shipping.

Ushered in by an ominous warning of Prime Minister Chamberlain that Germany must bear "responsibility for the consequences" of Saturday's Scapa Flow raid, the attack stirred conjecture whether this was the overture of the great aerial offensives which have been predicted in any great modern war.

82 Bombs in 3 Hours

The attack, as described here officially, was carried out by successive, almost continuous, waves of bombers, guided by the fires set by the first bombs. Moonlight and scattered clouds permitted the planes to sight their objectives and dart to cover after delivering their blows.

At 3:30 a. m. all attacking aircraft due to return by that time were declared to have "landed safely."

(A German account of the raid, issued by the official news agency DNB, said one plane was shot down.

(The story, issued late last night, said three attempted attacks had been made, but denied any damage had been done except to fire one house. German authorities professed to have no later details.

(Danish eyewitnesses who crowded the shore but 5 miles away, told of a line of fires springing up across the island and said they counted 82 bomb explosions and four tremendous, earth-shaking blasts, possibly from blown up ammunition dumps, in the first three hours of the pounding attack, which began about 8 p. m. (2 p. m., E. S. T. Tuesday).

Hindenburg Dam Bombed

Early today the Exchange Telegraph Agency reported from Copenhagen that unidentified planes dropped bombs on four Danish towns, about 60 miles north of Sylt.

British news agency reports said the Hindenburg Dam connecting Sylt with the mainland was bombed; that one British plane was shot down on the north coast of Sylt. The dam was reported hit in a previous British raid.

Chamberlain, himself, relayed to Commons wireless messages late last night from leading bombers over Sylt, at the height of the attacks.

The Danish account of the raids said the British planes flew to the attack in small relays, diving from overhanging clouds in the midst of tremendous anti-aircraft fire and then dodging again into the clouds.

The raids were starting out even as the Labor peer, Lord Strabogli, argued in the House of Lords that the Scapa Flow bombing "removed the obstacles to our bombing of German supply and naval bases." Lord

Ethel Roosevelt Hurt in Fall From Horse in Virginia Hunt

Pelvis Fractured, She Faces a Month In Hospital

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., March 19.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., tonight faced a month's stay in the University of Virginia hospital after suffering a pelvic fracture in a riding accident.

The wife of the President's son fell from her favorite mount, Major, while riding with the Farmington Hunt near here today. Mrs. Roosevelt is the former Ethel du Pont, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont.

At the hospital her condition tonight was reported as "entirely satisfactory." It was thought that a cast is unnecessary. Physicians said all danger from a slight concussion suffered in the fall had passed.

Mrs. Roosevelt was treated for a slight back injury only a week ago after riding the same horse that threw her today.

The accident occurred this morning on the grounds of Highlands, suburban home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Funsten. Major stumbled in attempting to clear a low picket fence. Mrs. Roosevelt was thrown heavily to the ground but was not caught beneath the horse. She soon recovered consciousness and was taken to the University Hospital.

The President's son left a law class to go to the hospital.

He and his wife were slightly injured December 29 when their car ran into a parked truck near Boyce, Va., as they returned from a Polish Relief benefit ball. Mrs. Roosevelt suffered a lacerated forehead and broken tooth in the crash and her husband a head cut and bruises.

Young Roosevelt telephoned the White House today to assure his parents that his wife was not dangerously injured. Officials said Mrs. Roosevelt had no immediate plans to go to Charlottesville.

District Jury Indicts Waiter In Drive on White Slavery

Striking a blow against organized vice, the District grand jury yesterday indicted Abraham Blum, 30, a waiter, on a charge of acting as procurer for a 17-year-old girl who told officers white slave traders brought her from Virginia to Washington.

James Richard Piercy, 29, was indicted a week ago on a charge of violating the Mann Act by bringing the girl here and forcing her to solicit prostitution in some cabarets on Ninth street northwest. Previously Piercy was convicted in the Police Court of shooting at the girl when she balked at helping to rob one of her "dates."

Assistant District Attorney Allen J. Krouse, who was assigned by District Attorney David A. Pine to investigate the condition revealed by Piercy's arrest, said that other indictments might be expected.

"This condition is going to be broken up," Krouse said. "The evidence in this case alone shows

The Gallup Poll

Political Sentiment in Pennsylvania Is Found Evenly Divided in Survey

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

The following study on Pennsylvania is the second of a series of reports by the Gallup Poll on political sentiment in the pivotal States. With its second largest number of electoral votes, Pennsylvania is certain to be one of the most important States in the campaign this year.

Princeton, N. J., March 19.—Political sentiment in Pennsylvania, a State which went Democratic in 1936 but elected a Republican State administration two years ago, is almost evenly divided between the two parties today in State-wide surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

GALLUP

The trend toward the Democrats began with the outbreak of war in Europe, but the division of strength between the Republicans and Democrats is sufficiently close at this time to indicate that the Keystone State, with its 36 electoral votes, is likely to be one of the chief battlegrounds in the Presidential campaign this year.

G. O. P. Until 1934

Up to 1934 when Governor Earle and Senator Guffey were elected, the State had a virtually unbroken tradition of Republicanism, having gone Republican in every Presidential election but one since 1884. President Roosevelt carried Pennsylvania with 58 per cent of the major party vote in 1936, but a much smaller majority of the State's voters now say they would like to see the Democrats win again in 1940. The trend is indicated in replies to the question:

"Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election this year?"

Pennsylvania Voters Today
Want Democrats to Win	51%
Want Republicans to Win	49

Despite the downward trend since 1936, Democrats can take comfort in the fact that their party is more popular in the State today than it was in a previous Institute survey last July. At that time a majority said they wanted the Republicans to win.

Voters Last July
Want Democrats to win	46%
Want Republicans to win	54

The pro-Democratic trend since the outbreak of war, Institute studies show, has been nation-wide. As compared to a year ago, the popularity of the Democratic party throughout the Nation has increased 6 percentage points in these studies.

Sentiment Now Divided

While today's results indicate the Democratic Party has a slight edge in Pennsylvania a third term for Roosevelt is not favored by the voters in this State.

Approximately one-fourth of the Pennsylvania Democrats who voted for Roosevelt in 1936 are against him for a third term, the study shows. Among Republicans there is nearly unanimous opposition to a third term. Sentiment for the State as a whole is as follows:

Would vote for Roosevelt third term	49%
Would vote against	51

By parties, the division is as follows:

	Would vote for 3rd term	Would vote against
1936 Roosevelt voters	74%	26%
1936 Landon voters	6	94
All others	60	40

In 1936, 2,353,788 voters cast their ballots for Roosevelt in the State. Applying the survey percentages to this figure indicates that approximately 600,000 of these today say they would not vote for Roosevelt for a third term.

Last week, in the first of its series of studies on important key States, the Institute reported New York State leaning Democratic, with 53 per cent of voters saying they wanted to see a Democratic victory this year, to 47 per cent favoring a Republican victory.

How Pennsylvania Has Voted

The following facts reveal the division of political sentiment between the major parties in Pennsylvania in recent years:

1936—Roosevelt carried the State with 58 per cent of major party vote.

1938—Republican candidates for House of Representatives polled 53 per cent in the Congressional elections, to 47 per cent for the Democrats. A Republican Governor was elected with 54 per cent.

1939—Institute survey in July showed Democratic strength at 46 per cent, to 54 per cent for Republicans.

Today—Sentiment virtually evenly divided, with 51 per cent of voters favoring a Democratic victory in the Presidential election, 49 per cent a Republican victory.

Labor Act Revision Favored by Lawyers

A majority of American lawyers polled by the Institute in a special survey of the legal profession are in favor of revising the Wagner Labor Act. With amendments to the act up for consideration in the Senate, the Institute asked a cross-section of lawyers listed in the Martindale-Hubbell Law Directory, "Do you think the Wagner Labor Act should be revised, repealed or left unchanged?"

The vote was: Revised 65 per cent, repealed 26 per cent, left unchanged 9 per cent.

Sentiment for revision did not vary by political affiliation, even the Democratic lawyers voting 66 per cent for revision; the Republican lawyers 65 per cent.

Those voting in favor of revision gave as their chief reasons that the law should be made "fairer to the employer," that decisions of the Labor Board should be made subject to court review, and that the act should be clarified and made simpler.

SEC Accuses Investment Bankers of 'Government Baiting'

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday struck back at the Investment Bankers' Association for demanding a Congressional review of the laws which the Government agency is administering.

In one of the most sharply worded statements it ever issued, it accused the association of "ill-tempered obstructionism and Government-baiting."

Meanwhile, a Congressional investigation of the SEC was advocated by Senators Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, and Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Representative Fish (Republican), of New York. Representative Barton (Republican), of New York, declared that the agency "has ben one of the deterrent factors in keeping money idle and thus promoting unemployment."

The demand for an inquiry was the result of a letter written by the Investment Bankers Association to Chairman Jerome Frank of the SEC. The association practically demanded that the SEC ask Congress to review and amend the laws it is administering in such a way as to remove business deterrents "unnecessary for the protection of investors."

In reply, the SEC said it had become increasingly clear that the association's interest "is not in investors and consumers, not in the capital markets, but in regaining by any subterfuge its outlawed privilege of operating the financial markets without responsibility to anybody but its own little group."

The association, through its letter, the commission declared, made an assault "on all the statutes of the past seven years protecting investors and consumers." (The reference was to consumers of power.) The association is composed of large investment bankers, the SEC said, since "small dealers are excluded by the $25,000 capital requirements for membership."

Recalling that the association had such an assumption before it or the courts.

charged it with exceeding its statutory authority with regard to its "arms' length" bargaining rule, the commission declared adequate opportunity was provided for testing.

The association's letter was in reply to a letter by the SEC in which is asked for suggestions as to what constituted "arms' length" bargaining. The object of the request was to obtain suggestions with a view to revamping its "arms' length" bargaining rule, which it considers ineffective and inadequate.

You've often heard "it pays to buy direct from the maker". This proves it! When, or where, have you seen Mac Kenzie Worsteds, Triple-Woven Twists, Donegal Tweeds, at $25, with 2 trousers? Notice we're not quoting comparative prices. They might seem exaggerated. The 833 canny buyers who snatch up these grand suits will know they're bargains the minute they lay hands on them! ★ Here's the story. Last week we swept through our factory stockrooms like a bull through a china shop. Dozens of new lots —a score of expensive fabrics—fell in the path. The express company delivered them yesterday. They go on sale today! ★ For a carefully tailored fit, get here early. But if you can't make it until Saturday, we'll put on extra steam to have your suit ready for Easter Sunday.

Byrd Urges Safe Balance In Treasury

Economy Issue Test Approaches on Increase In Farm Measure

By the Associated Press

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, cautioned the Senate against greatly increased appropriations yesterday, lest the Treasury's supply of cash be reduced to an imprudent level, or it become necessary to increase the legal limit on the national debt.

He spoke as the Senate slowly approached the session's first important test on the economy issue, with a bill pending to appropriate $922,864,668 for the Agriculture Department and farm benefit payments. The amount was more than $200,000,000 greater than the sum voted by the House and President Roosevelt's budget estimates.

Late in the afternoon the chamber recessed without reaching a vote on the measure.

Administration leaders, including Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, and Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, had contended that the increase could be safely taken from the $1,600,000,000 of cash now in the Treasury's working balance. Byrd called their attention to other factors involved.

Adequate Balance Urged

He said that to avoid an increase in the debt limit, the budget submitted in January by President Roosevelt involved reducing that balance to $500,000,000 as part of the Government's regular fiscal plans for the year beginning next July. And he taxed Barkley and Byrnes with statements made in the debate that a balance of at least $1,000,000,000 should be maintained at all times, for safety's sake.

"I simply rise, Mr. President," Byrd said, "to make clear in the record that under the budget as now presented to Congress, the working balance will be reduced to an amount as low as this Government could safely operate on.

"As the Senator from Kentucky, Mr. Barkley, said yesterday, an adequate balance should at all times be maintained in the Treasury of the Government so as to meet all obligations coming due, and any further reduction in this working balance would not be in conformance with prudent fiscal operations.

Shouldn't Use Working Balance

"We should, therefore, not expect to use any part of the working balance left on July 1, 1941, of approximately $500,000,000 to pay any part of increased or new appropriations to be made by Congress."

Byrd also said the President's budget made the $500,000,000 balance dependent upon the recovery of $700,000,000 from Government corporations. He had made frequent requests for information as to just where this money was coming from, he said, but had received no data from the budget bureau.

Sales Tax Plan Gains Support

the lowering of the personal income tax base from $10,000 to $2,000, later changed in conference to $2,500.

Today's vote will depend upon the attendance, it appeared yesterday, as it was uncertain whether proxies will be acceptable. Randolph said that the decision on proxies will be up to the committee, but he pointed out that one member may block acceptance by an objection.

Sandager to Be Absent

Besides Bates, Representative Harry Sandager (Republican), of Rhode Island, will be absent.

Only four members of the District Committee have announced their opposition to the sales tax although several additional votes may swing against the bill in the executive session.

The known "no" votes are Representative Dirksen, Bates (whose vote may not be counted), William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and Thomas D'Alesandro, jr., (Democrat), of Maryland.

Last year the odds in the District Committe were against the sales tax, and the committee refused to report the tax bill sponsored by Nichols until it had been eliminated.

Nichols introduced the revised sales-income tax bill in the House yesterday after polling his subcommittee. The principal changes were to provide a sales tax base of 5 cents and authorize the issuance of tokens of 1 and 5 mills denomination.

The base of the income levy on unearned income was raised from $500 to $1,000, and Nichols said it may be increased today.

Teen-Age Cripples to See First Movies in Their Lives

Shut-ins to Attend 'Pinocchio' Showing On Free Tickets

Movies, which today are as much a part of a child's routine as school, ice cream and puppy love, will be experienced for the first time tomorrow by dozens of boys and girls, though several are in their teens.

The occasion will be the special Washington premiere of "Pinocchio," which is to be shown at RKO Keith's Theater at 9 a. m. tomorrow exclusively for the Capital's crippled and physically handicapped children.

Martha Geesting, honorary chairman of the Keith's-Post party, has never seen a talking motion picture. She is 22.

"The last movie I ever saw," she said yesterday, "was a silent that had Jackie Coogan in it. He was just a little boy and all I remember of the film is that it showed him on a boat."

Martha reckoned that was about 14 years ago, not long before the cave-in accident which crippled her for life. She has been a patient in Emergency Hospital for nearly two years, her legs amputated at the hips.

One of the children who will attend the preview is a 17-year-old boy who has never seen a motion picture, silent or talkie. Some of the youngsters who will be guests at the first Washington showing of Walt Disney's "Pinocchio" have seen home movies but have never been in a theater.

Distribution of tickets for the party was completed yesterday but if any white crippled child has been overlooked he or she will be taken care of at the Keith's box office between 8 and 9 a. m. tomorrow. Youngsters afflicted with diabetes, heart disease, poor hearing and other chronic illness as, well as the weak of limb, will be welcomed at the performance.

Tickets are being distributed by WPA visiting teachers who instruct shut-ins, Health Department nurses, the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, Health Security Administration, Washington Heart Association, Council of Social Agencies, and the following hospitals: Gallinger, Children's, Providence, Emergency and Episcopal.

Pupils of the Langdon School for crippled children will attend the party in a body. Physically handicapped boys and girls who are able to attend regular schools will be excused from their morning classes on presentation of notes from their parents. The latter groups of children, by submitting these notes or notes from their teachers, may obtain their tickets at the theater when they arrive.

Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO Keith's, yesterday announced that Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter and Police Chief Ernest W. Brown have assigned special details to give every possible aid to the hundreds of children attending the show.

Letts Says Man Faces 2d Action In Child's Care

Fathers accused of failing to support their children must reckon with both criminal punishment and civil court discipline, Justice F. Dickinson Letts ruled in the District Court yesterday.

Justice Letts denied the petition of John R. Evans, 42, Works Progress Administration worker, for a writ of prohibition to prevent Juvenile Court Judge Fay L. Bentley from taking action against him.

Evans showed that his wife divorced him May 20, 1937, and that the District Court then ordered him to pay $10 a week to support his children. Should he violate this order he could be jailed for contempt of court.

Some time after the divorce, Evans showed he was tried in the Juvenile Court for failing to support one of the children and sentenced to serve a year in the workhouse. Judge Bentley probated this sentence on condition that Evans pay $5 a week for this child.

Evans' attorney, Frederick R. Wilson, contended that he was oppressed by being subject to both orders at one time, and that the Juvenile Court had no jurisdiction.

was following Hoffman's wishes. However, he said if he had been mistaken, he would be glad to support the move for reconsideration of the vote which Hoffman is understood to be planning when he returns to Washington today.

Smith added that, even if Hoffman does vote in favor of the proposal, it still will be defeated if the full membership of the 21-man committee is present at today's meeting.

Of the eight members of the Labor Committee who supported the Ramspeck proposal, four were Democrats and four Republicans. The four members who did not take part in the balloting were all Democrats.

New Easter Motto: 'Don't Write—Lay an Egg!'

A strictly fresh way to make a hard-boiled egg say "Happy Easter" has been discovered by whimsical scientists, it was learned yesterday. Keynote of their new communications wrinkle is "don't write—lay an egg."

The trick, and they've learned how to do it, is to fool the unsuspecting hen into thinking that a billet doux or stray bit of chatter is really the yolk of an egg. Arrange that, and the hen will do the rest of the work on her own, sending along the message wrapped in an egg shell ready for delivery.

After that it's the easiest thing in the world to win friends and spoil their breakfasts.

The stunt was described yesterday by H. L. Shrader, poultry expert in the Department of Agriculture, who said that it's well known among other poultry men. They have presented the trick eggs to after-dinner speakers once or twice, as a subtle variation of the older game of tossing uncooked eggs.

While the method is known, it has been practiced by only a few scientists, said Shrader. Research men at the University of Kansas learned the new game in the course of serious studies on the development of eggs.

With the right anesthetic, scientists found it was only a matter of timing and placing. They placed their message in a yolk-shaped capsule, and through a simple operation exchanged the message for an egg yolk. After building the egg with white and shell.

For serving, the approved system is to boil the egg hard, and then see what happens.

So far there is no thought of putting the new eggs into competition with greeting cards.

There is, however, the idea that the method could have practical value in war time, in sending secret messages.

As for the more normal Easter eggs, Agriculture officials said yesterday there will be plenty, both in Washington and throughout the country. During February 327,000,000 chickens produced 2,942,000,000 eggs, a slight decrease from the same period last year, but not enough to spoil an Easter party.

Everett Notes D. C. Progress In Health Drive

Campaign to Control Venereal Diseases Reviewed for Forum

Through a broader public understanding of the problem, and a general breakdown of past "hush-hush" tactics, Washington is making rapid progress in stamping out venereal diseases, said Ray Everett, director of the Social Hygiene Society yesterday.

He spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Federal Community Chest Forum in Childs Restaurant. The District public health clinic, under the guiding hand of Health Officer Ruhland, now compares favorably, he said, with any institution of its kind in the country.

But despite continued progress in controlling venereal diseases, Washington still suffers from lack of adequate funds to carry on its program, Everett told the meeting. Appropriations from Congress, he said, fall far short of meeting needs.

Physicians Cooperate

He lauded physicians for their change of attitude in accepting venereal disease cases for treatment.

"There was a time not so long ago," said Everett, "when doctors wouldn't touch a case of syphilis. But now, they are working together in a spirit of cooperation and have contributed much to the fight."

Everett said he hoped the time would come when the subject would be frankly discussed in public school courses.

His talk was followed by election of new forum officers. Col. Robert H. Fletcher, United States Army (retired) was named president and James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, vice president. Col. Fletcher succeeded Frank A. Birgfield, chief clerk of the Treasury Department, who was appointed a member of the executive committee.

Executive Committee Chosen

Mrs. Jewell W. Swofford, Employes' Compensation Commission, was elected second vice president.

Members of the executive committee in addition to Birgfeld are Roger W. Jones, Central Statistical Board; O. A. Keen, Post Office Department; John L. McGrew, Bureau of Internal Revenue, and Oliver C. Short, Commerce Department.

Committee chairmen were named as follows:

Winston B. Stephens, Civil Service Commission, program committee; William C. Bowen, Railroad Retirement Board, agency board membership committee; John E. Upp, Veterans' Administration, agency tour committee; Serge Benson, Tariff Commission, committee on family service and child welfare agencies; Paul L. Rapp, Farm Credit Administration, committee on character building agencies, and F. O. Billings, Department of Agriculture, committee on health protection.

Miss Terrett Urges More Foster Homes

Legislation to regulate the placeme. and adoption of children in the District must be backed by more facilities for foster home care, Miss Mildred Terrett, executive of the Children's Protective Association, reiterated in a talk made public yesterday.

"Consider a girl-mother with an illegitimate baby still in the hospital," she said. "She is frightened, is probably afraid to go to her own home, and knows of no place where she and her baby can go. She is therefore inclined to give up her baby at a time when she is not in condition to make this decision."

Miss Terrett spoke before the Community Chest Speaker's Bureau Monday night at the E street Y. W. C. A.

Unless some noncommercial social agencies can say to the girl, "We can provide a temporary foster home for your baby until you have time to think it out and make plans for the future," Miss Terrett said, such agencies cannot replace the services of commercial agencies.

The Children's Protective Association is allowed only $5,135 a year in Chest funds for foster home care, while present needs for foster home care in the District would require at least $17,000, Miss Terrett said.

Barkley Blocks Tobey Resolution

The Tobey resolution barring "Paul Pry" questions from the census to begin April 2 was blocked yesterday in the Senate by Majority Leader Barkley.

In a heated exchange with Barkley, Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, challenged the Democratic chieftain to allow the Senate to vote before the census starts on his resolution.

"No, we won't take up the Senator's resolution," Barkley shouted.

Postoffice Gets $50 Conscience Gift

The Postoffice Department was richer by $50 yesterday because an unidentified person in the Middle West eased his or her conscience by paying a 20-year-old debt for postage.

The money—five well-worn $10 bills wrapped in a picture of the Unknown Soldier's Tomb—was addressed to Postmaster General Farley. Scribbled on a piece of brown wrapping paper was the notation: "Conscious-fund money on postage 1920."

Postal authorities expressed belief the sender was a former postal employe.

Jackson Urges Cooperation Of Fishermen

Commercial, Sport Anglers Are Asked To 'Bury Hatchet'

Commercial fishermen and sport fishermen throughout the country were urged yesterday by Charles E. Jackson, acting commissioner, the United States Bureau of Fisheries, to "bury the hatchet" and cooperate with each other. In this way, he said, they could share the responsibility of conserving a natural resource that belongs to all the people.

Jackson spoke at the second general session of 1,500 conservationists from the United States and Canada who are meeting at the Mayflower Hotel in the Fifth Annual North American Wildlife Conference. Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, who is a member of the Senate Conservation of Wildlife Committee, was chairman of the session.

"Every citizen has an equal right to the use of fish," said Jackson. He condemned the tendency of commercial fishermen and game fishermen to fight each other when, he added, they should be cooperating to solve the problems of American fisheries.

Earlier the conference heard Charles H. Taylor, assistant director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, outline conservation work accomplished by that unit. He said the CCC had developed 44 of the largest game refuges of the Biological Survey, had improved conditions for wildlife in national and State parks, and had completed the Elk River Fish Hatchery near Athens, Ala.; one of the largest in the world.

Taylor asserted that approximately 34,000 men are engaged in the CCC work.

"The CCC'S twin objective," he concluded, "is to make this country a better place to live in from the standpoint of the people with whom we live and the environment in which we live."

The conference spent several hours in discussing the problem of farmer-sportman relationships. The fact was faced that the major part of the game crop was produced by farmers, but that the major part of the game went to city sportsmen. Formation of a farmer-sportsman council with equal representation was suggested.

A technical session held later in the afternoon consisted of ten papers on various wildlife subjects, chiefly pushing the theme that restoration was a problem as much as conservation. One paper suggested that wildlife should be treated on an agricultural basis with the same planning that a farmer expends on crops.

Spring Arrives, but Weather Doesn't Want to Cooperate

Today is the first day of spring. It will be exactly 12 hours long and will be followed by just 12 hours of night. But the Weather Bureau says today will be cloudy and a little colder, followed by light rain at night.

This unspringlike forecast comes after a balmy day of sunshine when the thermometer rose to 60 degrees and never dropped below 42. Yesterday warm breezes blew across the Mall into the open windows of Government offices, and policemen walked their beats with a springier step—and without winter overcoats.

Even Judiciary Square, surrounding the District Court Building, stretched its two blocks and opened its eyes to the realization that spring was in the air, with delightful results. All winter, in Judiciary Square, judges and jurors have been awarding damage judgments, patching up broken contracts, decreeing divorces (with and without alimony) and generally determining just what crimes have been committed, and by whom. The air has been grim and earnest. But yesterday—

A tall and venerable justice was distinctly heard humming as he marched down the corridors on his way to court, with his messenger going dutifully before him, his marshal at his right hand and his clerk at his left.

Romance took over the inside, too. Miss Maude Rinex and Mrs. Sophie Lyman, marriage license clerks, reported a total of 40 applications filed yesterday, a record for this year.

The bright tips of new leaf blades glittered along the branches of the evergreen hedges that border the concrete walks.

Contingents of moppets stuck their toes in the little fountain that gurgles 40 feet southwest of the old cistern between the District Court Building and the United States Court of Appeals.

Late in the afternoon, some larger children—who must live somewhere around Judiciary Square, even if the section does look like it is all business—got out of school and organized an undermanned baseball game.

Romance came to the square along with spring, for a freshly chalked "Joe loves Mary" appeared on the outside of the stone wall of the courthouse, just behind the archives section.

Cromwell Urges Neutrals To Help Allies

Senators Demand Recall of Minister For Anti-Nazi Talk

By the Associated Press

Toronto, March 19.—James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister to Canada, who recently said the Allies were fighting for perpetuation of individual liberty and freedom, today declared it is apparent that the life and liberty of citizens of any neutral democracy "may be dependent upon the outcome of the present war."

The new minister also replied to criticism of his previous declaration by saying it is the duty of a diplomat-citizen to tell his fellow citizens "what he sees" when he sees approaching a force which frankly seeks to destroy institutions and the social and economic order upon which the government of his nation is founded.

"Upon this interpretation of my duties as a diplomat I am content to risk my official head," he said.

Cromwell spoke at a joint meeting of the Canadian Club and the Empire Club.

Cites Czechs, Poles

He asserted that if the Allies win the war, he could see "no threat to the well being, to the peace or to the social and economic order of the neutral democracies, be they large or small.

As to the outlook if Germany triumphed, he asked what kind of rule was being applied in countries which had been incorporated into the Nazi lebensraum (living space).

"Did the Austrians, Czecho-Slovakians or the Poles have a voice in the determination of their present form of government?" he asked.

Cromwell said he did not understand how any intelligent citizen of any neutral democracy could state with conviction that he had no interest in the outcome of the war.

"To me it is only too apparent that the life, the liberty, the livelihood and the very safety of this same neutral citizen may be dependent upon the outcome of the present war. Whether he recognizes the fact or not, his future and the future of his children's children are in all probability now at stake."

Senators Condemn Speech

By International News Service

The speech delivered by Minister Cromwell evoked instant condemnation on Capitol Hill and a demand that the envoy be recalled at once.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, asserted the minister should be recalled from his post.

Though President Roosevelt declined to comment on the matter, Clark and other members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, including Senators Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, showed no hesitancy in expressing themselves.

"Dinners Gone to His Head"

"Minister Cromwell is guilty of an outrageous, disgraceful breach of his office," Clark said. "Those bountiful Canadian dinners have evidently gone to his head."

Nye, a militant isolationist, said:

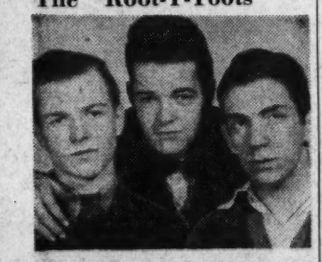
"Minister Cromwell is only echoing a policy his chief has repeatedly resorted to, though at the head of a government striving for neutrality. This is one more example of where we would go and be, if only the public opposition to participation in Europe's war could be overcome. Democracy is no more involved in that war today than is the cause of American woman suffrage."

Senator George:

"I think the minister is unduly excited."

"I doubt very much whether he should have said it," said Pepper, "but I'm glad he did. What everyone knows, even a diplomat might know."

Station PDS Presents The "Root-T-Toots"



Carl Beheney, Allen Gibbens, and David Gould make up the trio known as the "Root-T-Toots." This novelty trio is known in local circles, for their entertainment at parties, lodges, and dances. Two of the boys play the guitar, and the third plays the washboard. This unusual combination will beat out "China Boy" and "Frivolous Sal" on the PDS program this morning over station WMAL.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Auto Trade Rule Study Favored

The Automobile Manufacturers Association last night urged the Federal Trade Commission to carry out further studies of its proposed automobile trade practice rules in order to clarify the regulations.

The request was made in a letter from Pyke Johnson, executive vice president of the A. M. A., to Ewin L. Davis, commission chairman.

Hearings on the proposed rules will open today at 10 a. m. in the commission building, Sixth street and Constitution avenue northwest.

"The automobile manufacturing companies are opposed to instrusion of practices in the marketing of automobiles that are deceptive or oppressive or that tend toward monopoly," wrote Johnson.

Military School Training Held Democracy Aid

Harvard Dean Holmes Stresses Discipline In Conference Talk

The increased importance of military schools in training American youth to uphold the standards of democracy in the face of pressure from the dictatorships was emphasized yesterday by H. W. Holmes, dean of Harvard University's School of Education.

He addressed the second day session of the twenty-seventh annual conference of the Association of Military Colleges and Schools of the United States, meeting at the Washington Hotel.

Dean Holmes declared that the preparation for citizenship was more vital now than ever in history. He encouraged greater enrollment in military schools as a matter of necessity from the standpoint of national defense.

"Democracy is on the spot," he said. "We need disciplinary education to teach our youth the principles that are necessary to preserving our democratic form of government."

In an interview, Col. W. E. Gregory, superintendent of Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind., debunked the popular impression that all military schools indulged in "hazing." Col. Gregory said anyone caught hazing at Culver would be dismissed. He said he believed the trend at military schools in general was to ban hazing in any form.

Col. R. L. Jackson, superintendent of Western Military Academy, Alton, Ill., expressed a similar conviction. "None of our boys would stand for hazing," he said. "Our boys are trained not to take things without a real fight."

Roosevelt Proclaims War on Cancer

President Roosevelt yesterday proclaimed April as cancer control month and urged a "concerted effort" to impress upon the American people "the necessity of a National program for the control of cancer to the end that suffering may be relieved and life preserved."

The Chief Executive invited governors to issue similar proclamations.

His proclamation noted that cancer was second among the causes of death in the United States.

The text of the proclamation follows:

Whereas the President is authorized and requested by public resolution No. 82, Seventy-fifth Congress, approved March 28, 1938 (52 Stat. 148), to issue annually a proclamation setting apart the month of April of each year as cancer control month, and to invite the governors of the several States, Territories, and possessions of the United States to issue proclamations for like purposes: and

Whereas it is also requested in the said public resolution No. 82 that the proclamations issued invite the medical profession, the press, and all agencies and individuals interested in the control of cancer through a National program of education and other cooperative means to unite in dedication to such a purpose and by concerted effort to impress its necessity upon the people of the Nation; and

Whereas by this dedication of the month of April to a voluntary national program for the control of cancer, the people of the entire country will be acquainted with the progress that is being made by the Federal Government through the United States Public Health Service, by certain of the States and by other agencies, as well as by individuals, in the struggle against this dread disease, which is second among the causes of death in the United States:

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do proclaim the month of April, 1940, as cancer control month, and do invite the governors of the several States, Territories and possessions of the United States to issue similar proclamations; and in order that the people throughout the land may have informed knowledge concerning the prevalence of cancer and of the means which can be taken to control it, I also invite the members of the medical profession, individually and through their associations, other scientific groups, all organs of opinion, including the press, the radio, and the motion picture, and all others who have the interest of the public health at heart, to unite during the month of April, 1940, in concerted effort to impress upon the people of the United States the necessity of a national program for the control of cancer to the end that suffering may be relieved and life preserved.

Desire for Oil May Draw Italy to Russia

Solution of Balkan Problems May Lead To Understanding, Also

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 19.—Russian oil was mentioned tonight as an immediate reason for Russia and Italy to come together in a better understanding as a result of Monday's Brenner Pass conference between Fuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

The subject of oil was brought up as German discussed creation of "a new European order" through extension of the Rome-Berlin Axis to Moscow.

Russia always has had oil that Italy would like, but informed quarters said Italy in the past never had been interested in contracting for it when the only feasible means of transport was through the Black Sea and the easily closed Dardanelles.

Also Italy regarded the Soviet Union as an unpromising trade partner and an even worse political associate.

But Germany's new friendship with Russia, elimination of Poland as a buffer state, and the development of land transportation facilities have made Russian oil more accessible to Italy. German economic experts say there is, or soon will be, a secure land route for the transportation to Italy.

In addition, if a more cooperative attitude toward Russia would aid in solving Balkan problems where Mussolini wants peace, informed Berlin circles said some sort of an understanding would become more attractive to Italy.

Official quarters refrained from reflecting hope that Moscow might drop its old hostility to the Axis. All that authorized sources would say was that Russia must have a voice in the new European orientation which Hitler and Mussolini have in mind.

Their Brenner Pass meeting was stressed as a demonstration of the firmness of the Axis, and irritation was expressed over interpretations voiced in England and France that it was the careful beginning of a "German peace offensive" staged for the benefit of Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's emissary.

The official erman news agency, DNB, sharply denounced suggestions that Hitler had made a peace gesture.

"Germany has nothing to say on the subject of peace" after the Feuhrer's Reichstag speech October 6, in which he suggested international mediation but insisted Germany would yield none of Austria, Poland or Czecho-Slovakia, the agency declared.

"The solution now is a battle to victory."

Welles Denies Making Any Peace Overtures

By Richard Massock
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, March 19.—Sumner Welles finished tonight his swift circuit of war-lashed Europe with the firm declaration that he has neither received nor conveyed any peace plan whatsoever during his 24-day tour; yet he was believed to be in possession of an inside account of what happened in yesterday's meeting of dictators in the Brenner Pass.

Welles, breaking the silence he has maintained throughout the tour which brought him twice to Rome and took him to Berlin, Paris and London, said his task had been solely to gather information as to present conditions in Europe."

Welles Press Statement

His statement to the press, issued shortly before he left Rome for Genoa to sail for home tomorrow, said:

"In order to allay the flood of rumors about my mission, I wish to state categorically that I have not received any peace plan or proposals from any belligerent or from any other government; that I have not conveyed any such proposals to any belligerent, nor to any other government; or am I bringing back to the President any such proposal."

Welles' final fact-finding conversation was with Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano, who is believed to have given President Roosevelt's investigator information about yesterday's "parlor car" meeting between Premier Mussolini and Fuehrer Hitler at Brennero.

Welles declined to disclose how much Ciano had told him, but told correspondents he had talked briefly with Ciano before the luncheon and "considerably afterward."

Check on Alliance Reported

Informed Fascists today indicated Hitler went to Brennero to check up on his alliance with Mussolini and found it still binding.

These quarters squashed talk of a Nazi peace offensive, but refrained from any tangible disclosure of what important decisions regarding a new balance of power might have been settled between the axis allies at Brennero.

Welles boarded his train for Génoa tonight. He expected to embark on the Conte di Savoia for the United States tomorrow morning.

Speculation Dies Down

Speculation on the Hitler-Mussolini meeting—which at first centered on the possible neutralization of the Balkans and a Russo-Italian rapprochement—has simmered down. The absence of any official disclosures and Italian press avoidance of any vital questions which might have arisen caused some diplomats to believe the discussion was concerned with a general survey of war plans and the eventual possibility of peace; Italy's relations with the Western Allies, particularly Britain; and Italy's problems with Germany, largely economic.

The closest to authoritative Italian declarations on the Hitler-Mussolini meeting were made by Virginio Gayda, whose Giornale d'Italia frequently speaks for Mussolini, and Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Il Telegrafo, Ciano's Leghorn newspaper.

Gayda scorned suggestions that Hitler and Mussolini had agreed on a peace oensive, making use of Welles' fact finding tour. He said it was "absurd as well as grotesque to insist upon attributing to Il Duce the permanent role of peace messenger."

In Il Telegrafo, Ansaldo denied that the Brennero meeting meant a change of Italian attitude or that it was "linked with any international mission or any peace plans elaborated by the ministries of the 'two Romes'—Fascist Italy and the Vatican."

President Doubts Peace

White House skepticism of the many European reports of fresh peace maneuvers was frankly expressed yesterday.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference that no one but Hitler and Mussolini knew what took place at their Brenner Pass conference on Monday. Earlier, Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early told reporters that, on the basis of official reports from abroad, peace headlines would appear to be very empty.

The President, commenting on extended news reports of reaction in various European capitals to the supposed peace suggestions, said they all boiled down to the fact that two heads of governments boarded trains and went to the pass, and it snowed, and there the two men sat in a railroad car for two hours and talked.

And that, the President said, is about all that anybody knows here, in London, in Paris or in Rome about the matter. He indicated doubt that anyone in the Vatican had sufficient information to give a reliable version of what transpired at the conference.

He was interested in reports attributing disclosure of the supposed peace program to a Vatican source, and smilingly asked who the reporters supposed it could be. When one suggested Rome newspapers had a tipster in the Vatican, the President suggested it was probably the boy down on his knees in front of St. Peter's, scrubbing the steps.

Meeting reporters yesterday morning, Early said no information had been sent to this Government to support stories that 11 points had been suggested as a basis for peace at the Hitler-Mussolini conference.

Allied, Turkish General Staffs Secretly Discuss Defense Plans

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, March 19.—It was confirmed today by a responsible Turkish source that secret talks between leading members of this country's general staff and Allied army, navy and air officials have been taking place the last few days at Aleppo, Syria.

It is understood that the subject of these conversations is the specific means for quick cooperation by strong forces in case it should be found necessary to take action.

It is believed that the talks grew out of the recent visit to Ankara of Air Marshal Sir William Mitchell and Gen. Jaunneaud—the chiefs of the Levantine air forces of the Allies—but that their scope transcends questions of military aviation and embraces the potential activity of all armed services in this region.

There is no reason to believe any move in this section of the world is imminent. It is thought the idea of the talks is to put the finishing touches on the Allied defensive cooperation with the Turks, in the event of a possible German-Russian aggression, either in the Balkans or the Near and Middle East.

The meeting was in line with the speech of the British undersecretary for foreign affairs, R. A. Butler, in London yesterday, in which he said that Great Britain and France are ready to give Turkey the most complete assistance in case she is attacked and all possible contingencies are being examined.

The Turkish press today, while emphasizing that there is no intention on Turkey's part of attacking Russia, warned the Soviet as well as Germany to keep hands off.

The newspaper Ikdam says Russia alone can break the friendship existing between Moscow and Ankara and then warns that there are two roads open to the Soviet through Turkey—by the Straits and the Caucasus—and that the Allies are in a position to send strong forces to Turkey's aid should it be necessary.

"Turkey is ready to fight to her last soldier and last bullet," it says, adding, "if Germany is striving to bring about a non-aggression pact between Turkey and the Soviet and break up Turkey's alliance with Britain and France, she will not succeed."

2 British Liners Provisioned To Carry Troops

New York, March 19 (AP).—New activity was apparent tonight aboard the British liners Queen Mary and Mauretania in preparation to upanchor and slip away from the safety of New York as troop ships for the empire.

While crew reinforcements from England enjoyed shore leave, the great ships were hurriedly provisioned.

Crew members guessed the $25,000,000 Queen and the lesser but newer Mauretania, would go first to Halifax for arming.

They believed both then would head for Australia, the Mauretania probably by way of the Panama Canal and the Queen, because her 80,000 tons are too much for the canal, more circuitously.

Roosevelt Denies Sales Yield Secrets

vestigation and said he would demand that it be held in the open.

The President's comment on foreign plane sales came at his press conference. He declared it was difficult to lay down a hard and fast rule because each case should be considered on its merits.

Speaking as commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy, he said last year it became clear that one of the essentials of national defense was productive capacity for building airplanes.

Production Trebled

The matter was even more serious than the shortage of actual planes and Army and Navy orders would help only slightly, he said. By selling to belligerents and neutrals, however, he said, plane building capacity and engine production capacity, formerly the bottle-neck in aircraft production, have been trebled.

Taking up the question of the release of Curtis P-40 pursuit plane, which brought about the Congressional investigation, Mr. Roosevelt said there was no secret about it. Our military secrets, are three or four devices which we think other nations do not have, he said, and these will be kept secret.

Plane designs are not secret, he continued, because anyone can get pictures of them and build them. An aviation magazine, the President stated, has published complete plans of one of our latest types.

Conflict Appears to Some

To some, the President's discussion appeared to conflict in some phases with official Army-Navy procedure in releasing planes for sale abroad. Latest revised regulations of the two departments bar release of new models until at least one plane of a production order has been delivered.

They are very careful as to release of performance figures and censor photographs to prevent proportions and details from being revealed. Special permission is required for the employment of aliens in aircraft factories with military orders.

Reports of differences between Army and Navy officials and Secretary Morgenthau, who heads an interdepartmental committee coordinating foreign and American Government plane orders, are said to have stimulated the sponsors of the Congressional inquiry.

NEW LIFE
How would plain oil-changing perk up your engine like this change to OIL-PLATING?
The new "cushion" or oil-film your engine gets from any good oil-change can perk it up some. But fresh clean oil-film is only your first gain from changing to Conoco Germ Processed oil. For this patented oil also brings your engine the extra change to OIL-PLATING.
No extra time required. No extra high price. Yet a costly extra factor—born in the laboratory—makes Germ Processed oil give your engine OIL-PLATING . . . lubrication that's like PLATING in its ability to connect direct to inner engine surfaces. Between these lastingly OIL-PLATED surfaces the familiar liquid film now slides . . . oil-film sliding on OIL-PLATING! . . . narrowing the chances of wear.
OIL-PLATING further resembles other fine PLATING in not draining down from where it's PLATED. That's quite the opposite of plain oil-film, for OIL-PLATING stays up to its topmost point, though your car's parked all day. Then OIL-PLATING holds itself ready to lubricate before any oil can circulate, telling you that even the very first piston stroke is eased by OIL-PLATING—easing out the worst old wear of "dry starting." Lots of other wear too, is spared your OIL-PLATED engine, helping to keep it in trim—and that trims down your oil consumption. Change today to Germ Processed oil, at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station.

120 Merchant Marine Cadets Here on Cruise

Would-Be Captains Taking 3-Year Course In California Academy

In the old days, Americans who wanted to be merchant marine officers learned by trial and error "before the mast."

Visiting Washington today are 120 young men who are learning the new way—by taking a three-year course in one of the country's four state nautical schools. They are cadets on the training ship, California State, which put into the Navy Yard yesterday on a 104-day cruise.

In the 10-year history of the California Maritime Academy, virtually all of the graduates have obtained berths as deck or engineering officers. Several West Coast shipping companies take a regular number of graduates every year.

The California State, is an old freighter built for the Shipping Board back in 1919, and loaned by the Navy to California in 1931. Her hull is painted white, and she is one of the prettiest craft seen at the Navy Yard since the days of the residential yacht Mayflower.

For eight months of the year the California State is moored at the Maritime Academy base in San Francisco Bay. There are provided class rooms, shops, laboratories and recreation facilities.

In January of every year, the training ship starts out on a four-month cruise, with the dual purpose of acquainting the cadets with foreign ports and oceans and giving them skill in the navigation and operation of a modern steam vessel under all conditions.

The staff of officers commissioned to instruct the cadets is headed by Capt. N. E. Nichols, U. S. N. (retired).

They Didn't Get Shore Leave, but Will Today

Daladier with a minority of the deputies present voting in his favor.

Even the motion finally adopted implied criticism of the government's campaign by calling for immediate changes and greater effort.

The motion of confidence said "the chamber expresses to the Finnish nation and army the homage of its admiration for their magnificent courage.

"It expresses confidence in the government to take immediately and in all domains measures indispensable to bring France's force to a maximum and to carry the war to victory in close accord with our Allies, the war which has been imposed on us and in which we are defending, with the security of the country, our liberties and those of the world."

All Back Finn Portion

The Finnish section of the resolution was adopted by a unanimous show of hands, the second part by a vote of 239 to 1, and then the motion as a whole by another show of hands.

The single vote openly against the government was cast by Maurice Delauney, independent. The socialists group was chief among those abstaining.

The Senate, which also sat during the day, heard Senator Charles Reibel express "surprise" that the government had thought of sending Allied troops to fight for Finland against Russia "at a time when diplomatic relations still existed" between Paris and Moscow and when elsewhere "an insufficient struggle was being waged against the Hitler and Communist menace."

Interior Minister Albert Sarraut replied that the police had made 11,000 raids to prevent reconstitution of the dissolved Communist party in France. He added that the municipal services had been purified" of Communists and that the government remains "vigilant."

Cabinet changes were expected to follow the secret chamber debate, with Daladier perhaps releasing the national defense or war portfolio to Gen. Gamelin, the Allied commander in chief.

Dahl Is Jailed On Check Charge

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? White bread, meat, potatoes? It's little wonder you're constipated. You probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It's a kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a movement. If this is your trouble, may we suggest a crunchy toasted cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—for breakfast. All-Bran is a natural food, not a medicine—but it's particularly rich in "bulk." Being so, it can help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Eat All-Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Halifax, the foreign secretary, said he could not disagree as to the "very legitimate consequences" of the Scapa Flow attack.

Morning newspapers, under huge headlines, proudly displayed the story as "R. A. F.'s Biggest Bomb Raid," or "Swift Vengeance for Scapa Raid."

The first eyewitness account came from a restaurant keeper who told the Copenhagen newspaper Politiken:

"I saw two foreign planes come diving down through the clouds with crazy speed in the direction of Sylt. They dropped eight bombs. I saw great pillars of fire.

"Later I heard an explosion from a single bomb and a few seconds afterwards an explosion came which changed the sky over Sylt into a sea of fire. There was one explosion after another.

"A bomb undoubtedly hit an ammunition depot.

"All the antiaircraft of Sylt then opened up; tracer bullets streaked across the heavens in all directions, in a dazzling array of colors.

"A wall of fire sprang up along the whole of the long island.

"Shortly after this a plane came flying low over our heads on Romoe Island. It turned westward and flew rather uncertainly as if it might have been hit."

Hospital Head to Talk

McNutt Flays Naziism in Talk

New York, March 19 (INS).—Monopoly of controls in business and finance could force this nation to submit to a dictator, Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, warned today in attacking Naziism as a "ghastly disease" before the Women's Jewish Congress.

"Naziism is caused originally by monopoly," he said, "by centralization in private business which breaks down into dictatorship after some disaster such as defeat in war or widespread depression."

"Our danger," he continued, "is that we may continue along the road of permitting the centralization of controls in business and finance until the nation is driven by poverty and despair to accept a dictator of its own. It could happen here."

'The Grapes of Wrath' Becomes a Notable Film

Steinbeck Story Stirringly Adapted to Screen; Two New Civic Productions Open Monday; More of Miss George and 'Lady in Waiting'

By Richard L. Coe,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

MAN'S INHUMANITY TO MAN has never been so bitterly, so cruelly, so realistically revealed on the screen as it is in the film version of John Steinbeck's searing story, "The Grapes of Wrath," previewed yesterday afternoon by the drama desks.

The book reaches its new medium through a treatment of rare understanding. Nunnally Johnson's script, John Ford's direction and the playing of a cast headed by Henry Fonda and Jane Darwell have transcribed this indictment of man's greed and selfishness so faithfully, that one may say truthfully that the screen has never before seen anything like it.

Because it dares to raise a question courageously and tellingly, "The Grapes of Wrath" is indeed a significant film. It places the films in a position to which many of its leaders are violently opposed; in doing so, however, it demonstrates the incalculable potentialities of the films in educating and molding public opinion.

Critics of the novel have raised the objection that Steinbeck's work deals sentimentally under a cloak of realism with a small segment of people, people whose case is peculiar to a minute part of the whole. But Steinbeck's characters live and that makes all the difference. Who could be so real as tough and flabby Ma Joad, so eloquently played by Jane Darwell, how could one sympathize with anyone more than with Tom Joad, puzzled and trying as hard as Hamlet to find a way out of his circumstance? Henry Fonda is very nearly a natural for this young Joad and John Carradine's bewildered preacher who also fled the dustbowl for a grim California is the best work this reliable actor has ever done. Charley Grapewin's threatening grandpa is as memorable as he was in the book.

The production, all grays and blacks it seems, is so suitably realized that its full impact leaves one breathless from its force. From the first shot of Tom Joad hiking from four years in the pen along the dusty road home to the final view of the family, which even now, must be completing its yet unfinished story somewhere in the California orchards, "The Grapes of Wrath" would seem to be a forerunner in a new application of film-making.

Our mind, being notoriously weak and happy only in the more fanciful regions of thought, did us a good turn after this emotional punch of the Steinbeck Joads, who don't lack a rare humor themselves, by the way. But, as we began to say, we weren't able to crack a smile after "The Grapes of Wrath" until we remembered that during the first week of the engagement in New York the consumption of champagne in bistros near the theater more than doubled. Seems people got so upset after leaving the Joads that only a champagne cocktail would fit them again for their wicked ways. Commercial Note: What's the nearest place to the Palace Theater for a champagne cocktail?

With news of the "Saint Joan" future still no news at all, the Civic Theater is beating drums for its coming productions, opening a week's run next Monday evening at the Wardman Park. Archibald MacLeish's "The Fall of the City" and Stephen Vincent Benet's "The Devil and Daniel Webster" form the generous, contrasting, bill. "The Fall of the City" was originally written for radio production, while the Benet play is based on those magazine stories of gusty New Hampshire humor that have become so widely read. A resident of Georgetown since he succeeded Herbert Putnam as Librarian of Congress, Mr. MacLeish has not let his reputation as a poet stand still. His "Union Pacific," written for the Ballets Russes has given rise to rumors that other theatrical efforts are on the way.

One of those things we wanted to discuss in yesterday morning's review of "Lady in Waiting" at the National was that bathroom scene. It is an elegant piece of playing, both by star Gladys George and by Anita Bolster as her very-sot-in-her-ways maid. It's a terrific bathroom, cluttered with all manner of things from "The Stag at Eve" to a Grandfather's clock. Miss George is singing the French National anthem in the bath. On the other side of the door creditors are threatening to clean out even the bathroom. Miss George rises gracefully from the tub, donning the while a foamy thingumajig and ultimately sitting on a stool doing herself up. It is the scene which began Margery Sharp's play when it was only a novel called "The Nutmeg Tree," but in its new form it is preceded by a slice of exposition. Some night this week we are going to catch the bright, cheerful "Lady in Waiting" once again and bring you more news about the newest hit's progress.

PERSONAL ASIDE TO N. B. B. Wherever you are, do as the doctor says and don't try to interview every nurse that comes along. Remember, every pretty girl's not in pictures. And those nurses can get pretty tough sometimes. It might be a good idea to let some of your readers know just which hospital is encasing your weary frame. I can't answer two phones and write a column, too.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 19.

"Brother Orchid" doesn't sound like a gangster story, but it is! When I visited the set, there, strutting about in his best Little Caesar manner, was Dr. Ehrlich. When the scene was over, Eddie Robinson, dressed in the vividly colored dressing gown of John Sano, came over and said: "Well, I'm back in the rackets again, but not for long. I'm aching for another of those human characters. Despite the fact that carrying around Ehrlich's beard was one of the toughest jobs I ever did. But playing Ehrlich was the easiest acting job I ever tackled. Why? Because he was so simple, a great figure struggling with terrific problems. These gangsters are twice as hard to do—they're shallow, nothing to them. You work hard creating something out of nothing."

Eddie continued: "Some day I hope a writer will do a yarn to end all gangster stories. It will follow the same old pattern. He'll be a big shot who finally meets his Waterloo. Then," said the best screen gangster of them all, "the final scene will show a closeup—and his burial would be in a dog's cemetery."

Eddie wants to do Benjamin Franklin. "Because he believed, practiced and impressed the world with all the tenets of our American democracy. In the story of Franklin we could give the public not only a bird's-eye view of the birth of the greatest Nation on earth—but also very subtly comment on the principles which still hold for this country's good, but which have been lost sight of by many forces." With several of our top character actors yearning to do Franklin—looks as though we can expect to see "Poor Richard" any day now.

Eddie's remarks about the simple things being great reminded me of a story Mark Twain's daughter (now Mrs. Ossip Gabrilowitsch) told me. Seems Twain was approached by a St. Louis clubwoman who wanted him to speak before her group—45 minutes would be fine. Mark wasn't sure if he could make it, so she assured him five minutes would be ample! "No, madam, I could never do that—I was just trying to figure transportation time. I could talk 45 minutes—but five! Impossible—that would take weeks to prepare."

Darryl Zanuck bought 30 pages out of Cameron Rogers' book about world-famous women, which included Lola Montez, and our female bandit named Belle Starr. Zanuck got very much excited about Belle's story. Half a dozen different writers worked on it, including Nunnally Johnson. But so far, they haven't been able to get a picture out of it.

While Searching for 'The Blue Bird'

A DOG, A CAT, AND TWO CHILDREN

Eddie Collins, Gale Sondergaard, Johnny Russell and Shirley Temple as Tylo, Tylette, Tyltyl and Mytyl in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "The Blue Bird," in which the children's household pets come to life to follow the hunt for that elusive quality of "The Blue Bird." Adapted from the well-loved fantasy by Maurice Maeterlinck and with the dream sequence filmed in Technicolor, the picture will be the Easter week attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater opening Friday morning

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 19.

SINCLAIR LEWIS: Your old sparring-mate, Theodore Dreiser, will be shocked when he learns of this story: Before John Steinbeck left California for his Mexican cruise, he dined at the Hotel Roosevelt, in Hollywood. At another table he saw Dreiser, whom he never had met but always admired . . . Steinbeck never writes fan-leters, but he sent a note to Dreiser, asking him to come over for a drink . . . Steinbeck's scrawl makes his signature read like "Stembuck." . . . Dreiser joined his table, and for 20 minutes talked rather coldly about unimportant matters, without mentioning Steinbeck or any of his writings. . . . After Dreiser left, Steinbeck felt hurt, and vowed never again to write a fan-note. . . . Then he returned to his home at Los Gatos, where he found a letter from Dreiser, begging to be allowed to come to Los Gatos and meet John Steinbeck.

TOM DEWEY: At the Republican Convention, the New York County delegation will not vote solidly for you. There'll be a dissent . . . Ernest Hemingway: Gustav Regler, the German anti-Fascist writer for whose new book you're writing a preface, finally has been released from a French concentration camp. His friends worked for his release, through the French Embassy in Washington . . . Police Commissioner Valentine: A former cop named O'Brien last week served a summons and complaint on United States Attorney Cahell, in which he has mentioned at least 20 prominent jurists and officials, in connection with patents now owned by the Edison Co.

HERBERT HOOVER: Bernt Balchen, who has been buying planes for Finland, now doesn't know what to do with all the ships he's purchased . . . Saturday night he brought to the Kit Kat Klub Capt. Knud Lubye, managing director of the Danish Air Lines, and Per Norlin, general manager of the Swedish Air Traffic Co. They posed for photographers, with their hands clasped together . . . "If all Scandinavia had been as united as this," Balchen told the duo, "we'd have licked Russia."

ELMER RICE: Luther Adler, now appearing in your show, "Two on an Island," cleaned out his belongings at The Group Theater last week. Luther and his wife, Sylvia Sidney, will try to follow the Lunt-Fontanne way—appearing in plays together. . . . William Saroyan: Walter Huston probably will appear in your new show. . . . George Lowther: Walter O'Keefe now is writing Calypso songs for American consumption. His first one is about your wooing of Miss Herrick. . . . Princess Ketto Mikeladze: Your daughter, Sigrid Lassen, will sing at El Morocco, starting March 26.

ROBERT TAYLOR: Peggy Hopkins Joyce has selected the Ten Most Glamorous Men. Not one of her former husbands received a rating . . . Her list includes Cole Porter, Walter P. Chrysler, James J. Walker, Ferdinand Pecora, J. Edgar Hoover, Clark Gable, Anthony Eden, Howard Hughes, Duke of Windsor and Harold Ross . . . One of those listed once presented her with a huge chunk of stock. Another, Judge Pecora, had refused to be introduced to her, in 1934, when she came to Washington to see his Wall Street investigation.

MONTY WOOLLEY: Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt will name one of his new horses "Atwater-9." It was suggested by Moss Hart, for Edith Atwater, who portrays your secretary in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." . . . Edna St. Vincent Millay: Some of America's best known writers whose early efforts appear with yours and Benchley's and Benet's, in St. Nicholas Magazine—have promised to contribute to that revived publication, now that Mrs. J. David Stern has purchased it. . . . Dorothy Canfield Fisher: Norman Rockwell, who is contributing a poster for the Children's Crusade for Children, will present the original to President Roosevelt, for his archives at Hyde Park, as an example of what American children were thinking and doing in 1940.

ANN SHERIDAN: This week a committee of Harvard almuni, arranging the Hasty Pudding Show, will select a Girl With More Oomph Than Ann Sheridan. . . . Mayor LaGuardia: The film rights to Lowell Limpus' "Twentieth Century Warfare" were purchased on Saturday, by David G. Berger. He already has the backing for a documentary film to be made immediately, in New York City. . . . J. Edgar Hoover: A member of the White House circle was very much interested in Boake Carter's defense of your activities. "Hoover's position is so strong," he asured, "that he even can withstand Boake Carter's support."

General Genius

Peter Lorre, the Monsieur Pig in "Strange Cargo," organized a theater of his own, wrote his own plays, directed and played in them and even created his own scenery.

One-Act Play Tournament Opens Tuesday

The 1940 D. C. One-act Play Tournament, sponsored by the Community Center and Playgrounds Department, will open Tuesday night of the coming week, March 26, at Roosevelt High School Auditorium, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest, with three additional plays on each evening.

The plays to be given on the first night are: "Only the Birds," by Esther Sagalyn, presented by the Census Bureau Dramatic Club; "The Sister Who Walked in Silence," By Philip Johnson, presented by the Interior Players, and "The Monsignor's Hour," by Emmet Lavery, presented by the Sacred Heart Dramatic Club.

On Thursday night, March 28, the plays to be given are: "Ile," by Eugene O'Neill, presented by the FBI Recreation Association Theater Group; "Destiny," by Eugene Lerner, presented by the Cue and Curtain Club, and "Valse Bluette," by Ed Rowan, presented by the Falls Church Community Theater.

Saturday night's (March 30) plays will be "Headlines From Paradise," by Walter Grotyohann, presented by the Pepconians; "The World Ag'in Her," by Bruce L. Miller, presented by the Patent Office Players, and "Last Refuge," by Noel Houston, presented by the Troupers of East Washington Community Center.

Additional plays will be offered on April 2 and on April 4, and the finals will be staged Tuesday, April 9, also at Roosevelt Auditorium.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 19 (DNS).—Well, Frank Capra has made his selection for the heroine in "The Life of John Doe," and a hundred hopefuls will now have to stop wishing. Barbara Stanwyck carries off the plum of the year and Frank's first for Warners is beginning to be well set, as far as cast is concerned, for Samuel Goldwyn finally loaned Gary Cooper for the Capra picture which we announced so long ago after talking with Frank.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Speaking of Frank Capra, one of our well-known directors was sitting in a local cafe the other night when Capra walked in. "There," said the other director pointing to Capra, "goes the ten best directors in Hollywood." That's the way he's regarded, so you can see this is really a break for both Barbara and Gary. I happen to know Barbara turned down pictures galore until this one came along. The character she plays is called "Miss Average Woman."

Take it from me that the most ridiculous rumor in Hollywood is the gossip that Hedy Lamarr and Gene Markey are planning a divorce. I don't know any two people who are more in love or happier. Hedy even offered to give up her screen career to look after Gene and the recently adopted baby. The thing that is so cruel about this gossip is that an innocent baby could easily suffer from all this idle chatter. The society from which Hedy and Gene took little James is very particular about the marital security of the parents. A year must elapse before the actual adoption, and if the society feels there is anything wrong in the Markey home they can refuse the final paper.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Fran English of George White's Scandals and Ben Blue will not marry. They have said adieu to romance at the request of her mother; Binnie Barnes announced in Reno she would return there and marry Frankovitch; Margot Stevenson and Garson Kanin night clubbing; Frances Farmer and Norman Burnside spent Sunday gazing at the sea waves at Laguna Beach; stopped in at the Casey Robinsons for cocktails Sunday just in time to see Sally Eilers, Gracie Allen and George Burns do a Hawaiian dance. We all went on to the Ruth Taylor-Paul Zuckerman tenth anniversary party at the Beverly Hills terrace room. The cutest decorations of tin figures flanked by tons of Easter lilies and white stock. Talked with Lupe Velez, who has writen a sequel to "Mexican Spitfire."

The Crosby twins in their black fox uniforms were the center of attraction when they walked into the rodeo at the Coliseum Sunday with Mrs. Edmund Lowe; no one in town does the Irish jig the way Eloise and Pat O'Brien dance it. They celebrated St. Patrick's Saturday night at a birthday party dancing, and again Sunday night at the Grace Hayes lodge.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Edison to See War Games In Mid-Pacific

Also Will Inspect Naval Bases on Coast And in Hawaii

Secretary Edison announced yesterday he will witness large scale fleet maneuvers scheduled to begin in the mid-Pacific April 1.

The Navy chief will leave here Monday and will embark on the battleship Pennsylvania, flagship of Admiral James O. Richardson, fleet commander-in-chief, at Los Angeles. After inspecting naval activities at San Pedro, Secretary Edison will be at sea for nearly two weeks during the war games.

While with the fleet, he plans to shift from one type of vessel to another in order to observe the practical operation of various types. Putting into Honolulu, Edison will inspect Hawaiian naval defenses and return to Mare Island, Calif., April 19 aboard the cruiser Nashville.

The Secretary will inspect the new naval air base at Alameda, on San Francisco Bay, and the naval base at San Diego, returning here April 28.

Accompanying him on the trip will be his aides, Capt. M. L. Dayo and Lieut. R. H. Rice, and a business associate in private life, Arthur Walsh, vice president of Thomas Edison Industries, Inc.

The annual fleet war games will continue until late May and involve 130 ships, 350 warplanes and about 42,000 naval officers and men, together with an unannounced number of soldiers and Army planes. They are understood to involve the defense of Hawaii, Alaska and the West Coast against a simulated attack from Asia.

Officials have said the maneuvers will try out problems raised by the European war. While they will not elaborate on this statement, qualified observers consider these to include: use of torpedoes and mines against armored ships and special measures for their defense; anti-aircraft protection, including the use of convoys to guard merchant ships against air attack, and the vulnerability of naval bases to submarines and airplanes.

Soviet Warns Scandinavians Alliance Would Violate Peace

Treaty With Finland Forbids Entente Aimed at Russia, Statement Says; Norwegians Cool to Defensive Plan

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Wednesday), March 20. The official Tass News Agency announced today it was authorized to state that Soviet Russia would regard any defensive alliance between Sweden, Norway and Finland as "aimed at the U. S. S. R." and as directly contradictory to the Russo-Finnish peace treaty.

"The foreign press alleges that negotiations are going on among Finland, Sweden and Norway on conclusion of a so-called 'defensive alliance' for the purpose of military protection of the frontiers of Finland," said Tass.

"It is also alleged that the Soviet Union does not object to such a 'defensive alliance' among Finland, Sweden and Norway.

"Tass is authorized to state that these reports on the attitude of the Soviet Union do not correspond to the facts."

The agency added that public statements made in the Norwegian Parliament made it clear that such an alliance "would be aimed against the U. S. S. R. and would directly contradict the peace treaty" between Finland and Russia.

Article 3 of the treaty of March 12 binds each party not to conclude any alliance or join any coalition against the other.

(The governments of both Norway and Sweden have announced they were considering conclusion of an alliance with England since the latter was forced to accept peace at Russian hands. President Kallio of Finland has declared such an alliance a necessity.

(Whether Moscow would hold article 3 stood in the way of the proposed alliance, however, has been a subject much discussed in Oslo and Stockholm.

(Swedish circles said Monday the Stockholm government received assurances the U. S. S. R. had no more territorial desires in Scandinavia.)

The Finnish-Russian peace treaty was ratified Tuesday by the presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

Just before the ratification, the Finnish delegates, Juho Passikivi and Vaino Voionmaa, arrived to exchange ratification instruments. The Finnish Parliament already has approved the peace.

'Intend to Fight,' Chamberlain Says

ment's "slow but sure policy" that Britain would strike when the opportunity presented itself but not when there was "little chance of success; much of danger and perhaps disaster."

Chamberlain gave a point-by-point account of Britain's aid to Finland. He disclosed the Allies were preparing to send 100,000 men to help both the Finns and their Scandinavian neighbors and they would have been at the front by the end of April. He called the Russo-Finnish peace "this tragedy" and placed responsibility for it "squarely upon the shoulders of Germany."

Its terms, he said, brought grave danger to the very "doorstep" of Sweden and Norway.

Germany, he charged, "terrified the Scandinavian nations" by threats of invasion if they allowed passage of the Allied troops.

Slowly and carefully, the prime minister said there was no ground for criticism of the Allies for failing to help Finland, least of all by "individuals in countries far away from the seat of war."

From the Labor side of the House came the shout:

"Tell America that!"

Of Sumner Welles, the United States President's fact-finder, Chamberlain said he felt sure that he had received from all parties here a full account of the nation's unity.

Attlee Praises Welles

Speaking to a half-filled house after Chamberlain had finished, Attlee also praised Welles and said: "I think he realizes the determination of the people of this country."

He urged Chamberlain to be "ruthless with inefficiency" within his government and declared: "The initiative must not be left with Hitler. We can not have a policy of wait and see."

"I want to see a war cabinet that lays down war principles; that makes decisions."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, the Liberal leader, also asked the government to "seize the initiative" and declared it was about time that people stopped asking what Hitler and Mussolini were going to do but "what Chamberlain is going to do."

Hore-Belisha Critical

Hore-Belisha, whose attack of last week off the government's failure to get large-scale help to Finland produced today's statement by the prime minister, today scored the government for not sending an air force to Finland when "powerful reinforcements, from the air would have broken the Russian onslaught."

If the Allies failed, he said, it was because "they were not determined enough and not quick enough."

Hore-Belisha pointed to the blockade as the sole offensive weapon the Allies have employed so far against Germany and asked: "Is it enough, or must we intensify our pressure in other directions?"

Commons was so crowded for Chamberlain's expose that numerous members had to sit in the galleries.

In the diplomatic gallery, United States Ambassador Kennedy and Soviet Ambassador Maisky sat side by side.

A considerable part of the Chamberlain statement was given over to the Allied efforts to aid Finland, and he said: "Perhaps our power to help Finland is not yet at an end."

There were prolonged cheers at this, and the prime minister continued: "If further aid is required, I know this country will gladly take its share in contributing to the regeneration of Finland."

101 Planes Sent

Chamberlain made public a list of war materials promised and sent to Finland by the Allies. These included 101 sent of 152 airplanes promised; 114 guns sent of 223 promised; 185,000 shells sent of 297,200 promised.

Other figures were: Vickers guns, 100 promised, all sent; marine mines, 500 promised, 400 sent; hand grenades, 50,000 promised, 20,700 sent; aircraft bombs, 15,700 promised and sent; signalling sets 1,300 promised, 800 sent; antitank rifles, 200 promised and sent; respirators, 60,000 promised and sent; great coats, 100,000 promised and sent; battle and dress suits, 100,000 promised and sent; antitank mines, 20,000 promised, 10,000 sent and ambulances, 48 promised and sent.

Of the projected expeditionary force, he said:

"We decided to provide the largest force which would be permitted by the physical conditions we had to encounter."

He added that Finland was informed "we were prepared to increase the original force to any extent and as rapidly as possible in the light of experience and military developments."

"We did not hesitate even at risk to ourselves to meet the Finnish needs as far as possible and without delay," the prime minister continued.

Mrs. Audrey Brown Dies Here at 36

Mrs. Audrey Brown, 36, lifelong resident of the District, died yesterday at Sibley Hospital after an illness of six weeks.

Mrs. Brown, the wife of Edwin L. Brown, a chef, lived at 1914 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

She leaves also two brothers, Nathan and Eadward Roberts, and two sisters, Mrs. Lillian McCarter and Mrs. Blanche Smith.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Chambers funeral home, 517 Eleventh street southeast. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

House Rejects Boost In Osterhaus Pension

The House rejected a proposal yesterday to pay Mrs. Mary W. Osterhaus, widow of Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, a pension of $100 monthly instead of the $50 monthly she now receives.

By a roll-call vote of 224 to 68, the House struck the provision from an omnibus pension bill after critics contended it would establish a new policy.

House Buries Hatch Bill On Calendar

Action May Prevent Vote on Measure At This Session

The Hatch "clean politics" bill, passed Monday by the Senate, yesterday was given so low a place on the House legislative calendar that it may prevent enactment at this session.

Representative Francis Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, announced that action on the Hatch bill would be delayed until after the House considers the Logan-Walters bill, designed to take away arbitrary power from many New Deal agencies.

Walter is chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee in charge of both measures. He said the Logan-Walter bill, reported opposed by the Administration, was considered more important than the Hatch bill, which extends to State and local government employes restrictions on political activities now imposed on Federal workers.

House Minority Leader Martin, of Massachusetts, said the Republicans would insist that the Logan-Walter bill be given consideration at this session. It has been given legislation preference in the House.

L. R. Barrett to Attend Boston Health Session

Lewis R. Barrett, director of recreation, will be among delegates to a four-day conference of the Eastern District, American Association for Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, opening Tuesday at Boston.

Other Washington delegates will be Jennie Turnbull, of George Washington University; Capt. Carroll L. Bryant, national assistant director, American Red Cross, and Louise Stutz Kjellstrom.

Funeral Today For W. G. Kienle, Indian Fighter

Funeral services for William G. Kienle, 78, Indian fighter and member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, will be held at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow at the home, 611 Decatur street northwest. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery. He died Monday at his home.

Mr. Kienle came to this country from Stuttgart, Germany, in 1880, when he was 18. Two years later he enlisted in the old Fifth Army Cavalry and fought for five years in Indian campaigns. From 1887 to 1892 he served with troops stationed here.

Leaving the Army in 1892, he entered the baking business and worked at that occupation until his retirement eight years ago.

He was a member of Armenius Lodge, Masonic, and the Knights of Pythias.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Kienle; two sons, Charles P. and Henry D. Kienle; and a daughter, Miss Anna Kienle.

Foot Sufferers Find RELIEF!
GLIDE-O-MATIC ARCH RESTERS
If you suffer from hot, aching legs or feet due to lack of proper support to the arches, get a pair of Glide-O-Matic ARCH RESTERS at our store today. Slip them into your shoes . . . no need for tacks or glue. Notice that they are as light and flexible as feathers. Now, stand up and walk or run. Isn't that firm, solid support without the heavy bulk of ordinary, stiff arch supporters?
Here's another important feature of Glide-O-Matic ARCH RESTERS. They always support your arches—no matter what position your feet may take. Standing, walking, or dancing. Glide-O-Matic ARCH RESTERS always BEND with your feet — NOT YOUR SHOES. Ordinary, stiff arch supporters bend only with your shoes. They rarely support your weight, when it is thrown onto your forward arches and toes as in walking or dancing.
MONEY BACK GUARANTEE
TEAR OUT THIS ADVERTISEMENT—Present it with $1.00 at our store today and get your pair of Glide-O-Matic ARCH RESTERS. Wear them for a full 10 days. Give them every test you can think of. If at the end of 10 days' wear, you honestly feel that it isn't the best $1.00 investment you have ever made in solid foot comfort, bring them back. Your purchase price will be returned to you in full!
"My Foot Pains Were So Terrific I Could Scream"

Write Mrs. H. P. Smith: "My foot pains were so terrific I could scream. I sought relief and experimented with many arches and pads, and paid as high as $10.00 for supports without getting relief.
I am happy to write that thru a fortunate recommendation of a friend I heard of your GLIDE-O-MATIC ARCH RESTERS which only cost me $1, and after wearing GLIDE-O-MATICS my foot pains stopped instantly. If other women will take my advice, they, too, will wear your light ARCH RESTERS which seem to take no room at all in the shoe. I wear stylish shoes now with comfort, and walk and dance as I never did before."

Inadequate Solution

By voting to add two members to the National Labor Relations Board the House Labor Committee has not necessarily turned its back upon the proposed amendments growing out of the NLRB investigation. But its action seems to imply a belief that many difficulties in which the board has become involved can be cleared up by modifying its membership.

It is worthy of note that a motion to abolish the present board and set up a five-man agency in its place failed by only one vote. That motion may be reconsidered since the deciding vote was cast by proxy contrary to the wishes of an absent committee member. In any event, it is obvious that the committee wishes to change the complexion of the present board. Whether that is done by permitting the President to choose five new men or by adding "new blood" to the present board may be of little importance in the end.

Many of the amendments advocated by the Smith Committee, which is conducting the NLRB investigation, have not yet been considered by the Labor Committee. A favorable vote for some of these changes may be obtained. But the refusal to modify the act's declaration of policy strongly suggests that the committee intends to rely chiefly upon changes in personnel to bring about more satisfactory administration of the Labor Relations Act.

It is questionable whether the problem can be dealt with in this way. The present deadlock in the board, as Mrs. Norton points out, must be overcome. But neither the addition of two members to the present board, nor the creation of an entirely new enforcement agency, would give any assurance of this.

When persistent and far-reaching differences arise in the administration of a law, there is a strong presumption that the statute itself is in need of clarification. The NLRB investigation has shown that the basic law is defective in several respects. It is careful amendment of the statute in the light of the board's experience that is needed. Any assumption that mere changes in personnel can rescue the NLRB from the difficulties in which it has become enmeshed would involve an unwarranted disregard of the Smith Committee's findings.

The New Menace

The British can reasonably claim that if they have not yet fully mastered they have at least successfully coped with the menace arising from Germany's mine and submarine warfare. But they cannot speak with equal assurance regarding the threat to sea power from the air.

For years an incessant but inconclusive debate has been raging in the admiralties, war offices and air ministries of the world on the subject of the airplane versus the battleship. After six and a half months of the European war, in which both sides have made attempts to bomb naval concentrations from the air, the basic issue remains unsettled.

One thing the present war has proved, however. If it is still uncertain whether a battleship can be sunk as a result of direct hits by aerial bombs, it has been conclusively shown that it can be damaged, to the point of being temporarily put out of commission.

Saturday night's German air raid on Scapa Flow was the latest demonstration of this. If we accept the German figures, three British warships were seriously damaged by air bombs. The British maintain that only one unnamed ship was damaged. In any event, the British must now take into account the possibility of losses in sea power arising from the enemy air weapon. This is a new menace, one which the mistress of the seas never had to contend with in any previous war.

How seriously the British are taking this threat is seen in the announcement made by Winston Churchill some time ago that Scapa Flow was being abandoned as a naval concentration point. Apparently this announcement was premature for many British warships were riding at anchor in Scapa Flow when the German raiders flew over them Saturday night.

The British were caught napping on this occasion. They do not appear to have used their own air force with sufficient skill to have driven off the raiders before the latter could do much damage. This seeming lack of coordination between the British fleet and air force at Scapa Flow may reinforce those in our own fighting services who have persistently and successfully battled against the creation of a separate air arm, of the kind which exists in Great Britain.

Because of the stalemate on the Western Front the British are compelled to rely to a greater degree than ever on their sea power as an offensive weapon. The new menace from the air is thus of the most vital importance to the Allies. But in their daring and prolonged raid on the German air base on the fortified island of Sylt last night the British have demonstrated their ability and determination to strike back.

A Lesson In Manners

In his review of a very grim war situation yesterday the British Prime Minister repudiated suggestions that his government and that of France in any way failed in meeting any obligations to Finland. Such suggestions, he said, should come "least of all from individuals in countries far away from the seat of the war."

The reference is not too obscure to be identified. A certain number of Americans, indulging the national propensity to criticize, have been inclined to blame the Allies for their failure to render Finland sufficient assistance to withstand the Russian onslaught.

Such criticism is absurd, entirely aside from the issue of whether or not it was ever strategically possible for the Allies to save Finland. Recent speeches by the foreign ministers of both Norway and Sweden have emphasized the refusal of those countries to let Allied troops pass through their territory. The blame, if blame there be, must be placed at the door of the Scandinavian nations, effectively terrorized by Germany.

But if any blame attaches to Norway and Sweden, Americans should certainly be among the last people in the world to voice it. The United States, with as much concern in the underlying issues as has any other country, contributed virtually nothing, as a government, to Finland's gallant fight for self-preservation. Our admiration for that country was indeed widely and loudly expressed. But tangible assistance of a practical value was limited to the contributions of relatively few organizations and individuals.

The United States, more secure than any other country whose standards are jeopardized by the march of aggression, is also the least interested and the least active in opposing that aggression in any effective way. For this reason it would seem good taste, to put it moderately, to refrain from passing comment on the policies of those who are at least showing willingness to run risks in order to keep the banners of democracy aloft.

It may become more rather than less necessary to bear in mind this elementary lesson in good manners. Evidence accumulates that Germany cannot be beaten without a stupendous struggle. The Allies, if they are to win the war, will seemingly do so only at the cost of a terrible expenditure of lives, of money and of national resources of every kind.

That expenditure will be made by Englishmen and Frenchmen. It will not, so far as the indications go, cost Americans anything more than incidental annoyance and petty irritations. Advice from us, therefore, can properly and helpfully be withheld until it is requested.

The American people, said President Roosevelt last Saturday, "seek a moral basis for peace." It might be more realistic to assert that we are chiefly concerned with dodging unpleasantness, paying little attention to the factor of morality. But if a moral basis for peace is really our goal at least we must recognize that a very poor way to secure it is by criticizing others for not doing what we are wholly unwilling to do ourselves.

After The Hatch Bill

With the Hatch bill out of the way, at least so far as the Senate is concerned, attention now centers on the plan to bring under the merit system all Federal employes outside the civil service. It is interesting to note that so strong an opponent of the Hatch measure as Senator Minton urged precisely such a course even before that bill was finally approved by the Senate.

Undoubtedly that will be the next step toward improving the public service, and there is reason to expect that little opposition will be encountered in passing such legislation. Heretofore, efforts to eliminate the spoils system of appointment have met with defeat because political appointees were active party workers or individuals who could be counted upon to make generous contributions to party funds.

Now that all Government workers are forbidden to engage actively in politics and protected against political assessments, their value from the viewpoint of politically-minded legislators has suffered eclipse.

Regardless of what action the House may take on the extension of the Hatch Act ban to State employes, the Senate undoubtedly will be much more receptive toward proposals such as those contained in the Ramspeck bill, which has already passed the House. That measure would cover about 200,000 workers into the Civil Service, and a much greater number of jobs.

Mere elimination of the spoils system of appointment is itself only a preliminary to the creation of a system of appointment and promotion based on merit and made attractive by security of tenure. This week a long awaited report dealing with methods of recruiting high grade individuals for the more responsible positions in the Government service will be released.

However valuable the recommendations may be, they will fail of their purpose unless Congress acts to stabilize Government employment and to assure efficient workers of steady promotion and reasonable increases in pay. So long as the Government service is constantly expanding and contracting as functions are added or dropped and appropriations are erratically increased or cut, there is little opportunity for able men to make careers in the public service, even if fully protected against removal for political reasons.

Federal-State Relations

A suggestion of major importance has come out of the Temporary National Economic Committee's hearings on State trade barriers. Frank Bane, executive director of the Council of State Governments, has asked the TNEC to sponsor in Congress a resolution to create a continuing committee on Federal-State relations.

The immediate function of such a committee would be to devise ways and means of eliminating obstacles to the free flow of commerce among the States. But it would also "explore other major questions of Federal-State relationships so pertinent to the effective operation of our Government—problems arising from conflicting and overlapping tax laws, grants-in-aid and their effect upon education, highways, health, and welfare, as well as general State and Federal services . . ."

Mr. Bane correctly sees that State trade barriers are linked with the larger issue of the balance of power between the Federal and State governments. In various instances national agencies have invaded the rights of the States. These, in turn, have encroached upon regulatory powers which only the Federal Government can properly exercise. Instead of permitting these ominous tendencies to continue, common sense recommends a full exploration of the problem on a cooperative basis.

Supreme Court decisions have been too much relied upon in keeping the States and the National Government in their respective spheres under the Constitution. The court can and does serve as an important balance wheel in our Federal system. But the most it can do is to invoke the basic law when specific cases are carried before it for review. The adoption of positive and comprehensive policies to eliminate friction between State and Nation is clearly the responsibility of Congress and the local Legislatures.

Much has already been accomplished by the cooperative method. Through efforts of the Council of State Governments and other agencies the erection of State barriers to trade has been halted. Virtually no restrictive acts of this sort were passed in 1939 and a number of States last year repealed port-of-entry, inspection and burdensome tax laws. Several Governors have pledged themselves to veto legislation tending to establish obstructions to trade.

This aspect of Mr. Bane's report is particularly encouraging. But he rightly sees the need for much more extensive cooperation among the States themselves as well as between the States and the Federal Government. The desirability of setting up some agency to direct this movement is clear. A committee devoted to smoothing out Federal-State relationships on a broad scale would have an opportunity to render a national service of inestimable value.

This Week's Appreciation:

From the Christian Science Monitor.

To thousands of filling station attendants throughout the country, who cheerfully render such kindnesses to motorists as cleaning the windshield, checking the tires, and filling the raditor, whether or not the customer buys anything. Recently, on a stormy, freezing night, an acquaintance of ours drove into a filling station, explained apologetically that the gasoline tank was full, and asked if the sleet could be scraped from the windshield. "Glad to do it!" smiled the attendant, who had just left a warm stove inside.

The other day the family car, thoroughly bespattered with mud, went to a filling station for servicing and repairs. It came back shiny and clean. The sluggish door latches were newly oiled. There was no extra charge. Such small things help to oil the wheels of human affairs. They bring the satisfaction which comes to oneself and to others through making the daily task an opportunity for unselfish service.

"Worrying cannot help you," declares a psychologist. That makes it even—we cannot help worrying.

You have reason to feel complimented when someone imitates you. No one counterfeits a penny.

It's a tough world. If we work, we get tired; and if we don't work, we get hungry.

Prefers Sales Tax

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

P. A. Wyckoff, writing to The Post of March 13, computes that a person having an income of $3,000 would pay a sales tax, on a 2 per cent basis, of close to $50. By contrast he estimates that under the present District of Columbia income tax, assuming average deductions, a person having that income would pay no tax at all.

Apparently his first figure was arrived at by taking 2 per cent of approximately the total income, as if it would all be spent for items subject to a retail sales tax. Does the writer of that letter know of any jurisdictions in which a sales tax is levied against rents, insurance premiums, taxes, savings? Does he suppose that persons having incomes within this range pay nothing for these purposes?

Statistics furnished by the National Resources Planning Board show that housing costs consume about 11 per cent of the national income, food 29 per cent, medical care 4 per cent, transportation 9.3 per cent, savings 10 per cent. These items would in the main not be subject to a retail sales tax. They make up nearly two-thirds of the total income.

Every proposal for a sales tax in Washington has exempted food and medicine, items otherwise specially taxed. Based on accurate accounts of household expenditures for many years, I would estimate my own tax under the proposed District of Columbia sales tax at $10 to $12; under the present income tax it is $8 to $10. Either amount is much less than 10 per cent of my present real estate tax paid on my personal residence. With such a disparity between actual and merely prospective taxes, the choice between a sales tax or an income tax becomes largely academic. Even though the sales tax would be larger, I should prefer it.

Easter Animals

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Once more at this season of the year it becomes my sad duty to plead with my fellow human beings to cease the indiscriminate selling and buying of those innocent, lovely, tender little creatures, baby ducklings, chicks and rabbits, in the mistaken supposition of their connection with the Christian celebration of the Saviour's resurrection.

The chick and bunny idea really had no origin in the resurrection celebration. It belongs to the pagan side of the Easter festival, for, strange as it may seem, Easter is a mixture of religious and pagan rites. In the latter the egg and emerging chick symbolized earth's awaking to life in the spring; the rabbit, a magical creature of the nature worship of ancient Europe, was supposed to lay the eggs which had been dyed and hidden in its burrow for the children to hunt.

The birth of the chick from the egg is indeed also a beautiful symbol of our Savior's entrance into resurrection life. All the more reason, then, that these creatures of His hand should be protected, not produced for man's thoughtless mercenary purposes and fashions.

It is true that children long for pets, but they must have suitable ones for their living quarters. Chicks and rabbits are not house pets like cats and dogs. They need roomy suburban environments for their happiness and welfare. Children, eager to love them, all too often unguided by careful parents, are apt to handle them too roughly, tire them out and make them sick. A sad number land on the ash heap or in the garbage can, sometimes even before life is completely gone.

Not So Dumb

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Communist Party evidently realizes that since the Russo-German pact and invasion of Finland their sympathizers and fellow travelers are deserting the party in legion. Hence the necessity of concentrating their efforts on the colored population if the party is to survive.

Mr. Martin Chancey's letter in The Post of March 14 is a clever attempt to win the colored people of this city to the Communist cause. He claims that Communist support of the antilynching bill is conclusive evidence of the party's determination to advance the interests of the Negro masses.

Very noble, indeed! But Mr. Chancey would make a better impression on the colored race if he would first disassociate himself from the Communists. If he would, for instance, fight for the antilynching bill as a Republican or a Democrat or just a plain American citizen. But when he signs himself as "City Secretary, District Communist Party," he can hardly blame the colored people if they get suspicious. Negroes, you know, are loyal Americans; and they are not so dumb as he thinks they are.

When the colored people saw Communist Russia making an alliance with Nazi Germany—in which brutal persecution of Jews and racial superiority is a major tenet of national policy—they realized that Marxian professions of sympathy for oppressed peoples are colossal frauds. They know that the minute the word comes from the front office in the Kremlin, American Communists will forget their slogan about "self-determination for the black belt" and join the Ku Klux Klan in its crusade to make America white.

Defends English Leaders

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have only recently returned from England so know at first hand that whereas, being a free democracy, there are bound to be some there who disagree with Chamberlain and say so, as is their right, the majority of English opinion is backing him up 100 per cent. Being closer to the situation than we are, the English people are in a better position to judge for themselves who shall lead them during the present emergency and to know and understand the reasons which influence his decisions.

The Allies are at war for the principle of the right of self-determination and if we cannot see our way clear to help them, we should at least have the good taste to refrain from criticising their leaders or their conduct of what we choose to call their war. We would be the first to cry to high heaven and claim it to be insufferable if the position were reversed. Also, we should not forget that, being a democracy, our Administration always has an opposition party and if other peoples preferred to accept the views of the opposition, our Administration would always be in the wrong hands. Let us not forget the value of discretion and restraint, and that plenty of small nations still remain to be Hitlerized unless stopped by those who are willing to fight to stop it. If we cannot help, at least let us not hinder.

Puerto Rico's Economic Woes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the "Mme. Chairman" column for February 22, there is a paragraph descriptive of Puerto Rican economy that I think calls for extended discussion. Mrs. Joshua Evans is quoted as saying that Puerto Rico is suffering from conditions similar to those in the dust bowl of the Middle West because of deforestation. It is probable that the speaker expanded upon this subject. However, the impression remains that upon deforestation rests Puerto Rico's economic woes.

It is unusual for officials in the Department of Agriculture to search far afield in the hope of rationalizing unprecedented unemployment and poverty in Puerto Rico. Experts from that department are not inclined to admit that there are 30,000 men clamoring for WPA pittances, men who lost their jobs because the Department of Agriculture halved Puerto Rico's sugar industry under the quota system.

It is perfectly true that the early settlers cut the forests in Puerto Rico. And if the colonials hadn't used the lumber, an expanding population would have done it. You can't pack 2,000,000 people into jungles on an island having a total area of around 3,500 square miles. There is no money in forests, but there is in sugar cane.

What is more, if Mrs. Evans had consulted the annual reports of the United States Weather Bureau she would have learned that dust bowl conditions are in no wise duplicated here. We have an annual rainfall that is in excess of 200 inches over a great part of the island. There is never a shortage of rainfall, except in one section of the island where topography, rather than deforestation, deprives the area of adequate rainfall.

Our problem today is not based upon the sins of our ancestors, but on those of a benign Congress that weeps copiously. We have been asking for fair and just sugar quota treatment without obtaining results. We have asked for certain exemptions under the wage-hour law to enable us to re-open our factories, and although Washington breaks down and cries, no amendments are forthcoming. As in the case of Finland, Congress sympathizes at the rate of thousands of words and, in the words of a more realistic Congressman, "Gives the Finnish people powder puffs and silk scanties."

We could do with a lot less discussion of forests and more of sugar quotas. The forest business is gaining our own attention. Millions of trees have been planted on submarginal land by the insular government in the last few years. We would plant sugar cane on fertile acres, but we have to have the permission of Congress before doing anything so practical.

The Post Impressionist

Speaker Of The Evening

The other night I dropped into a little affair at 1634 I street; a poetry-contest dinner of the American Association of University Women. There were about 100 persons there, but I wish there might have been 1,000, for the guest of honor was a distinguished poet from the State of Maine. He was to read some of his poems, and his name was Robert Peter Tristram Coffin.

It soon became apparent that Mr. Coffin is not only a Maine poet; he is a poet of America. He is not the ethereal type. Someone told him once that he looked more like a blacksmith than a poet. You will never find him with his head in the clouds. (When he wants a poem in a hurry, he says, he goes to the barn.)

He does not bother himself with abstractions or metaphysics or with impressionistic driblets of emotion. Rather he writes ballads of square-toed Americans, solid salt-water lyrics, poems of nature and its strange manifestations, and of other things that have touched deeply his poet's soul. He has been accused of being sentimental; but yet he has both feet (maybe all fours) squarely on the ground.

He strives not for ostentatious originality, either in subject matter or in form and style, yet his work is individual and fresh. His main concern is in writing poems, not in poetry technique, yet he is the most masterful creator of couplets I know.

When he is writing a poem, he says, he does not think much about meter; he lets the meter take care of itself, and it does. He is an opponent of affected, unnatural speech and encourages his students at Bowdoin to end their sentences with prepositions if they want to. He ridicules the Bostonian "GO SLOWLY" signs as being too-too adverbial.

Mr. Coffin read his poems as if he really enjoyed them. He did not act bored. His voice was rhythmic, almost mellifluous. Sometimes he talked so fast you could hardly keep up with him, yet the variation in tempo seemed essential to the rhythmic pattern. His renditions were anything but "soulful": he would, I think, make a poor reader for radio poetry hours.

Between poems Mr. Coffin talked of many things—of Maine, for him a very eloquent subject; of barns and barn swallows; of his boyhood farm experiences; of why he liked cows better than cousins; of the King's English, and, most of all, of poetry: its nature, its indispensability and its origins.

He said one very true thing about poetry that has often been stated before but that not many poets assimilate. Poetry, he said, should be pervaded with serious humor. That does not mean, of course, that poetry attempts to be funny or clever or brilliant.

It means that humor should not be solely the property of light verse; it means that poetry above all else needs an eternal balance to keep it mundane, celestial and perhaps Stygian at the same time. It means that Robert Frost's "Cow in Apple Time," E. A. Robinson's "Mr. Flood's Party" and "Isaac and Archibald," and other poems of their kind will be read as great and good long after the sour-puss school is one with Ninevah and Tyre.

And many of Mr. Coffin's own poems have that marvelous blend of seriousness and humor that will make them enduring. "The Rocker" is a good example:

When Tom Bailey wants to rest,
He finds the rocking chair the best.
He leaves his weariness behind
And rocks the wrinkles from his mind.

He talks about his cows and bees
And makes a music with his knees,
East and west, his body bends,
And he becomes the best of friends.

His mind opens as he rocks,
He who was quiet talks and talks,
And his words take on the swing
Of a homing pigeon's wing.

He goes and comes, and as he goes
The man blossoms like the rose,
Gradually, as stars slide,
He finds himself at the other side.

When he brings up at the wall,
He rises, rocking chair and all,
And crosses back where he began,
Another and a fresher man.

I was, it may be inferred by now, quite taken by Robert P. T. Coffin But then, I have long been a Coffin enthusiast. A few years ago a book of his appeared called "Strange Holiness." It was the kind of poetry I happen to like, and I wrote him and told him so. I suppose it was presumptuous and sophomoric, but this is how I put it (and a few months later the book got a Pulitzer prize award):

When I had read but two or three
I knew that I should always be Taking them down from off the shelf
To have another for myself.

I did not read them all straight through,
But here and there I skipped a few;
So always in that tempting list
There's apt to be one I have missed.

That, more or less, is how I still feel about Mr. Coffin's work. There is, to be sure, little widening of his poetic range as his volumes appear from year to year; there is, probably, some sentiment for its own sake; perhaps there is a too insistent earthiness. But there is also in his work a great deal of pure poetry; and poetry, if it will not save the world, is what makes it worth saving, all present indications to the contrary.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Birth Of A Nation

"THE GREATEST MIGRATION in the history of mankind," Prof. Marcus Lee Hansen, of the University of Illinois, called that vast westward movement of Europeans which began with Columbus' discovery of the New World and has only abated in our own time. It reached, in proportion to the population of the country, its peak in the years 1848 to 1854. Those years are the culmination of the story he tells in "The Atlantic Migration, 1607-1860: A History of the Continuing Settlement of the United States" (Harvard University Press, $3.50).

This vast movement of people he pictures not as a social problem but as a social process. He spent four years abroad studying this process, largely as reflected in contemporary Irish, English, German and Swiss newspapers; he had intended to continue the study in two more volumes; his death in 1938 cut the project short. Arthur Schlesinger, of Harvard, made the final "literary revision" of the present volume.

No immigrants were ever good frontiersmen. The sons of immigrants tamed the wilderness; the immigrants moved into the cities or the half-developed farms of earlier comers. In time of prosperity the tide flowed into the Eastern ports; in time of depression the tide flowed westward across the continent. And the history of our continent is dotted with the failures of colonies of foreigners who tried to build cities in the wilderness. The forests were cut down, the prairies were settled by individuals and families who had learned the technique of the frontier in older settlements.

Moreover, the settlement of America was only one aspect of a mighty movement of people out of overcrowded Europe. The same people who planned colonies here attempted other settlements in Canada, Australia, Guatemala, Brazil and in eastern Europe. When west Germans were migrating to America, east Germans were trekking into Russia. More Irishmen, probably, moved to England in the famine years of the midcentury than moved to America. There was no "planning" to the great migration; it followed commerce. Irishmen went to Canada because lumber ships sailed out for Quebec; Germans went to St. Louis because the cotton ships took them to New Orleans, and thence they drifted upriver. Mr. Hansen seems to prove, too, that few Germans came to America as '48'ers. The rebels refused to come; the emigrants moved in search of better farm land.

IN THE FIRST centuries it was hard to persuade men to settle in rough America. Lands were granted to wealthy men who would guarantee to transport laborers. A larger proportion of the early settlers than their descendants care to admit were virtual bondsmen forced to emigrate. Even in the middle nineteenth century many communes in Ireland, Germany and even Swtizerland subsidized emigration to America in order to get rid of their paupers. But by that time the paupers were glad to go; after 1815 it became an article of faith among the little folk of Europe that America was the utopia of the common man. Relatively speaking, it was.

New York was always cosmopolitan; 18 tongues were spoken here in Dutch days. But most of the colonies were suspicious of strangers. Maryland long forbade any save English and Irishmen to hold land. Resentful Anglo-Americans in Worcester, Mass., burned a Scotch-Irish meeting house in Worcester in the eighteenth century. The French and Indian War, like later wars, increased suspicion of aliens; in every spell of hard times, as in 1798, antialien acts were passed.

In another sense, wars created the Nation. In the 40 years of turmoil between 1775 and 1815, Mr. Hansen points out, America was relatively isolated; immigration was a trickle, and in those years was formed the pattern of nationalism which is still dominant. It was then that the English language won its permanent victory; Mr. Hansen digs up curious tales of the vain efforts of Dutch, Germans and French to retain their cultural and linguistic identity. So, too, in the Civil War immigrant newspapers, theretofore devoted to news from home, turned to dispatches from the battle lines, and again a wave of immigration was "Americanized" and a national unity cemented in more than the conventional geographical sense.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Voice In The Darkness

I AM a lost cause . . .
I am a forgotten virtue . . .
I am an abandoned trait
And a forsaken leader.

I once ruled all civilized nations . . .
I held the respect of savages
And was not completely ignored
By the lowest of the barbarians.
Men held to me in moments of Mad impulses.

I ruled warfare . . .
Even on the battlefield
Among friend and foe; and in
The fearful heat of carnage
I was not forgotten.

Sorely pressed soldiers,
Grim and bleeding fighters,
Swayed by their patriotisms
And prejudices, paid me tribute . . .
Generals planning campaigns
Admitted me to their council tables . . .

"This far we shall go," they said,
"And no farther!" . . .
Rulers respected me . . .
War lords took my hand and Gave me their firm pledges
Before the first cry of "Forward!"
Before the first blow,
And until the last black death.

All the nations of the earth
Clung to me, firmly . . .
I saved the innocent millions . . .
I spared the toiling womenfolk . . .
I protected the little children . . .
I saved the unoffending home
From the raider and the torch . . .
From the shot and shell . . .
From the unspeakable horror of High, explosive bomb.

I made the bombing of orphan asylum,
Hospital, kindergarten and cottage
Impossible and unthinkable
In the heart and mind of Man.

Now I am betrayed and forsaken . . .
I am excluded from the councils,
The battle plans and
The fields of warfare.
At the side of the warriors
Stands Barbarism, Paganism,
Bestiality,
Incredible cruelty and untempered
Hatred.

I am in the outer darkness . . .
But I shall one day rule, emerge . . .
I shall one day rule again . . .
For it is not in the heart of
The people to exclude me forever . . .

I am
Chivalry!

Report From Mr. Welles
Naught to tell . . .
But dining well.

The McNutt Inquisition

By Ernest Lindley

A 'Smearing' Exercise?

WHETHER IT WAS planned that way or not, the highly publicized Federal income-tax investigation of Paul V. McNutt and his Hoosier political aides is about the most merciless job on record of "smearing" a Presidential candidate.

Internal Revenue agents were sent into Indiana last August, about a month after McNutt became Federal Security Administrator. For several months they have been there in force, ransacking the State for information about money paid to McNutt or to his chief lieutenants or to the Hoosier Democratic Club—the Two Per Cent Club. As yet the Treasury has presented no evidence to the Department of Justice, so that nobody can be sure whether anything justifying the prosecution of anybody has been discovered. Like all such investigations, this is supposed to be secret. But for months reports and rumors have been leaking out. Until the investigation is completed, nobody can be sure whether any of them is true.

Responsible officials have asserted repeatedly that they would complete the investigation as expeditiously as possible. But the latest word is that it will require several weeks yet. There is growing suspicion in political circles in Washington as well as Indiana that it will not be completed before the Democratic National Convention—or at least not until so soon before the convention that McNutt meanwhile will have been killed off as a Presidential candidate.

The reputation of a penniless saint could not survive this kind of inquisition

ON THE BASIS of such relatively reliable information as is available, I would reject the extreme theory that this investigation originated in a New Deal conspiracy to "smear" McNutt. It seems to trace back to a former McNutt lieutenant—a man who was fired by McNutt. This foe of McNutt was given a job by the Roosevelt Administration, and, finally, in the interest of party harmony recommended for a job in the Treasury Department by the two Indiana Senators. The Treasury made its customery routine income checkup, and from this got some alleged "leads" concerning financial transactions involving other Indiana politicians.

The Treasury then turned loose in Indiana a full force of investigators, accountants, and lawyers. It is reasonable to suppose that if the President was ever consulted about it, he would have replied: Let's find out what this is all about. That he was even consulted is mere conjecture.

McNutt's personal finances have received such an X-raying as probably no other Presidential candidate has ever had to endure. Expense checks made out to him twelve years ago, while he was national commander of the American Legion, have been photostated. Sponsors of meetings which he addressed while Governor of Indiana have been asked whether they ever gave him any money. Learning that they were searching for safety deposit boxes in his name, he voluntarily sent the key to his box to the investigators and authorized them to examine its contents.

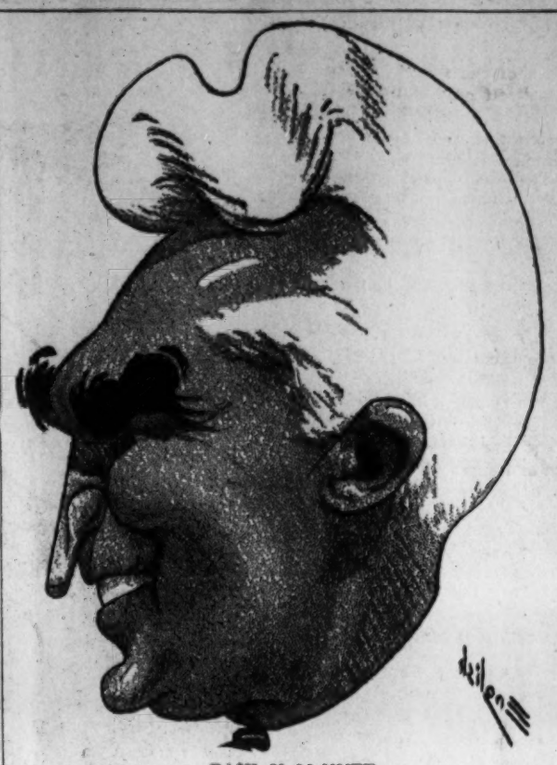
The personal finances of Frank McHale, McNutt's political manager, and other prominent Hoosier Democrats have been combed just as thoroughly. All the contractors who did business with the State while McNutt was Governor, and hundreds of businessmen who sold supplies to the State have been questioned.

McHALE, a lawyer, boasts that he has never represented a contractor or other businessman having business with the State government. The income-tax investigators apparently supposed that contractors and supply houses "kicked in" to somebody. The McNutt people say that they never got much money from such sources even as legitimate political contributions, because the fixed rule laid down by McNutt as Governor was that every contract was to be awarded to the lowest bidder. They say that the first man to suffer from this rule was an old-established Indiana contractor who was also a Democrat and had been contributing to the party for years. His bid, the second lowest, was only about $300 above the lowest bid on a $180,000 highway contract. The other bidder was from outside the State, and under the law the highway board could have used its descretion to give the contract to the Indiana man. But McNutt ruled otherwise.

McNutt, McHale, and other ranking McNutt aides show no trepidation about the outcome of this investigation. They are asking only that it be completed as soon as possible and the results made known.

The present seat of difficulty seems to be the expenditure of certain contributions received by the Hoosier Democratic Club. This I will discuss in a later column.

McNutt's friends are confident that nothing can be found—because there is nothing to be found—to reflect upon his financial integrity. Even some of his bitterest enemies in Indiana would be flabbergasted if anything were uncovered in indicate that McNutt had been in politics for money. He has been aiming at the Presidency for a good many years—some people think since his college days. Men of such ambitions aren't ordinarily interested in the more mundane rewards of lower-grade politicians.



PAUL V. McNUTT

"Some of his bitterest enemies would be flabbergasted if it were discovered he had been in politics for money." Is the current income tax investigation, then, merely an exercise in "smearing?" See Ernest Lindley's article today

Berlin-Moscow-Rome

By Barnet Nover

A New Triple Alliance?

SINCE THE BRENNERO meeting, Nazi spokesmen have worked overtime in an effort to convince the world that a "new order" has come into being in Europe, with Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin as its architects.

For example, in commenting on Monday's tete-a-tete between Duce and Fuehrer, Dienst Aus Deutschland expressed the view which in one form or another has been frequently stated in Berlin during the last few days. It said: "A far-reaching unanimity exists among the three great powers, Germany, Italy and Russia, not only in a defensive sense, but also in a constructive sense of desiring to rear a new European order."

In other words, the Europe of tomorrow, the Nazis would have us believe, will be ruled by a condominium of dictatorships, with Great Britain and France excluded and the small nations forced into a state of service to the three dominant powers.

BUT EUROPE is too small to be ruled jointly by three nations even if, as history has again and again proved, it is too big to be ruled by one.

Nothing is impossible these days and such a combination as the Nazis predict may actually come into being. Technically it would be a simple matter. Berlin and Moscow enjoy a friendship which, in the words of one Soviet leader, has been "cemented in blood." Berlin and Rome are linked by an alliance which not even Italy's decision to stay out of the war has disrupted. There is nothing which stands in the way of an Italian-Soviet entente but ideology, and ideology binds only dupes and not dictators.

Should such German-Russian-Italian combination come about, however, it could not be limited in its operations to Europe. The pull of necessity would compel the three powers to seek world rather than merely continental domination. That would mean a joint effort to destroy British seapower, British economic power and the British and French empires for the ultimate purpose of bringing about German hegemony in Europe, Russian mastery in Asia and the Italian domination of the Mediterranean and Africa.

Such a combination is also possible if the scope is limited to very much less than the Nazi propagandists suggest. It is possible, for instance, on the basis of a stand-still agreement concerning the Balkans with Germany and Russia pledging to abstain from any aggressive moves in that quarter in return for Italian support against Allied attempts to use the Balkan peninsula as a jumping-off point for an attack on either Germany or Russia. In that event the German-Russian-Italian combination would be negative rather than positive and subject to the very limited confidence in which Mussolini or Hitler or Stalin can place in his fellow dictators.

IT IS OF MORE than passing interest that the talk of the German-Russian-Italian combination, while loud and vehement in Berlin, has not even been whispered in Moscow and Rome. This may either mean that the Russian and Italian dictators have not yet made up their minds as to whether they are prepared to make such an arrangement or do not favor it except for very limited objectives. And if it is formed for limited objectives it is hardly likely to give the Allies any real cause for alarm.

What the Nazis have in mind in raising the specter of a Nazi-Communist-Fascist colossus astride the Old World is obviously to frighten Great Britain and France into accepting a peace of capitulation as well as to reassure the German people that victory for the Third Reich is in sight. The whole campaign appears to be part of the "white war" whereby Hitler hopes to achieve the aims he has not yet dared to seek by military means. Perhaps he is still convinced that in this war of nerves the morale of the British and French people will be the first to crack.

In this connection it is also of interest that while the Rome reports of what took place at Brennero portrayed Mussolini as laden with olive branches, the German versions characterized the Duce as a man girt in armor and ready to enter the fray at the drop of Hitler's hat. Both may be right. But it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that in suggesting Italy's imminent belligerency, if the Allies refuse peace on the Feuhrer's terms, Nazi spokesmen are resorting to old and familiar verbal weapons. But the reaction in London and Paris to this "white offensive" show that now, as from time to time since his peace bid of October 6, Hitler is going to be disappointed.

The Allies may have their backs to the wall. But their knees are still well off the ground.

The Conversation At The Brenner

What Now About Those "Eleven Points?"

By Dorothy Thompson.

THE OFFICIAL communique, issued after the conference between Mussolini and Hitler at the Brenner Pass, said that the two dictators had talked for two hours and a half, that relations were cordial and that they had parted in opposite directions.

Reading the various reports leads one to the conclusion that this about covers everything.

STILL, certain interesting questions remain to be asked. For the reports from Rome and from Berlin do not agree.

From Rome, and from the Vatican, comes an 11-point peace program. The American correspondents in Rome report that this is the peace program presented by Hitler to Sumner Welles, and by Ribbentrop to the Pope, in his recent visit to Rome. The American correspondents to Rome state that Sumner Welles had asked Mussolini to try to get Hitler to mitigate these terms.

From Berlin, however, comes the statement that Hitler stands on the peace proposals made in his October speech before the Reichstag.

Now, the interesting thing about the German terms from the Vatican is that they ignore Russia altogether. They divide central and eastern Europe into a sphere of influence to be shared by Italy and Germany—chiefly Germany—while the rest of Europe returns to Mussolini's original conception of a four-power pact. The 11 points in these proposals do not coincide in all the reports. Mr. Matthews' report, in the New York Times, has an extra item, namely, No. 2. This is: "A return to the four-power pact, which would take the form of a new European 'directory' and serve as a sort of substitute for the League of Nations. The four states—Britain, France, Germany and Italy—would divide the zones of influence in Europe and would inaugurate an anti-Bolshevist policy with the idea of 'liberating' Russia, by arms if necessary, from Bolshevism."

The presence of this item in one report and the implication of all the items in the other reports indicate that Hitler is playing two games—on the one side he is conciliating and trying to use Russia, and on the other he is prepared to make a common front against Russia.

Whether this is really his game or whether he has simply been trying to use Sumner Welles as a "stooge" for confusing world opinion and for making the Allies appear as the aggressors and the rejectors of a peace that would at least appeal to the conservative and capitalistic interests throughout the Allied countries and the neutral world is a matter for speculation.

Everyone will recall that at the time of Ribbentrop's visit to the Vatican the news was reported that Ribbentrop again affirmed the possible restoration of the anti-Comintern pact. And it is worthy of note that the Brenner conversations are treated in Moscow with stony silence.

NOW, ON TOP of this report, or rather coincident with it, comes the assertion from Berlin that Italy and Russia will shortly get together. The "new order" in Europe is not going to be made—according to these latest statements from Berlin—on the basis of anything like the eleven points, but is to be made by the three powers—Germany, Italy and Russia—over the "complete capitulation" of Britain and France.

In other words, the peace proposals made to Welles and to the Vatican were just so much dust thrown in the eyes of the western Allies and the neutrals.

Actually, it would seem, on the basis of national interests, that there is just one point on which Germany, Russia and Italy have a common interest, and that is to keep the arena of the war out of eastern Europe and the Balkans. One may presume that this matter was discussed between Hitler and Mussolini and that on this they agreed. But it does not make their interests in this part of the world synonymous by any means.

The dispatches on Monday from Berlin indicated that Mussolini was prepared to cast in his lot with Germany to the whole extent of the military alliance. The dispatches from Rome indicate that this matter is still entirely open. It is probable that Hitler asked whether Mussolini would give more active help if a peace offensive should fail, and that Mussolini replied, "No." Perhaps for that reason the peace offensive issues wholly from the Vatican. It is possible that Hitler suggested a declaration of solidarity between Moscow, Rome and Berlin, and it seems certain that Mussolini said, "No."

THE ELEVEN POINTS are dished up for the United States, the Vatican, Mussolini, the financial and capitalistic interests in France and Britain and the conservative neutrals like Sweden. Hitler's view of the United States is that it is a nation dominated by purely capitalist interests, anxious for peace for reasons of trade. In every country including this one, Nazi agents are playing up the possibility of a big trade pact, a world-wide deal to divide the earth into spheres of influence. On the other front, the Nazis are appealing to the world's workers and the world's pacifists by presenting the western powers as "imperialists" and by trying to make the Allies appear as the aggressors and responsible for the continuation of the war.

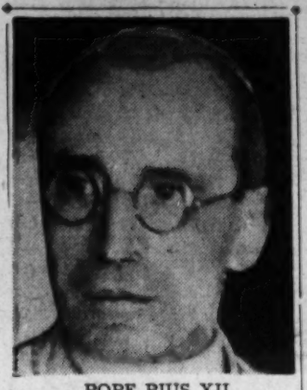
Russia's attitude is simple and clear. She does not intend to "pull any chestnuts out of the fire" except her own, nor to become embroiled in the war between Germany and the west. As Russia has changed her front once since this war began, so she will change it again if and when the change suits her.

The war between the west and the Nazis is satisfactory to Stalin. He knows that Germany cannot get on without him; it is good Marxian and Leninist (and Trotskyist) tactics to hope for a long war which he believes will mean the end of capitalism. But an overwhelming German victory would be catastrophic to Stalin unless Germany is Bolshevized completely.

Therefore, his aid to Germany will be just enough to keep the war going and not enough to insure a German victory as long as Hitler remains in power in Germany.

The Russians are giving every encouragement to the Leftists (extremist Nazis) in Germany.

As for Italy, she is on a very bad spot. Economically she now has to compete in eastern Europe with the political and military pressure of Germany and with the cash of the Allies and take account of the almost total antipathy of her population to war.



POPE PIUS XII

Is Mussolini Now Ready To Embrace Stalin?

UNDOUBTEDLY, Mussolini wants the war to stop now without anyone obtaining a victory, because, except in a stalemate, he is sure to be the loser. If he assists Germany actively and Germany wins the war and dictates the peace, Italy will enjoy the role of being one of the larger and technically independent provinces of Germany. If the Allies win the war and dictate the peace without the coporation of Italy, Italy will be the prisoner of the British and French navies. If Germany wins the war and dictates the peace, the outlook for Russia will be very bad, unless Russia succeeds in Bolshevizing Germany. That as a matter of fact, is Russia's great advantage in this war—one possessed by no other nation. There is an enormous reservoir of pro-Communist feeling in Germany. The entire Nazi regime rests upon the army, which has always been pro-Russian and is not interested in capitalism, and the masses, whose support is absolutely essential to Hitler, whereas the support of capitalists is totally unessential. Hitler may still be hoping to turn the German masses against Russia, but his more radical supporters certainly are not. They are turning farther and farther to the left. And the army certainly regards Russia as a more important asset than Italy, and rightly so from either a military or an economic standpoint.

THE DOUBLE GAME played by the Nazis become apparent, and it must be considered as part of the propaganda war which aims to befuddle and demoralize the Allies and the neutrals.

Meanwhile, Hitler has made a bad reckoning, I belive, regarding Britain and France. For those two empires are coming closer and closer together in economic and military bonds that amount practically to a merger, even to the pooling of the colonies, and they are not fighting for capitalism, as it turns out, but for national survival, which is something else again. Hitler has not a single reliable ally, because he has not an ally whose interests really coincide with his own. The British and French are also on a bad spot, but they are definitely on it together.

AND THE United States is putting herself in a ridiculous position. She is joining the Vatican in an attempt to moralize to the world. The Vatican is powerless—powerless even to protect the Church in any totalitarian country except Italy, where the Vatican lives by the grace of the Fascist government. The United States is still unwilling to face the fact that the struggle now going on is absolutely bound to change the social and economic structure of most of the world and will have the most profound repercussions upon this hemisphere from Alaska to Cape Horn before it is over. We are neither militarily nor morally prepared for the world of the next decade, which will not be a comfortable middle-class world based on the morals of the nineteenth century, whatever else it is or may become.

Archduke Otto Receives Sample of Democracy At Ex-Envoy's Luncheon

New York, March 19.

YOU remember, from the newspapers or the newsreels, how the young Archduke Otto, the nice-looking Hapsburg with the Anthony Eden lip-fringe, said he had come to our great free country to study the workings of our democracy in a very intensive way. Well, the kid certainly got off to a good start before he left our outpost in Washington.

Mrs. Vanderbilt

He went right smack to the heart of his democratic studies before he could catch his breath. His first lesson was learned at an intimate high tea tossed by Mr. and Mrs. James W. Gerard at their hovel on Fifth avenue. Mr. Gerard was our Ambassador to Berlin during the first half of the last big war. I am informed that Mrs. Gerard gave the worthy lad a sample of American democracy at work with a nice curtsy, though the attractive lad has no more throne than you and I have.

Among the guests was Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, current queen of the local "cliff-dwellers," and when the royal tea party was over, Mrs. Vanderbilt, who never seems allergic to royalty and even nobility of the better sort, invited Otto into her elderly Rolls and whisked him down to the famous "640," which she keeps going on Fifth avenue in the very shadow of the Center built by those parvenu Rockefellers. Hodson, the historic butler of the clan, had the old house ablaze, and the honest youth was given his second close sight of our democratic processes there. He was taken on a tour of the mansion, and shown the pictures, including a lot of his regal relatives.

Bathe at Least Once Each Day, Doctor Advises

How often should one bathe? Opinions vary. To the average fastidious person accustomed to the satisfactions of bathing, however, there is no fixed maximum, and once a day is a usual minimum.

"The normal skin should be bathed daily with soap and warm water," says Albert Strickler, M. D., professor of dermatology at Temple University medical school, in his book, "The Skin—Its Care and Treatment." A five or ten minute stay in the tub is sufficient, Dr. Strickler declares, and the warm cleansing bath is best taken before retiring at night.

"Certain individuals," he further states, "may experience some form of skin irritation, such as itching, after the daily warm bath. This discomfort, while not serious, is rather annoying, and is most apt to occur during cold weather. When this occurs, relief may be obtained by anointing the body with olive oil after the bath, or by dusting the skin with some bland powder."

Chicken Pie
The Easy Way

A DEEP dish main course pie with hot gravy bubbling through a tender crust is a dish that is a quick one to make and sure to receive cheers. A new version is one that does not require the cooking of a chicken, but the use of condensed chicken noodle soup. It's a lovely dish as well as a quick one, and this is how it goes:

Quick Chicken Pie

Pie Filling: Melt 2 tablespoons butter, and add 3 tablespoons flour and blend thoroughly. Add 2 cans condensed chicken noodle soup and 1 cup water and cook until thickened. Then add ½ cup cooked celery, ½ cup cooked carrots and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Put into casserole and cover with Sweet Potato Biscuits. Serves 6-7.

Sweet Potato Biscuit Cover:

Sift 1 cup flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and 1½ teaspoons salt together, then cut in 3 tablespoons shortening and add 1 cup mashed sweet potatoes. Add 3 tablespoons milk to make a soft but not moist dough. Roll about ½ inch thick and cut with biscuit cutter. Arrange over the chicken pie and bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, for 15 minutes or until done.

For Lovely Hair

Whether your hair is worn up or down, you want it too look soft and alluring. This comes best from frequent shampoos and nightly brushing. By taking the small amount of time necessary to make these practices a regular habit, you will find it easy to dispense with elaborate hairdressing except for special occasions. The sheen and vitality of beautiful hair are not dependent on professional waving but spring from good health and thorough cleanliness of hair and scalp.

Morbidly Self-Conscious Because of Her Large Nose, Schoolgirl Becomes Recluse; Mother Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a daughter, 16 years of age, who goes to high school. She is very self-conscious about the size of her nose, which is a trifle larger than normal. Many times I have found her crying about it. She says that unless she gets an operation on her nose she will be unhappy for the remainder of her life. I have tried to explain to her that many attractive persons have large features, but she will not listen.

She claims that she is a social outcast on account of her nose—because other girls are invited to parties and dances while she is left behind. She is actually ashamed to show her face among strangers and is always saying that she is "funny looking and nobody wants her around." She has many girl friends and they all seem to like her. But this constant worry about her nose is making her irritable and gloomy, and my own health is breaking under the strain of her constant unhappiness. I am desperate and would like your advice immediately.

WORRIED MOTHER.

Three-Point Program For Achieving Aplomb

DEAR W. M.: Odd as it may seem, this is a case for a medical diagnostician. The first question to be determined is whether your daughter's nose actually is abnormally large or misshapen; or whether it is her attitude toward her physiognomy that is abnormal. Diagnosticians are familiar with both types of cases; and in the one case, they might see fit to refer the client to a reputable plastic surgeon, whereas in the other they would send her to a psychologist for the purpose of "treating" her viewpoint.

And if she were to consult a psychologist, undoubtedly he would recommend, among other things, that she employ the arts of cosmetics, costuming and coiffure to accent her good points and camouflage her defects, if any. The shape of one's nose can (seemingly) be magically altered by skillful application of individually appropriate shades of foundation cream, rouge, eye shadow, etc.; by reshaping the eyebrows; by re-styling one's hairdress, and by "framing" the subtly retouched face with costumes the lines of which give the countenance artistic distinction. By such means a formerly offending feature is sometimes transformed into a fascinating facial characteristic.

Plastic surgery, as you perhaps know, is an expensive and not always a successful undertaking. Unfortunately, too, quack practitioners abound in this field, preying upon the gullibility of misguided, melancholy individuals. The reputable plastic surgeon is primarily concerned with rebuilding accidentally disfigured or disease-ravished bodies, and not with frivolous beautification. But when a diagnostician discovers that plastic surgery is necessary to restore personality health to a neurotic individual, he can be trusted to send the patient to a surgeon whose work is recognized by the American College of Surgeons. And it is all-important, in my opinion, to have this type of recommendation before submitting to plastic surgery.

However, I feel safe in saying that your daughter can dispense with the services of a plastic surgeon if (1) she gets a diagnostician's objective estimate of her features; (2) talks with a psychologist, perhaps, for the purpose of laying the ghost of her neurotic preoccupation with the size of her nose; and (3) intelligently invokes a Cinderella transformation by taking a course of instructions from the foremost make-up artist in the city, and thereafter dressing herself to complete the picture that artist creates. Is Discussion Impossible Between Men and Wives?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your answer, of March 7, to the wife who shrinks from her husband's lovemaking since learning of his infidelity (yet dares not let him know she has discovered his secret) was interesting to me. I was equally interested in the minister's viewpoint on the subject, which you published March 16.

I am a married woman, and I wish to say that as recently as two years ago I would have indorsed wholeheartedly your advice to her, namely, to invite a judicious discussion of the reasons why they are drifting apart. Even today I think your advice is sound—theoretically or idealistically. That is the way things should be. But, being a realist (or having become one), I am inclined to agree with the minister that it is impossible for an unfaithful husband to discuss his peccadillos with his wife.

I encountered somewhere the statement, "If you would learn about men, go to a man for your information." This is equivalent to saying that it is impossible for a member of either sex to understand or interpret the opposite sex. And I believe we must agree that a woman is essentially emotional and intuitive, whereas a man is logical and intellectual. How, then, are they ever to learn to "speak each other's language?" I think the answer is this—the man must develop more feeling, and the woman, more reason. Having done this, they will be ready—but not until then—to apply and profit by your advice.

Man, as I see him in his present state of development, is almost entirely dependent upon woman to bring spiritual love and intuitive understanding to their intimate relationsihps. I am inclined to go further and say that woman is man's sole link to the spiritual, at present. And so, no matter how unfair it may seem, the burden is on womankind to bring about that better state of affairs in which the sexes, at last, will have achieved mutual understanding and balanced cooperation. ARDENT READER.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Reducing On Club Plan Is Suggested

Overweights Need To Get Together On Problems

By Ida Jean Kain

THIS is a great country for clubs and there are some with unique membership requirements—a vanishing hairline, bachelordom, or the talent for telling a tall tale, or for judging good food! But so far as I know there is no such organization devoted solely to the good riddance of avoirdupois and I propose that we start one, and that we call it the "100-Pound Club."

The first qualification for membership would be the registration, on a reliable scale, of 100 pounds too much yeight. And the second and last, a sincere desire on the part of the applicant to slim down to her old sylph. There are more eligibles than you might suppose.

The club ought to work out 100 per cent. Most overweights are extremely gregarious—that's why they become overweight. When a crowd of people get together, what do they do? They eat—sooner or later. But it is a question which they enjoy more, the food or the company. Now, if reducing could be given a similar social aspect, it would be much more pleasant

Must Change Food Habits

Members of the "100-Pound Club" could use the column for an exchange of their experiences and, no matter how hard the going, feel certain they had plenty of company. From the letters of women who have already reduced 100 pounds, it would seem that the loneliness of the undertaking was worse even than the long-term calorie counting.

If you qualify as a member of this club you will not have to diet. Dismiss the thought from your mind! You will have to completely change your food habits . . . the wrong food habits made you overweight in the first place. Unless you changed them, you couldn't expect to lose very much weight or to keep it lost.

Exercise is necessary when reducing to prevent sagging muscles

Those 100 Pounds Too Heavy Are Eligible to Join

You might as well know what's ahead of you before taking the first step—and that is a visit to your doctor. Have him check your heart and blood pressure before you make up your program. Your doctor will not object to your adopting highly protective menus that improve your health while decreasing your weight. But whether or not you are able to take general exercise will depend on your physical condition.

Exercises Necessary

You must, however, take specific exercises to strengthen the abdominal muscles so that the lost fat is replaced with good healthy muscle tissue. Otherwise, as weight is lost, the abdominal organs will sag. Abdominal exercises need not be strenuous. In tomorrow's article, some of the best and easiest will be outlined for you 100-pound overweights.

You can plan to lose your excess poundage in from 12 to 18 to 24 months. If you try to do it in 12 months, you will have to take your reducing very seriously . . . you must have your doctor's permission to lose that fast, and must adhere to a rigorous program of massage and supervised exercise.

Lord Lothian Proves His Diplomatic Skill

Before the Women's National Press Club, He Leaves Questioners Wondering Whether They Got Answers or Evasions

By Hope Ridings Miller

SPEAKING BEFORE ONE of the largest luncheons of the Women's National Press Club this year, the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, yesterday proved he is one of the most skilled diplomats ever to come to Washington.

HOPE R. MILLER

Questions presented in writing ahead of time, as well as those voiced on the spur of the moment were answered by the Ambassador with a minimum of beating about the bush. But there was a strict understanding at the beginning, and again at the close of the luncheon, that the envoy was not to be quoted, unless he was allowed "to read the text" before it appeared in print.

Discussing at length the situation in India—when virtually everybody present was burning with questions about the war in Europe—the guest-speaker told something of his association with Mahatma Gandhi, and India's position in the current conflict.

Answering questions later, he never once took refuge behind that old diplomatic stand-by, "I'd rather not reply t othat." But more than once, after he had finished a statement, club members and their guests were not quite sure whether he had cleverly evaded, or answered the question.

Lord Lothian's technique of talking before an audience is something to make you sit up and take notice. Invariably, after a discourse tending toward the heavy side, he drives home a point with a terse one-sentence summary that is both amusing and effective.

Gathered in to hear him yesterday were a number of prominent guests, including several members of the British Embassy staff. The British Counselor and Mrs. N. M. Butler were there; also Mrs. F. J. A. Coleby, wife of the assistant naval attache, and Miss Irene Boyle.

Seated at the head table with the envoy and members of his staff were Sir Wilmott and Lady Lewis, Denys Smith, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Florence Kerr and several members of the club.

Still other guests seen in the throng were Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Bruce Smith, who is planning a small luncheon for Saturday; Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Frederick Farrington, Mrs. Rodney Southwick, Mrs. E. G. Warren, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Theodore Tiller, Mrs. Vernon Lowrey, Mrs. Walter Louchheim and many others.

BRITISH SIDELIGHTS: The only photographer who crashed the gate at the famous garden party for Their Britanic Majesties may not know it—but a couple of shots he made that day are the only ones of the party that now hang on the walls of the British Embassy . . . The veil of mystery surrounding Miss Margaret Shaw, fiancee of the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope, seems to be lifting . . . A number of Washingtonians are recalling that she visited here briefly last spring with the Dowager Countess of Linday, sister-in-law of the former British Ambassador, and that she was entertained at luncheon at the embassy . . . But nobody seems to remember anything about her except that she's "tall and attractive." . . . In town for a visit is Denis Conan Doyle, of London, eldest surviving son of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Accompanied by his wife, Mr. Doyle is staying at the Mayflower. On his first trip to this country in 18 years, he has been on a lecture tour for the past five months.

At last, Washingtonians who met Margery Sharpe, British author and playwright, when she came here last spring, are having a chance to see her most recent play, "Lady in Waiting," at the National Theater. At a luncheon given by Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, I sat next to Miss Sharpe and had the time of my life listening to one witty conversation after another. I remember particularly that Miss Sharpe was very much interested in another guest there, Thyra Samter Winslow, well-known American writer.

"THE NAME," said Miss Sharpe, "is vaguely familiar. But what did you saw she had written?"

I came through with a long list of titles, none of which seemed to strike home in Miss Sharpe's memory. "I suppose," she said finally, with a sigh of resignation, "that I've never read anything she's written. Are they by any chance those coonskin type of stories so many American writers write?"

On being told that they definitely were not, Miss Sharpe looked up brightly. "Then the only thing for me to do is to avoid getting into any sort of conversation with her. Once two writers get started, there's no stopping them, provided one happens to ask the other what she has written."

Incidentally, Miss Sharpe told me that her book, "The Nutmeg Tree," on which the current play is based, "was a tremendous shock" to all her family.

NEWCOMERS TO Washington and a writer in town to gather material for a magazine article shared the spotlight yesterday afternoon at a small and informal cocktail party given by Dr. and Mrs. Edward Acheson in their apartment at the Governor Shepherd. Mr. and Mrs. John McCormack, the former of whom is on the staff of the New York Times and was recently transferred here from Canada, were guests of honor. Miss Helen Vind, who is here digging out a story for Fortune Magazine, was among those present.

Receiving informally, Mrs. Acheson, who recently returned from a brief stay in New York, was trimly turned out in a becoming frock, fashioned with a gray crepe accordion-plaited skirt and a blouse of grey and white polka dots. From 5 to 7 o'clock, about 25 guests attended the fete which is one in a series planned for this season.

Ruth Patton, Noted Horsewoman, White House Aide, to Be Wed

MISS RUTH ELLEN PATTON,
accomplished equestrienne, whose engagement is announced today by her parents, Col. and Mrs. George S. Patton, jr.

Father of Bride-to-Be Is Commandant of Fort Myer; Family Well Known in Capital, Where Col Patton Has Served Four Tours

Of interest to residential society as well as in Army circles is the announcement made today by Col. and Mrs. George S. Patton, jr., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Ellen Patton, to Lieut. James Willoughby Totten, U. S. Field Artillery. Lieut. Totten, who is an aide at the White House, is the son of Col. and Mrs. James Totten, of this city.

The prospective bride was graduated from the Madeira School and Dobbs Ferry in New York. Lieut. Totten prepared for West Point at Shadman and was graduated from the Military Academy in the class of '35.

Although Col. Patton arrived here in the fall of 1938 to take over command of Fort Myer, the family is well-known in Washington, for Col. Patton has served four tours of duty here. Just before leaving Washington the last time, Miss Patton was presented to society at a large party at the Sulgrave Club.

Col. and Mrs. Patton are riding enthusiasts. During their last tour of duty here Mrs. Patton was comaster, with her husband, of the Cobbler Hunt in Virginia. The Patton family made headlines several years ago by sailing their own 52-foot schooner from California to Hawaii, where Col. Patton was stationed. While in Hawaii they took another cruise of 3,000 miles in the South Sea Islands.

Miss Patton, who is the niece of Mrs. Keith Merrill, of this city, is also a very fine horsewoman and sailor, as well as a gifted musician. She is the sister of Mrs. John Knight Waters, wife of Lieut. Waters.

Belgian Envoy Host at Dinner For Archduke

Archduke Otto, claimant to the Austro-Hungarian throne, was guest of honor at a dinner given last evening by the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van de Straten-Ponthoz. Empress Zita, and his brothers and sisters young Otto makes his home in a small chateau near Brussels.

The Archduke and his brother, Archduke Felix, will leave today for a motor tour of the Middlewest, visiting agricultural centers and automobile factories. He will fly back to Europe on the Clipper April 13.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford L. Johnson announce the marriage of their daughter, Alice Lorena, to Dwight Bonham Alley, son of Mr. and Mrs. James O. Alley, of Alexandria, Va., on Friday, March 15.

Millers Fete Judge Lindsey At Dinner

Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller entertained at dinner last evening in honor of Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of the Superior Court of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Lindsey, who are spending a few days at the Shoreham Hotel.

The party took place in Justice and Mrs. Miller's apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. Covers were laid for 12, and guests were Justice Bolitha Laws (Mrs. Laws is ill), Judge Fay Bentley, Miss Beatrice Clephane, Dean Wayne Morris, of the University of Oregon Law School; Prof. and Mrs. Hector Spalding and Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Hankin.

Justice and Mrs. Miller have cards out for another dinner on April 10. Honor guests then will be Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas.

Party Honors Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, entertained at a luncheon yesterday in one of the series given by the Cabinet hostesses.

Mrs. Jackson, with her daughter, Miss Mary Jackson, will leave tomorrow to join the Attorney General and his son, William Jackson, who are in thee South. They intend to remain through Easter in the South, where the Attorney General went to recuperate from an illness.

Scribblers' Club Criticizes Literary Efforts at Tea

The Scribblers' Club of the Junior League held a meeting yesterday at the clubhouse on Massachusetts avenue at which literary efforts of the members were criticized. "Afterward," said Mrs. E. G. Wrenn, "the blows were softened by tea"

The group meets from time to time to submit poems, works of fiction and other efforts to colleagues for helpful suggestions. Mrs. A. Z. Foster Wood, president of the Scribblers, served as hostess yesterday

Among those present were Mrs. Merrill G. Beede, Mrs. Warren Bouve, Miss Jane Culbertson, Mrs. Arthur Dunstan, Mrs. Millard West and Mrs. Warren.

Newell Jameses Announce Birth

Lieut. and Mrs. Newell C James announce the birth of a daughter, Eleanor Stone James, at Fort Bragg, N C., March 6. The child is a granddaughter of former Representative W. F. James and Mrs. James, of Michigan, and Col. and Mrs Spencer B Akin, of this city.

Former Representative James was long a member of the Military Appropriations Committee. He was one of the main supporters of the program which has been so effective in housing the Army in recent years. Col. Akin is on duty in the office of the Chief Signal Officer.

At the Sulgrave

Mrs. Phillip M. Rhinelander, who is here from Boston, is stopping at the Sulgrave Club.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Beatrice Phillips, Daughter of Ambassador, Studies Mechanics in Garage Here at Night

A NIGHT COURSE in mechanics at a local garage has been occupying the spare evenings of Miss Beatrice Phillips recently. The daughter of the U. S. Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. William Phillips can now change a tire in nothing flat, and will sail April 6 on the Washington to work as chauffeur for Miss Anne Morgan's group in France.

"Bee" Phillips will report first in Paris, where the Comite de Secours Civil has its headquarters. Then she will be sent to one of the small villages in which Miss Morgan's aides are helping make life easier for several thousand French peasants evacuated from their homes near the Maginot Line. She will chauffeur doctors and nurses around and otherwise make herself useful.

WHEN HER MOTHER finally obtained last fall a passport from the State Department to join her husband in Rome, Miss Phillips remained behind with her younger sister, Anne. She has been living at the Anchorage and studying typing and first aid at the Red Cross between courses at the garage.

The State Department, incidentally, does not deny passports to Americans who wish to do humanitarian work for the belligerent nations.

ANOTHER POLE who found himself in Washington without a job after the political purge which resulted in the recent shakeup at the Embassy here has discovered work to do. Edward Weintal has organized a news letter on foreign affairs which he will sell in this country. Until two or three years ago he was with the Embassy and afterwards resigned to head a Polish news and information service here.

Rafael Lepkowski, secretary of the Polish Embassy until the purge, now has a job selling insurance with a Washington firm.

ODDS AND ENDS: An attractive member of the local younger set has applied for a job as a census taker. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Richard Smith, of New York, will spend the week-end with the latter's mother, Mrs. McCook Knox, in her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street. Her mother will speak over the radio today in the interests of the forthcoming flower sale to be held on the steps of the Washington Cathedral. . . . Miss Belle Johnson will leave soon to visit Mrs. L. J. Wiltse at Nahant. On her way back to Washington, Miss Johnson will spend a few days with her sister, Mrs. Gardner Emmons, of New York.

PEOPLE I'D LIKE to meet: The wife of a public figure who has never declaimed modestly, "But nobody's interested in ME!" . . . a woman executive who vows her real ambition is to get married and who never contrives intimate dinners for six in her clever modern apartment . . . A gifted young painter with a large independent income . . . A foreigner who thinks Americans are too kind hearted for their own good.

A Hollywood star whose mother prefers not to accompany her famous offspring anywhere . . . Somebody who says "Frankly, I dote on publicity" . . . A man who has never remarked "I don't understand women's hats" . . . A Communist who refuses to ask friends in unless he has enough food and liquor on hand to go around twice . . . Someone who has never stated "I've often thought that if I had the time I could do a bit of writing myself."

Mrs. W. H. Ellis Entertains Garden Club

Mrs. Wade H. Ellis entertained at a luncheon party yesterday for members of the Garden Club of Alexandria at her home on Massachusetts avenue. Jonquils and lavender sweet peas adorned the table.

Guests included Mrs. Joseph P. Crockett, president of the club, Mrs. Norman Davis, Mrs. Phillip Campbell, Mrs. Thomas B. Cochran, Mrs. Frank M. Dillard, Miss Jeannette Francis, Miss Marjorie Hall, Mrs. Charles Leadbetter, Miss Mary Lindsey, Mrs. William B. Lloyd, Mrs. Richard C. Marshall and Mrs. John Potts.

Still others attending the luncheon were Mrs. Rathbone Smith, Mrs. C. C. Wall, Mrs. Richard Williams, Mrs. Atherton McCondray, Mrs. Andrew Mitchell, Mrs. Robert M. Reese, Mrs. Willoughby Reed, Mrs. A. D. Rorex, Mrs. Royd R. Sayers, Mrs. James Sherier, Mrs. Louis S. Scott, Mrs. Charles Henry Smith and Mrs. William J. Boothe.

Following the luncheon Mrs. William Seipp, of Middleburg, entertained guests with a talk, accompanied by garden slides, of her recent tour of the British Isles.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, wife of Justice Reed, is visiting her former home in Maysville, Ky. She is expected to return to her apartment at the Mayflower for Easter.

Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, wife of the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, has arrived at her villa in Palm Beach accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzgerald, of Boston. She will be joined in a few days by all the children except Miss Rosemary Kennedy, who is in London with her father. The others are attending schools in the North.

The United States Minister to Canada and Mrs. James H. R. Cromwell flew from Ottawa to Toronto Sunday night to place a wreath on Toronto's Cenotaph. A civic reception followed the ceremony on Monday and the envoy received an address of welcome and a golden key to the city.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, was guest of honor at a small luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. J. L. Houghteling at her home.

Representative and Mrs. William H. Wheat, of Rantoul, Ill., have returned to their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel after a short visit to Rantoul.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, who is vacationing in Palm Beach, was a recent luncheon guest at the Everglades Club of Capt. and Mrs. John H. Gibbons, of Washington.

Count Maximiliano de Henckel is here from Beverly Hills, Calif., and is at the Mayflower. Since leaving Paris several years ago, he has spent considerable time in Lima, Peru, and then traveled in this country extensively before settling in California.

Miss Lenore Rosenthal will return tomorrow from Philadelphia, where she has been visiting her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Merkin.

Mrs. Lucille Trew, of Washington, who has been at the Venetian Hotel in Miami, has been joined by her mother, Mrs. J. E. Damron, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wills, of Greenwich, Conn., and their two children are spending the Easter vacation at the Wardman Park.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hays, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Cohn, of Pittsburgh, are at the Carlton for several days.

Mrs. Adlai Mann is spending a few weeks in Miami.

Stars to Be Feted

James D. Proctor will entertain at a small cocktail party at the Carlton on Sunday at 6 o'clock in honor of John Garfield, Aline MacMahon and Harry Carey, well-known film stars who are returning to the stage in the play, "Heavenly Express" which will have its premier on Monday at the National.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

KEEN INTEREST is being shown in the hunt country in the horse show to be held this evening in the riding hall of Fort Myer. Mrs. Dorothy N. Lee, of Middleburg, will be among those up for the show. She will exhibit her hunter, Red Fox, that will compete for the hunter championship.

Starting promptly at 7:45 o'clock there will be six classes, as follows: (1) Student Team Jumping, (2) Open Hunters, (3) Fault and Out, (4) Hunter Hacks, (5) Open Hunters, (6) Open Jumpers. This is the last of the series of four indoor horse shows that have been held in the Riding Hall at Fort Myer. In addition to the classes there will be an exhibition by some Army men. The drill for this show will be one seldom seen at Fort Myer and is one of the most spectacular ever presented by members of this command.

MRS. FRANK C. LITTLETON, jr., has recently returned from Washington, where she visited her cousin, Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany, jr. Mr. Dulany and his son, Ben Dulany, of the University of Virginia, are spending several days at the family estate, Oakley, near Upperville.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Douglas, of Long Island, flew down to their Virginia place near Middleburg yesterday to stay until after Easter. Mrs. Douglas was the former Miss Peggy Phipps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Phipps.

Mrs. S. Preston Luck, Mr. and Mrs. William Luck, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Luck, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Ashton, all of Middleburg, will motor to Washington to attend the wedding of Miss Frances Louise Ashton and Hazel T. Welsh on Saturday. The ceremony will take place at high noon in St. Matthew's Cathedral. The bride and bridegroom-elect are both members of the Redland Hunt in Maryland, of which Mr. Welsh is honorary whip. Mr. and Mrs. Hall Hammond, of Baltimore, will also be on hand for the wedding. Mrs. Hammond was formerly Miss Elizabeth Luck, of Middleburg, and is a cousin of the bride-to-be.

MRS. ORTON L. PRIME, of Oconomowoc, Wis., has leased one of of Miss Margaret Frazier's homes on Thirtieth street in Georgetown for six weeks. She motors out to the hunt country several days a week, where she follows the hounds with the Blue Ridge Hunt at Millwood, frequently joining the Middleburg and Warrenton Hunts.

MRS. THOMAS BOLLING BYRD, of Boyce, was in Middleburg on Monday with her daughter, Miss Lucy Mitchell, who is on spring vacation from Foxcroft School. Mrs. Byrd, with her son, Billy Mitchell, jr., will leave for Detroit, today, to visit Mrs. Byrd's father, Sidney Miller.

Mrs. Samuel Marshall will leave on March 22 for Milwaukee, Wis., where she will stay with her mother, Mrs. C. D. Mann, and spend spring vacation with her daughter, Miss Sally Marshall, who is attending Downer College in Milwaukee.

Housekeepers Alliance Honors Mrs. Wiley

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley was honored yesterday by the Housekeepers Alliance at its meeting at the Y. W. C. A. as its pioneer club woman. Mrs. Wiley, who has been a member for 28 years, has held every office in the organization, except that of treasurer.

It was through the Alliance she was nominated for president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, of which she became president in 1932, for a three-year term. She is now chairman of the civic committee of the club and in that capacity offered two motions yesterday, one opposing proposed legislation to permit children to appear in professional stage performances, and the other reaffirming the alliance's stand against the proposed punitive tax for chain stores.

Mrs. Wiley is now national chairman of the division of Indian welfare for the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Because of her interest in this activity the alliance's gift to her, presented yesterday by Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, the president, was a thimble and thread basket, made by Indians on a reservation in Maine.

Colors Presented To Mrs. Kebler

In addition to her activity in the federation, Mrs. Wiley is a past president of the Women's City Club, chairman of its civic section and is chairman of the National Woman's Party which is leading in the movement for equal rights.

Her name will be submitted for consideration among those of members of other federated clubs in the District for the choice of the District's pioneer clubwoman. This will be entered in the golden jubilee contest of the General Federation, which, at its Atlantic City convention in 1941, will select the pioneer clubwoman of the Nation.

Mrs. Lyman F. Kebler, who has had 27 years continuous membership and service in the alliance, was runner-up to Mrs. Wiley, and was presented by Mrs. Newburgh with the colors of the society.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel was a guest at the meeting and led in the salute to the flag. Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, chairman of the Field Army of Women in the Cancer Control movement, also was a guest. Mrs. Herbert G. Powell was named chairman of this work for the alliance. Mrs. Arthur N. Baggs, a past president of the society, and chairman of the Gray Ladies of the District, attended in her Gray Lady uniform and asked for volunteer Red Cross workers.

Importance of Plan Stressed by Speaker

Miss Helen Holbrook, of the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, was the guest speaker of the afternoon, discussing a subject almost as important as Easter bonnets—spring house cleaning.

She emphasized the importance of having a plan and following it out in the progress of the cleaning. The floor, if an old one, should be scraped, sealed and waxed, she said; painted walls should be washed with a solution of neutral soap from the bottom up—streaks would run down from the top and leave streaks. She recommended goats hair instead of lambs wool brushes. The rugs, she said should be shampooed every other season to remove heavy dirt which a vacuum cleaner will not remove.

The program also included a short talk on air comfort in the home by E. V. Ross and a violin solo by Elizabeth Vosmek, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. F. J. Vosmek.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Olive E. Madden and Mrs. Morgan Otterback. Mrs. Henry Morton Phillips is chairman of hospitality.

B. P. W. Dinner Set Tomorrow

"Women's Economic Opportunity in a Democracy" is the program theme for the monthly dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club scheduled for 6:30 o'clock tomorrow evening at the Admiral Club.

Ernest J. McCormick, assistant chief of the occupation section, Bureau of the Census, will speak on "Women's Opportunity to Earn," and Miss S. Winifred Burwell, assistant trust officer of the National Metropolitan Bank, will discuss "Women's Opportunity to Own Property."

Before accepting his present position with the Census Bureau, McCormick was with the United States Employment Service, where he assisted in working out a "dictionary of occupations," which is now in course of publication.

Miss Burwell is a past president of the Zonta Club of Washington and is one of the two women trust officers in the District of Columbia, Mrs. Helena D. Reed is the other.

The Pan American Mexican exhibits proved so popular at the recent club dinner meeting, it has been decided to feature displays whenever possible. At the meeting tomorrow evening, Miss Mary V. Robinson, director of the Division of Public Information, in the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, will present an exhibit illustrating various problems relating to the work of women.

The education committee has charge of the meeting. Miss Ora Marshino, the chairman, is being assisted by Mrs. Anna L. Burdick, Miss Esther Colvin, Miss Mabel E. Fredd and Miss Nina Schnell.

Maret School Play Participants Named

Among the Maret School students who have leading parts in the spring plays to be presented at the school tomorrow evening are Gene Cox, daughter of Representative and Mrs. E. E. Cox; Elizabeth Beck, daughter of the American consul general at Bermuda, and Mrs. William H. Beck; Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Monroe Hester's daughter, Jean, and Sonia Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Franklin Carter.

Radcliffe Alumnae Plan Benefit

Bachrach Studio.

Miss Jeanne Simmons, president of the Radcliffe Alumnae Club, which is sponsoring a benefit performance by the Washington Civic Theater at the Wardman Park Thursday evening, proceeds of which will go to the Radcliffe Scholarship Fund. Mrs. Horace Torbert, chairman, has announced the patron list headed by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Benet, whose nephew, Stephen Benet, is author of "The Devil and Daniel Webster," one of the plays to be given. Ecker, president of the Women's Board of Columbia Hospital, has appointed the following committees for the coming year: Mrs. John Lewis Smith, clinic committee; Mrs. Oscar Coolican, hospital inspection; Mrs. Lawrence Groner, membership; Mrs. Levi Cooke, publicity; Mrs. Barry Mohun, thrift shop; Mrs. Roger Robb, education; Mrs. Frank Conger Baldwin, finance; Mrs. John E. Parker, food, and Mrs. John Spaulding Flannery, library.

Mrs. Farrington's Reception Presents the Plight of China

Rey Scott Shows Film of Invaded Nation, Describes Life in Country At War; Miss Ida Pruitt Speaks

Attention was centered on the plight of China last night at the reception given by Mrs. Frederic Ernest Farrington at Chevy Chase Junior College. Her guests were invited to meet Rey Scott, who showed his natural color film "China's Comeback" and Miss Ida Pruitt, of Peiping and Hongkong, who told of the Chinese industrial cooperatives.

Receiving with the hostess and guest speakers, were Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kwang, of the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, who was chairman of the committee for Chinese relief in Manila, and there became interested in the cooperatives; Miss Edna Lonigan, Roger S. Greene and Miss Helen M. Loomis, of the China Information Service.

Mr. Scott returned late in November from his third trip to China. Commissioned by Life and Pathe Newsreel, he penetrated China and secured the first documentary color pictures of the war. He filmed flaming Shanghai in color; covered the bombardment of Nanking for the London Daily Telegraph, and was one of two cameramen to film the burning of Canton—described by observers as the world's largest fire.

When Mr. Scott arrived in the United States he brought with him the last panda to leave China, at least, so say the Chinese. He told a graphic and adventurous story of how he procured the animal 1,400 miles in the interior of China for the Chicago Daily News and transported it by airplane, ship and train to the Chicago zoo.

In his lecture and pictures, he told the story of the Chinese guerrillas, how they live and how they fight. He also had remarkable pictures taken in Chungking, the capital of China, Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek were shown in the colored film. Unusual pictures of the Miao tribes people, who live in the hills, also were among those he showed as well as the Indo-China highway, portraying a China known to few foreigners. The film showed the moving of industrial equipment into the interior and the establishment of new decentralized units of industry. War refugees were at work making necessities for the Chinese people and reestablishing themselves in their new homes aided by funds sent from the United States for China's relief. In this work of refugee rehabilitation, the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives play an important part. The story of this movement now sweeping over China was told vividly by Mr. Scott and shown in his film.

Miss Ida Pruitt, official representative of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives in the United States, talked on the need for support and encouragement by friends of China. Miss Pruitt was wearing an evening dress made of the hand-blocked cotton print produced by the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives. The cloth was woven and the dyes made by the cooperatives.

Mrs. Farrington was assisted by a group of Chinese women in Chinese gowns in serving Chinese tea, cakes and other refreshments, sent from New York.

Mrs. Janet Swift To Show Pictures Of Passion Play

Mrs. Janet Swift, writer and lecturer, will show stereopticon views of the Passion Play of Oberammergau, at 7:30 Friday night, at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women.

She has made a study of the production of the play and became personally acquainted with many of the actors during her visits to Oberammergau.

The program, which is under the education committee of the Washington branch, will include music, and will be presented as a Good Friday observance.

C. F. Kettering Heads Patent Program Unit

Commission Plans To Observe System's 150th Anniversary

Charles F. Kettering, president of General Motors Research Corporation, has accepted Secretary Hopkins' invitation to serve as chairman of a commission planning the observance of the 150th anniversary of the United States patent system, the Commerce Department announced yesterday.

The sesquicentennial will be marked April 10 with a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel, which more than 1,000 industrial leaders and Federal officials are expected to attend.

An exhibit opening Monday in the Patent Office will display models of numerous inventions that have played a decisive part in American industrial development. The original electric light bulb, perfected by Thomas Edison, the first Colt "six-shooter," and an early model sewing machine will be among the exhibits.

The display will continue through March 29. Conducted tours of the exhibit will be open to the general public at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., each day during the week.

From April 8 to 14 an "industrial parade" will be held in the Commerce Department auditorium. The exhibit will illustrate technological developments in major American industries since the patent system was created in 1790.

Civil Service Commission Sees Big Job if Hatch Bill Passes

Enforcement of Ban on Politics Would Begin in Midst of Campaign; Agency Covers 600,000 Workers

By Edward Ryan.

A business boost for the Civil Service Commission is on the program for the next few months if the enlarged "clean politics" bill becomes law.

The bill, now before the House Judiciary Committee, would throw extra policing duties on the commission, and it would be starting on its assignment in the midst of an election campaign.

Officials of the commission favor the expansion as a means of strengthening the merit system. They see in passage of the Hatch Act in its present form, however, an extra load for their investigating staff.

Most of the load, it was explained, would come at the beginning of enforcement. The experience of the commission in enforcing civil service regulations against political activity over more than 600,000 Government employs, showed that an average of one complaint came in every two days.

Since the existing Hatch regulations have not been tested in the heat of an election, officials said they had not determined how large an increase in the investigating division would be needed.

Dr. William H. Stead, employment official in the Government since 1933, has been appointed dean of the School of Business and Public Administration of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.

Dr. Stead is in charge of employment service in the Social Security Board, as assistant director of the Bureau of Employment Security. His new appointment will take effect July 1, and he will succeed Dr. Isador Loeb.

He served as associate director and later director of the U. S. Employment service, and continued in charge after the agency was transferred from the Labor Department to the Federal Security Administration last July.

Before coming to Washington he taught at Beloit College and the University of Minnesota, and for three years was executive secretary for the Minnesota Employment Stabilization Research Institute.

Randall Jones, Park Service lecturer, will show color pictures of scenes in the national parks, at 8 p. m. today in the Departmental Auditorium.

Jobs: Attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital, $1,260 a year; Wood Modelmaker for the Washington Navy Yard, $8.92 to $9.88 a day.

Nazis and Russians To Swap Refugees

Korakow, March 19.—German and Russian authorities have completed an agreement for the exchange of refugees between the general government and Russianized Poland, it was announced here today.

In line with the agreement some 14,000 former residents of now Russian districts who had fled when the Russian troops advanced, will be delivered over to the Russians in the near future.

Colored Units Back Hospital Building Plan

Racial and Religious Guarantees Asked In 10 Million Program

By the Associated Press

A spokesman for colored organizations indorsed the bill for a $10,000,000 hospital building program yesterday but advocated that its provisions against racial distrimination be strengthened.

Dr. Carl G. Roberts, chairman, department of surgery at Providence Hospital, Chicago, appearing before a Senate subcommittee, asked that it require the proposed hospitals be made available to all patients or qualified doctors, "without distrimination on account of sex, race, creed, color or religion."

Declaring that the high incidence of disease among colored people was a constant menace to the health of the white population as well, the colored leader added:

"Epidemics start in alleys, but they finish on the boulevards."

Reginald M. Atwater, of New York, representing the American Public Health Association, and Dr. C. D. Bowdoin, speaking for the Georgia department of public health, indorsed the legislation.

Atwater said it was a step in the right direction but not an adequate answer to "the need for a national health program."

(President Roosevelt has urged the hospital building program as a beginning on a national health program to be undertaken more fully at the next session of Congress.)

Dr. Bowdoin declared that 108 of Georgia's 159 counties had no hospitals and that the death rate in the State from virtually all diseases excepting cancer, was higher than the national average.

Conan Doyle's Son to Stand For Parliament, Use Seership

He Explains It Would Be a Big Help To Statesman to Know in Advance Just When Something Would Happen

When the next general election is held in England, one candidate for a seat in Parliament will be Denis Stewart Percy Conan Doyle, son of the creator of Sherlock Holmes, student of the "spiritual powers of seership."

DOYLE

These powers, Doyle said yesterday in an interview at the Mayflower Hotel, can be employed to great advantage in national and international life as they have been many times in the lives of individuals.

One of the first of the gifts of seership, he said, is the "power of foreseeing the future with extraordinary accuracy, even to the precise time and place of events.

"That is a very useful thing" he added.

Powers Are Spiritual

The powers of seership are spiritual in nature, and they have nothing to do with mediumship, which is psychic, according to Doyle. "I went through mediumship with my father when he was alive," he said. "Now, I am studying seership, which is a further development."

For both he rejects the term "spiritualism," which reminds him of "ghosts, clanking chains, and fake mediums—something phoney, very far removed from the true facts."

Instead, he speaks of "survival," or "life after death." He regards it as "the most important subject in the world," and thinks that "if properly understood its higher implications would have a great effect on world conditions."

If elected to Parliament he would not, he said, "hold seances with Gladstone or Lincoln." It is not through conferences with those who have died but through the spiritual powers seership can confer on a statesman that he gains added ability, said Doyle.

Doyle arrived in Washington yesterday with his wife, the former Princess Nina Mdivani; his five-year-old dachshund, schnitzel, and his French Moroccan turtle, Torty. He is on his way to Hollywood, where two film companies are considering making pictures of his father's books.

Another Confesses Fake Holdup

3 Bandit Suspects Seized Few Minutes After Robbery Of 2 Taxi Drivers

District police last night obtained their second confession in two days from a holdup "victim" that the robbery was faked. Two other persons were being detained while police were investigating their reports of being robbed.

Other major activity on the city's crime front was as follows:

Police captured three strong-arm bandit suspects a few minutes after two taxicab drivers had been held up and robbed.

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, suggested that the Federal Government pay for services of District police as a method of obtaining funds for an increased metropolitan force.

A milkman was stabbed when he attempted to seize a milk thief.

Grocer Signs Statement

A grocer signed a statement yesterday that he had faked a robbery after being confronted with evidence that the holdup did not take place. The insurance company which had covered the loss refused to prosecute, and police released the man. The case was "broken" by Lieut. John Flaherty, and Detective Sergts. J. A. Johnson and Watson Salkeld.

The day before the "victim" of an $806 chain store receipts holdup admitted that he himself had carried out the robbery. Detectives recovered $500.

Discovery of a $70 check on the person of a third man who had reported an armed robbery led to his arrest yesterday. The check was allegedly part of the missing money, according to Capt. Ira Keck, acting chief of detectives.

The fourth self-robbery suspect was a drug store messenger boy, who was unable to bring police to the scene of a purported robbery.

U. S. Payment Proposed

A new scheme for increasing the personnel of the Metropolitan Police Department at no additional cost to District taxpayers was proposed yesterday by Representative Schulte, who is chairman of the House subcommittee on police and firemen.

Schulte said he had asked Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, for a report on how many Metropolitan police had been assigned to duty of a Federal character since January 1.

Expressing the belief that non-municipal duties consume much of the time of policemen, Schulte suggested that the Federal Government pay for the service either directly or by an increase in the United States lump-sum payment.

"The guarding of embassies and legations and escorts for the President are purely Federal functions," Schulte said.

The Interior Department should take over many of these duties, he added, and allow the Metropolitan police to devote their attention to hunting criminals.

3 Men Seized

Three colored men were captured early yesterday and identified 20 minutes after two taxicab drivers had been victimized.

The men were seized by Policemen M. S. McCarthy and J. W. Adams, and brought to the Third Precinct Station. One of the cab drivers, Olaf Johnson, of 1219 Eleventh street northeast, was in the station making a report of his robbery, and identified them as his assailants. A short time later, Edmund A. DiCarlo, 1237 North Capitol street, also identified the trio.

Johnson said he had been stopped at Fourteenth and N streets northwest, and had driven to Nineteenth and Q streets northwest, where he was attacked and robbed of $3.60. DiCarlo had $2 taken from him by three men in front of 2100 Newport place northwest, he said.

Milkman Stabbed

A light-skinned colored man stabbed Melvin B. Sayre, 24, of 1334 Levis street northeast, when he attempted to stop the colored man from stealing milk. A route agent for Chestnut Farms Dairy, Sayre said he had discovered the marauder in the hallway of an apartment at 500 Sixth street northeast, taking a bottle of milk. Sayre was taken to Casualty Hospital, where his condition was said to be undetermined, but believed to be not serious.

A trunk full of clothes valued at $1,128 and a manuscript valued at $150 was reported stolen from Fairfax Hotel, 2100 Massachusetts avenue northwest. It was the property of Leonora J. McKim. Aluminum gratings, worth $300, were stolen from the fountain on the Capitol Plaza over the Senate Garage.

Fashion Show Fund For Blood Bank Believed Greater

Results of last week's style show will permit a larger contribution to the blood and serum bank at Children's Hospital than was originally expected, L. E. Massey, chairman of the style show committee, told the Connecticut Avenue Association last night in a preliminary report.

Final figures on the net proceeds of the show, which are to swell the blood bank campaign conducted by The Post and Station WJSV, were not available last night. Forrest Oakley, Richard Norris, and L. E. Rubel, who were charged with the exhibits, financing, and publicity for the show, also made reports. Massey expressed the association's thanks to Marshall Adams, Post fashion editor, for her assistance in the show.

The association, meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, made plans for the annual ball in April and a river excursion in the summer. LeRoy Thayer was appointed chairman of the ball committee, and Emile Beauvais, of the excursion committee.

Boulevard Apartments Will Be Blasted Apart Today

A familiar landmark, the Boulevard Apartments, 2121 New York avenue northwest, will give way for construction of the proposed $4,000,000 War Department building when it is razed by dynamite. Charges under every pillar on the first floor will be set off between 7 and 7:30 a. m. today. Two blasts are expected to bring it to the ground

Miss Burrows Wins Prize For Oratory

Taft Student, 14, Is Awarded Cup By Legion Post

Eugenia Burrows, 14, of 2617 Newtown street northeast last night was judged winner of the Taft Junior High School oratorical contest, which was sponsored by Bunker Hill Post, No. 31, of the American Legion.

Through her victory over four others selected by the faculty, Miss Burrows earned the right to compete in the zone finals early in April. The winner of this event will have a chance to compete for the District championship, which leads to the competition for the national prize.

Each of last night's orators spoke on the subject "The Duties and responsibilities of an American Citizen." Afterwards the judges assigned each candidate a topic for an extemporaneous speech.

The congratulatory address was made by Thomas Gillespie Walsh, chairman of the commission of mental health. Commander Slattery, of the Department of the District of Columbia, American Legion, presented the Bunker Hill Post Cup to Miss Burrows. Chairman of the affair was Francis F. Miller, Americanization officer of Bunker Hill Post.

Judges were the Rev. Gilbert Hartke, O. P.; Miss A. Grace Lind, Miss Ruth Stauffer, Harold J. Clay and Robert C. Snow. Members of the committee included William Kilerane, J. F. Manley, Horace Hoctor, John Walsh, E. J. Reppetti and the honorary members; Margaret R. Merritt, principal of Taft Junior High School, and Mrs. W. B. Calvert, president of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Cinematographers Elect

John T. Chedester, former department commander of Disabled American Veterans, has been elected president of Washington branch, Society of Amateur Cinematographers, it was announced last night.

The moving picture organization also elected L. B. Olmsted, vice president; Everett Marsh, junior vice president; Wilbur Comings, secretary; Edouard Lawrence, treasurer. Reed Haythorne was named honorary president.

The society meets on the first and third Mondays of each month at the Mount Pleasant Library, Sixteenth and Lamont street northwest.

Petworth Citizens Indorse Bill for Public Defender

Association Votes Opposition To Proposed ABC Act Amendment, Senate Probe of Loans Favored

Petworth Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution approving the bill providing for the office of public defender to represent indigent persons charged with criminal offenses.

The assocation voted to oppose the proposed amendment of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act relating to appeals. Ernest F. Henry, legislative chairman of the association, declared that the amendment would give a licensee, who was denied renewal, the right to appeal to the Commissioners, but would not give to a protestant the right of appeal.

The association recommended that the act, if amended at all, be changed to provide "limited review"—in any case where the decision of the ABC Board is not unanimous "the Commissioners upon petition by any aggrieved party may grant a review."

A third resolution, proposed by Henry and adopted by the association, "approved in principle the Senate bill providing for the regulation of the business of making loans of $300 or less.

Lewis R. Barrett, coordinator of recreation for the District told the association that plans were being made for the development of a large recreational center on the tract at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest. He said that recreation facilities were expected to be in operation by Summer on the Rudolph School tract at Third and Hamilton streets northwest.

The association voted to make a $50 appropriation for community welfare work, after Mrs. H. O. Craver, welfare chairman, reported on help that had already been given to several needy families.

Benning

The Benning Citizens Association voted approval of legislation "reinstating" Benning as a legalized race track with pari-mutuel betting.

Members declared racing here would bring much needed District revenue as the unit went on record in favor of the current income tax and in opposition to proposals for a retail sales levy.

In favoring the race track legislation, many declared a large amount of money from Washington was now spent at nearby Maryland tracks and could be diverted back to the District by legalizing local racing.

A committee appointed at last month's meeting to study practicability of a kindergarten for the Benning School reported that more than the required 30 children of 5 years were living in the section. The report will be forwarded to the Board of Education.

The association asked the Capital Transit Co. to install two express buses to run from Thirty-fourth street in River terrace to the downtown section.

Cathedral Hts.-Cleve. Pk.

The Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association voted opposition to legislation that would legalize District horse racing.

The unit also urged that Washington motorists be subjected to an eye examination on application for renewal of driver's licenses.

The following members were appointed to a committee to study the District tax situation: Mrs. S. M. Moore, jr., H. G. Batter, S. G. Lindholm, Mrs. May B. Vories and Mrs. Olive Faircloth.

A contribution of $10 was voted for the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs.

Columbia Heights Forum

The Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights last night indorsed the proposal for a sales tax to supplant the current District income levy.

The unit approved the motion of Wesley W. Coulliette, tax committee chairman, after considerable discussion in which the sales levy was criticized as "insidious" and "nuisance tax No. 1" by Dr. Alba M. Edwards, past tax chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Further charges that the sales tax on necessities, excepting food and medicine, would bear more heavily on poor than rich were answered by resolution sponsors who called the present tax unworkable. "We can't kid ourselves; we have to find other sources of revenue," it was said.

It was also pointed out that the sales levy would bring considerable revenue from "60,000 to 100,000 visitors" coming to the District annually.

Truck Rider Killed by Cable Spool in Crash

One Driver Held, Two Exonerated In Traffic Deaths

A Washington man was killed in a freak traffic accident yesterday, as one driver was held under the negligent homicide act, another was acquitted of the charge in Police Court, and a third driver exonerated by a coroner's jury in other traffic deaths.

Jeff Smith, 88, colored, of 634 N street northwest, was killed when the truck in which he was riding overturned and he was pinned under a 3⅜-ton spool of telephone cable.

The truck swerved to avoid another vehicle at Connecticut avenue and Military road northwest. Two 3½-ton spools rolled to the side of the truck, overturning it and fatally injuring Smith. He was the year's sixteenth traffic fatality as against 21 over the same period last year. Driver of the truck was George W. Hollin, 47, colored, of 83 P street northwest.

Driver Is Held

Arthur J. Stephens, 43, of 2300 Eighteenth street northwest, was held for police court action after an inquest into the death of Jerry J. Hanagan, 37, of 9 Grant Circle northwest.

Hanagan died at Emergency Hospital March 12 of injuries he received the same day when he was knocked down by Stephens' automobile on Constitution avenue near Twelfth street northwest.

In the second negligent homicide case, Police Judge Walter J. Casey directed the acquittal of Mrs. Dorothy M. Fiste, 29, of Brentwood, Md., in connection with the death of Robert E. Fetner, 42, of 2231 Douglas street northeast. Witnesses had testified that Fetner stepped from the curb at Seventeenth and Franklin streets northeast, December 22, into the path of the woman's ar. Taken to Casualty Hospital, he died the next day.

Raymond Miller Cleared

At a second inquest yesterday, the jury exonerated Raymond Miller, 25, of Station A, Conduit road, Georgetown, D. C., when they decided George Winney, 93, of 638 Second street northeast, died "due to his own negligence."

It was testified that Winney was knocked down while standing in the gutter in front of 213 H street northeast, February 10. He was taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment of a fractured leg. Six days later he was transferred to Gallinger Hospital, where he died March 12.

Late yesterday, a negligent homicide case against Henry B. Compton, 24, of 1478 Clifton street northwest, was continued until today by Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey.

Charges were preferred after the defendant's motorcycle struck and killed Norman E. Webster, colored, 28, of 1751 Willard street northwest, last November 17, in the 2000 block Fifteenth street northwest.

The jury is expected to begin deliberation in the Compton case late today.

Three Children Injured

Three children were injured in traffic accidents yesterday. Paul Economou, 12, of 911 New York avenue northwest, and Charles Davis, 9, of 929 New York avenue northwest, were pinned against a building wall in an alley near their home when hit by a truck while playing with other children. Both were admitted to Emergency Hospital; Paul with cuts to the legs, and Charles with a broken right foot. The driver, Gilbert C. Fisher, 21, of 1333 Belmont street northwest, was charged with reckless driving.

Vincent Ferranasca, 9, of 6224 Georgia avenue northwest, also was struck by a truck in front of his home, and was taken to Walter Reed Hospital with head injuries. The driver, police, said, was Page Tucker, of 1355 Rittenhouse street northwest.

Payroll Tax Cut Proposed By Board

Unemployed Also Would Get Maximum of $20 Weekly for 20 Weeks

The District Unemployment Compensation Board yesterday proposed amendments to the city's jobless insurance law which would cut the pay-roll tax on employers, and increase the amount and period of payments to the unemployed.

In place of the present 3 per cent pay-roll levy, the board would provide a tax ranging from ½ of 1 per cent to 2.7 per cent, depending on the size of the surplus reserve fund. The unemployed workers, now getting a maximum of $15 for 16 weeks, would receive a maximum of $20 for 20 weeks.

Should Congress approve the recommendations of the board, the social security tax on District employers would be cut to the minimum of ½ of 1 per cent for at least the first year under the new system, since a large reserve has accumulated in the last three years.

In adopting the proposal, the Unemployment Compensation Board threw out an earlier plan to substitute a pay-roll tax system based on employe turnover in place of the present 3 per cent flat levy.

Corporation Counsel Seal was instructed to prepare the amendments and send them to the Budget Bureau. The amendments were sanctioned by three members of the five-man board, Commissioner Allen, John Locher and Daniel J. Callahan. Commissioner McCoach backed the original substitute proposals and Commissioner Hazen did not vote.

Under provisions of the amendments, the pay-roll tax would vary each year in ratio to the surplus fund and cost of benefits. If the reserve fund rises to four times the peak benefit payment to unemployed in the previous decade, employers would be taxed the minimum of ½ of 1 per cent.

The three-year-old reserve fund now totals more than $17,000,000. The largest payment to jobless was given out last year, $1,400,000. Thus the District employers under the new law would get an immediate drop to the lowest levy.

National Amendment Necessary

A reserve fund between three and four times the peak benefit payment in the decade will fix the tax at 1.2 per cent; between two and three times the peak payment 2 per cent.

If the reserves drop to less than two times the peak benefit payment, or less than one and one-half times the tax payments collected, the tax would be placed at the maximum of 2.7 per cent.

A District official observed that for Congress to approve the new setup would require an amendment to the national social security law as well as to the District law.

Before adopting the amendments, the board reversed its earlier stand in favor of merit rating levy system, under which employers with the lowest turnover of employes would pay a lower pay roll tax. A special subcommittee of the board had accepted this plan several weeks ago. Labor leaders and social security experts, however, had avised against such a proposal.

Tonight's Their Big Night

A song written by this couple, Cordia Virginia Lane, 1830 K street northwest, and Joel Marston, 3535 Hertford place northwest, will be played over a national hookup tonight by Bill McCune's Carlton Hotel orchestra. Miss Lane wrote the lyrics for "Poor Fool," and Marston, a Central High School student, wrote the tune. The broadcast will be heard at 10 p. m. on WOL

Georgia Ave. Business Men

Reduction of the District's 3 per cent unemployment compensation tax was urged in a resolution adopted last night at the monthly meeting of the Georgia Avenue Business Men's Association, at 5320 Georgia avenue.

Milton R. Vollmer, secretary, said it was found that a surplus of several million dollars had been accumulated from the tax and that the members wished to support efforts now being made in Congress to lighten the burden on employers.

Sergt. Percy Deneall, of Sixth Precinct station, addressed the association on crime prevention. He suggested that merchants leave their venetian blinds up at night, so that officers could see into the stores when making their rounds.

Group Plans Tours to Aid Crippled

Designed to Enlist Congresswomen In Campaign For Appropriation

Efforts to arrange for Congressmen to inspect the plight of handicapped children in homes and hospitals will be launched today by a group seeking further support for a $22,400 appropriation for visiting teachers in the District.

The committee to push this new move was elected last night by the Association for the Education of Handicapped Children and will meet today to decide on the feasibility of the plan.

Mrs. William Harland was named chairman of the committee, which includes Mrs. Grayson Waite, Mrs. Paul Fuchene, Mrs. Helen E. Becker, Mrs. Jerry Binder and Mrs. John E. O'Hara, president of the association.

Another committee was named last night to call on Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, to confer about the item for visiting teachers. This committee includes Mrs. O'Hara, Mrs. Fuchene and Mrs. H. Harris.

Mrs. O'Hara reported on the recent appearance of a group from the association, along with several handicapped children before the House District Committee's subcommittee on appropriations, to appeal for these funds for the Board of Education. The WPA project for instruction of shut-in children is due to be discontinued at the end of this fiscal year.

At the association meeting last night at Thomson School, Mrs. O'Hara urged that "each one of you enlist the support of all your friends and ask them to tell their friends" about the movement.

"I'm afraid if we don't get the appropriation this year it may be a long time before we have such an opportunity again," Mrs. O'Hara said.

Mrs. Elizabeth Goodman, a supervisor in the WPA project, reported that the coordinating committee for handicapped children met yesterday to plan a radio program to further the movement for the appropriation. She said representatives from more than 30 organizations and social agencies composed the committee.

China Granted $3,911,193 Arms Licenses

Nation Resuming Large-Scale Buying Of U. S. Munitions

By the Associated Press

China is again buying American arms on a sizable scale to aid her in the war against Japan, now nearly three years old.

She obtained State Department licenses in February for the exoprt of $3,911,193.30 worth of arms, ammunition and implements of war. Previously, her imports were averaging several hundred thousand dollars per month.

The purchase was interpreted here as an indication of China's determination to continue the war against Japan.

Plane Engines Bought

Recently, the Export-Import Bank arranged to grant China a credit of $20,000,000, although this cannot be used for the purchase of military goods.

The major portion of China's purchases in February consisted of engines which will be installed in warplanes being made in China.

France obtained licenses in February for the export of $42,854,991 worth of war materials, bringing her total for the first two months of this year to $124,437,649.23. She obtained delivery, however, on only $7,181,588 worth in February, making a total of $18,878,002 thus far this year. Most of her purchases were war planes.

Belgium to Pay $2,948,400

Great Britain was far behind France in the licenses obtained. In February, these amounted to only $495,908, and for the year, $1,404,267.40. Deliveries to Great Britain totaled $3,552,087 in February, and for the year, $7,615,285.90, largely on the basis of licenses issued last year.

Finland, which has made peace with Russia, received export licenses valued at $2,948,400, mostly for war planes. Australia secured licenses totaling $1,004,415.25, and Canada, $648,169.16.

Total export licenses for February were $57,345,495.07, bringing the year's total to $143,450,345.97. Actual deliveries in the first two months were less than one-third of this total, amounting to $43,256,450.49.

Static-Free Radio Frequency Fights Television Bands

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday heard the budding television industry described as standing in the way of progress. The complainant was Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong, inventor of frequency modulation, who appeared for the second day to ask that his static-free broadcasting method be permitted to enter into commercial service.

He renewed his plea that frequency modulation be allowed to use broadcasting channels now assigned to television.

"Television," he said, "doesn't promise much for years to come as an extensive service. The conflict here is between FM broadcasters and the large assignment to television."

Parish Repents, Interdict Lifted

Cleveland, March 19 (AP).—Archbishop Joseph Schrembs tonight lifted his interdict against 1,500 members of Holy Redeemer Catholic Parish who rebelled last month against selection of a new priest.

The parishioners crowded into a small school assembly hall near the church and expressed repentence. The churchman, tears in his eyes, forgave them.

Renunciation Termed Way To Win Peace

Rev. Edward B. Wilcox Lays Strife to Parts Of Versailles Treaty

Peace—international or personal—can only be accomplished through renunciation, the Rev. Edward B Wilcox declared at yesterday's Holy Week services of Southeast congregations at the Penn Theater.

The pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, who described renunciation as "giving up of your own free will that to which you are rightfully entitled," said the world would be at peace today had it not been for certain points of the Versailles Treaty.

Dr. William A. Keese, pastor of Metropolitan Methodist Church, will speak today at noon, and the Rev. A. F. T. Raum, pastor of First Methodist Church, at tomorrow's concluding Lenten service of the Southeast group at the theater. A joint Good Friday service will be held from 12 to 3 p. m., at the Fifteenth Street Christian Church, whose pastor is the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, yesterday continued his Holy Week address at Epiphany Episcopal Church, where he will preach today and tomorrow at 12 noon. Justice Bolitha J. Laws, of the District Court, will speak tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Calvary Methodist Church's special Lenten rites.

Cecil B. DeMille's famous film, "King of Kings," continues its Holy Week run at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest. It will be shown today and tomorrow at 5 and 8 p. m.; on Good Friday at 10:30 a. m., 1:30, 4 and 8 p. m. and on Easter Sunday at 3, 5:30 and 8 p. m.

The Easter drama, "On the Third Day," will be presented tonight at 8 p. m. by the young people of National City Christian Church in the social hall on Vermont avenue, near Logan circle.

Tenabrae will be observed today at 4 p. m. at the Franciscan Monastery, where Holy Thursday will open tomorrow at 9 a. m. with solemn high mass and procession to the Holy Sepulchre, followed by the Mandatum (Washing of the Feet). Tenabrae will be celebrated tonight, tomorrow and Friday at 8 p. m., at St. Agnes' Episcopal Church.

Holy week services in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University open at 8 p. m. today with the chanting of the Offices of the Tenebrae by the students in the Sulpician Seminary. This service will be repeated tomorrow and Friday nights.

Mass will be celebrated at 8 a. m. tomorrow in the Cript of the Shrine by the Rev. J. B. McAllister.

METRONOME'S DOUBLE EASTER. Parties will roll out as fast as Easter eggs to the Metronome Room next week. On Easter Monday there'll be a farewell fiesta, and a fancy one, for Eddy Brandt and his orchestra who've made Washington friends galore this season. On Tuesday Gray Gordon and his 15-piece band will take over the Metronome bandstand. The undergrads trooping home for spring vacation are already haunting the Metronome and will surely pack the place for Monday's good-by to Eddy and Tuesday's "hello" to Gray Gordon. Boris will probably be putting tables out in the corridors for late comers.

MUSICAL MIRACLE. The Metropolitan Four are singing the sextette from "Lucia" in the Shoreham Blue Room this week. They sound so magnifique that we wonder why it was ever thought necessary to have six people in a sextette. Don Enrico Clausi, of the M. F., is doing a Lon Chaney version of "Pagliacci" and Bernice Ripley, coloratura soprano, garners loads of applause for a beautiful blending of "Giannina Mia" and "Sweet Mystery of Life." Hawaiian dancer Marianne Cude wears a real grass skirt this week on Max Lowe's solemn promise not to bring in a pony act.

FLASH! The Hour Glass has just been leased to Burt Lopatin, well-known Washington restaurant man, who already has two popular eateries on his string. Opening date isn't quite definite, but it won't be long now before the Hour Glass doors reopen.

LOTUS GOES LATIN. It's hot tamale time in the Lotus this week. A bullfight dance is done by Estrellita la Villenueva, a tiny one elegantly rigged in sky blue and silver. She combats an imaginary Ferdinand with castanets and cape, finally sinks banderillos into his quivering carcass. The Milray Dancers step a la Mexico in orange satin and gold. Buddy Shaner sings "Gaucho Serenade." Marrone and Gallo offer a "Bolero" version that includes choking, hair-pulling and a kiss on the neck. If Bill Strickland would only change his dinner suit for a toreador costume you'd think you were in Mexico City.

PALL MALL GOLDEN WEDDING. Will you be able to cut a pigeon wing on your golde wedding day? Mr. C. E. Gowing did just that at his golden wedding party in the Pall Mall Room last evening, and Mrs. Gowing said he was just as agile as he was 50 years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Gowing are the parents of Gene Gowing, who is now saying good-by to Pall Mall after having delighted its patrons for several months with his square dance sessions.

WHY FOLKS APPLAUD. Shar-Zad. Bill McCune's "Remember When" medley. It includes all the tunes you've enjoyed in past seasons—providing you're no older than Bill.

Troika. Nick Hop 's accordioning of "Flight of the Bumblebee." Nick is trying to break a world's record by playing "F. o. t. B." in one minute. But he can't seem to do better than one minute, five seconds.

Mayfair. The nonbucolic "Nelly Was a Country Girl" being sung by the Rhythm Boys. We'd print the lyrics but the editor won't let us.

Rainbow Room. The new "Angel" as played suavely by Milton Davis and the lads. Milton is backing "Angel" for the hit parade.

Robin Hood. Lynn Allison's playful warbling of "My Johann," the Grieg idea of "Oh, Johnny," and ten times nicer.

Casino Royal. Mary Martin going to town with "Ma, He's Makin' Eyes at Me." And using her own big, black eyes with great effect.

Hi Hat. All of those quarters that Angie Rodante (whose blues notes are back in great form) is singing with Ray, Frank and Tommy, of the Diplomats.

Anchor Room. Eileen George's always varying versions of "Oh, Johnny." Tip Eileen off about your friends' names and they'll find themselves figuring in Johnny's spot.

Neptune Room. "It's a Blue World" really makes everything seem rosy when Alice O'Connell sings it like a blonde bluebird.

BREAKFAST BAR. That good-looking bar at the Harrington Tavern isn't only for luncheon, drinkables and evening snacks. You can get a smoking-hot breakfast there in a jiffy. A boon for business people.

VALUABLE INFORMATION DEPARTMENT. You're right about thinking there's something special about the Lounge Riviera drinks. They have been upped to a full two ounces . . . Manager Bob Korn, of the Cafe Caprice, tells us that the person who gets the fanciest service in night spots is the maitre d'hotel from another hotel. Camaraderie? No. One maitre d'hotel doesn't want another maitre d'hotel going around talking about him . . . Adelita, Madrillon's know-it-all, says iodine will cure baldness. She didn't say whether to drink it or rub it on your scalp. To be safe, you'd better pour it down the sink.

No Sulphur Suits Planned by U. S.

The Justice Department announced yesterday that there would be no antitrust prosecution in the surphur industry in view of "certain commitments made by the two principal domestic sulphur companies."

The department investigated sulphur in connection with its widespread inquiry into the fertilizer industry.

The Freeport Sulphur Co. and the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., the largest domestic producers, wrote that they had no immediate intention of increasing prices and that if an increase became necessary, they would advise the Justice Department.

Cosmos Club to Meet To Decide on Land Sale

A full meeting of the membership of the Cosmos Club will be held late this month, it was learned yesterday, to decide what the club should do about the Government's offer to buy its historic property at Madison place and H street.

Last July the Government's intention to pay as much as $1,000,000 for the club's land became public. The club was notified officially of the desire to purchase last November.

23-Hit Barrage by Blues Trounces Nats, 22-5

Four Homers, Eight Triples Are Blasted

Three Rookie Hurlers Victims of Minor Loop Club's Attack; Griff Walks Out in Seventh

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Haines City, Fla., March 19.—A ninth-inning rally by the Nats today fell 17 runs short of tying the score and they were nosed out, 22 to 5, by Kansas City. It was a brutal case of murder against the Washington pitching.

Early Wynn, Bucky Jacobs and Bill Kennedy succeeded, somehow, in holding Kansas City to 23 hits, nine of them singles. Simultaneously Bucky Harris' three rookies were pitching themselves right back to the minor leagues.

Tonight, Washington outfielders are a very, very tired lot. They were forced to give chase to four home runs, eight three-baggers and four doubles whacked by the American Association pennant winners. George Case, Buddy Lewis and Gerald Walker had their backs to the plate all afternoon, attempting to catch up with the lusty socks of the Blues. Clark Griffith walked out on the game in the seventh inning.

A Pair of Sevens

The young right-hander, Wynn, was a rousing success compared to his fellow Washington pitchers. He allowed only six runs in his three-inning turn. But the Blues actually didn't turn on the heat until they encountered Jacobs and the left-handed Kennedy.

There is a slight suspicion that Kansas City was using crooked dice. In the sixth and seventh innings, they threw a pair of sevens at the Nats to increase their total of runs by 14. It was in those innings that the triples began to fall.

Strangely, the Nats were in the ball game as late as the sixth inning when they rushed four runs across the plate to cut the Blues' early lead to 6-5. A two-bagger by Walker, a triple to right by Travis, a double to center by Bloodworth, a walk to Gelbert and Jake Early's single produced the four-run cluster.

Blues Turn on Heat

And then the Blues struck back with their first seven-run barrage in their half. Somehow, Bucky Jacobs lasted out the inning, which saw Bongiovanni, Saltzgaver and Hitchcock clout three baggers. DePhillips chimed in with a double and Suder hit a mere single.

The first thing that happened in the ball game was, incidentally, a home run by Frenchie Bordagaray, lead-off man for the Blues in the first inning. Before the inning was over, Jerry Priddy also socked a homer and Derry whacked a triple. Thus the Blues took a 3-0 lead.

By the end of Wynn's three-inning turn, the Blues had a 6-1 lead, and by the time Jacobs was done, the Blues were in front, 13-5. Kennedy, a former Florida Leaguer, got his licks beginning with the seventh. In that inning he held the Blues to 7 runs by walking three hitters and pitching Saltzgaver and Hitchcock their second triples of the afternoon.

More Long Hitting

In the eighth inning, with Kennedy still on the mound, Saltzgaver took the opportunity to pound out his third three-bagger. It occurred just after Caldwell had tripled and Bongiovanni had doubled.

Three Kansas City righthanders named John Lindell, John Haley and Al Moran held the Nats to 12 hits, Travis getting three of them, including a three-bagger. Buddy Lewis snuffed out Washington's chances of victory in the ninth by hitting into a double play when the Nats needed only 17 runs to tie the score.

Heurich Brewers Beaten in Chicago

Washington's Heurich Brewers were eliminated last night from the National Professional Basketball "world series" tournament in Chicago, Ill., as they went down to defeat, 46-36, before the Chicago Bruins in the semifinal round.

The Harlem globe trotters and the Chicago Bruins advanced to finals. They meet tomorrow night for the title, the Associated Press said.

For the second game in a row Wibs Kautz hit the net for 24 points for the Bruins. Mike Bloom led the Washington offensive with nine points.

Washington and Syracuse play tomorrow night for third place.

4,500 See Eagles Beat Champion Orioles, 3-2

D. C. Club Takes Edge in Series With Baltimoreans in 'Grudge' Game Before Season's Largest Crowd

By Jack Munhall.

The Baltimore Orioles are Eastern Amateur League champions but the Washington Eagles are their masters. This was proved once again last night at Riverside Stadium as the Eagles clinched their season series with the champions by winning 3-2, before 4,500 fans, the largest crowd of the season.

The Eagles, in capturing their seventh victory in 13 meetings with the Orioles, also assured themselves of no worse than a second place tie with the New York Rovers. Washington, eight points behind Baltimore, is four points ahead of the Rovers who will help close the season here Friday night.

Included in the turnout last night were 400 Baltimore fans who chartered special buses to come over to see what was highly advertised as a "grudge match." But as far as extra curricular fireworks was concerned the game was one of the tamest of the year.

The Eagles were never behind. They picked up the game's first goal early in the first period, added one in the second as Baltimore tied the count, 2-2, and then won out on Les Ramsay's tally in the final session.

Hidden Puck Play

The first period will be remembered as producing the season's most amusing episode in which the puck was in play, but not on the ice. It was lost for more than a minute in the uniform of a Baltimore player while the crowd laughed and rang their cowbells.

McTeer, of the Eagles, and Erickson, of the Orioles, were battling for the puck at midice. The Washington player took a swipe and then the two of them came together. When they separated the puck was not to be seen. And the mystery remained unsolved for a few moments. Then, when it was suggested the missing disc might be on Erickson, he shook like a hula hula dancer with the seven-year itch until the puck dislodged itself and came free. This incident came at a needed time, for it lightened tension which had been steadily mounting.

The Eagles' opening-period score came at 14:37 after a wild pile-up in front of the Baltimore net. Three Washington players and as many Orioles were scrambling for the puck. Shots rained off Goalie Kelly. Then the red light flashed on and a goal was credited to Len

Hogan Equals Record, Leads North-South

New Yorker Scores a 66 to Top Star Field; Paul Runyan Second

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 19.—Ben Hogan, 140 compact pounds of Texas-born golf pro, came within 6 inches of setting a new competitive course record today when he shot a six-under-par 66 that gave him the first-round lead in the North-South Open golf championship by a margin of three strokes.

Hogan, who plays out of White Plains, N. Y., came to the seventeenth tee of Pinehurst's testing No. 2 course needing two pars for that 66. He put all of his considerable power into a well-hit iron shot that dropped the ball on the green, 186 yards away, 15 feet hole-high to the right.

Fails by Inches

Sinking that putt would have put him seven under par. But Benny babied it a bit, and the ball stopped 6 inches short. He got his par 3 there and par 4 on the finisher, and thus tied the competitive course mark set up in the second round of last year's tournament by Harry Cooper.

Hogan, who stands second in the list of the season's money winners, Speed Skating Championships Seen for D. C.

Washington will be the scene of the 1941 North American Speed Skating Championships if present plans materialize, The Post learned yesterday from Christopher Meyer, president of the Washington Figure Skating Club.

On his recent trip to the North American outdoor championships at Schenectady, Meyer said, he was promised by President Ted Yound of the Amateur Skating Union that the indoor championships would be brought here if it was desired.

"I also talked with a number of the contestants there at Schenectady, many of whom I know personally," Meyer said, "and all of them were immensely interested in coming here rather than any other place."

Washington would be the most Southern city that has ever held these events, according to Meyer, who said he will discuss the proposal next week with officials of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The North American Indoor Championships are held once annually to decide national titles. They usually attract upward of 150 entries and run two or three days.—MUNHALL.

It Takes More Than a Fire To Stop These Schoolboys

Richard Montgomery Is Burned Out But the Ambitious Youngsters Carry on Ball Practice

By Bill Burnett

They burned down the schoolhouse, usually the last and most effective resort, but still didn't get rid of the baseball players of Richard Montgomery High of Rockville.

What was left of the team after graduation came back Monday to begin practice for the 1940 season. It came from various other Montgomery County high schools where its members had been "farmed" out following the burning of Rockville High a short time ago, and under Coach Ralph Keller, former Maryland U. athlete and brother of the famous Charley, it began preparations for, it hopes, another successful season.

The players are young, but most of them have played on the sandlots. Above all, they love to play. That, says Coach Keller, is all needed to build a ball club.

"I hate to say it about this bunch of kids," Keller said yesterday after pitching three innings, "but there's nothing brilliant about them now. They'll develop all right, but it'll take a lot of patience. Just watch us, anyway."

For the first time since his arrival at the suburban institution,

Hyattsville's Girls Gain Semifinals by 53-18; 145-Pounders In Overtime Battle

One of those infrequent occasions when a mythical team becomes a reality—at least for one night—will occur tomorrow night at Heurich gym, where The Posts's official All-District Schoolboy five clashes with Delaware & Hudson in a feature of the A. A. U. Basketball Tournament.

Arrangements for the special match were completed last night when the players named to the All-District first and second teams joyfully agree to meet the club which recently added the Middle Atlantic amateur title to its string. Previously, D. & H. had been runner-up in the A. A. U. tourney of 1939 and second in the Heurich Amateur League.

A leading contender in the unlimited class of the A. A. U. tourney, the Delhuds will be faced by the strongest aggregation of high school players it is possible to collect. Bob Custer, of Eastern, the city's leading scholastic scorer, will lead a first team composed of Hymie Perlo and George West, of Roosevelt; Bob Mulvihill, of Gonzaga, and Johnny Shumate, of Bethesda.

According to early plans, Coach Herman Littman, who led Roosevelt to victories in the interhigh and metropolitan championships, will master-mind the all-District team. Besides the first team, he will have such stars as his own center, Ernie Travis; Moe Shulman, of Eastern; Armand Newmyer, of Friends; Sport Barrett, of Georgetown Prep, and Moke MacDonald, of Wilson, to push into the game if necessary.

Against this flood of talent, D. & H. can hurl a string of all-high stars of its own. Clint Quantrille and Tommy Nolan earned the distinction at Eastern, and Gerald Burns was all-high at Western. Bob Lucas and Tommy Folliard rated high on the scholastic teams they represented.

Tomorrow's hostilities will be launched at 7:30 by a 145-pound quarter-final clash between Stewart Brothers and Art Welders. At 8:30 Treasury and Hyattsville come to grips in a girls' semifinal battle, and one hour later the All-District versus D. & H. game will be played.

FBI Advances: Aces Win Thriller

Federal Bureau of Investigation won its way to the semifinals of the District A. A. U. championship tournament last night by defeating a hard-playing Central Branch, Washington Boys Club, five by a 42-29 score. In the girls' class, Hyattsville's sextet turned back Y. W. C. A to gain the semifinals, while the Stewart Brothers Aces, winners by one point in the first round, came back last night and won over Y M. C. A., 36-32, after a five-minute extra period. This was in the 145-pound division.

FBI had to play some of its best basketball to hold the smaller Boys Club players in check. Bernie Jones succeeded in throttling for the most part the scoring of Jerry Zanelotti, the Boys Club trigger-man, but Jones was benched and Zanelotti

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 19.—In the cool of the evening, every evening, the baseball athletes are wont to gather on the hotel sidewalk fronting Orlando's main stem and talk about—you guessed it—baseball.

POVICH

It is late. The dinner checks have been signed. The waitresses have been left the thin-dime tip that is the badge of the ball player. Tookpicks have been grabbed on the way out, and out there on the sidewalk baseball will be the topic until the 11 p. m. curfew.

And so, my chickadees, bend an ear if you want to hear a pretty typical gabfest of the ball players. The quotes are theirs:

"Where was I readin' that big Julius Solters was with the White Sox? I can't keep up with these trades."

"That county weekly you read all winter don't keep up with baseball. Why don't you move into the United States?"

"No kidding, I was surprised to see Solters was with the White Sox."

"You weren't half so murch surprised at Mike Kreevich. I'll bet he was shocked."

"What's Kreevich got to do with it? He wasn't traded."

"No, he wasn't traded, but he'll have plenty to do with it next summer. With Taft Wright playing on one side of him and Solters on the other, Kreevich will have to run his legs off in that Chicago outfield."

" 'Member the time Wright fell on his face in Detroit waiting for a fly ball to come down?"

"How about Solters? He couldn't field a ground ball with a fish-net. Kreevich will have to play center, left and right in that outfield."

"Well, if anybody can play the outfield by himself, Kreevich can. He's the best."

"You're nuts. How about DiMaggio?"

"Its a tight fit between Kreevich and DiMag."

"Now I know you're nuts DiMag can give Kreevich a 5-yard start on a long ball and beat him to it."

"Yeah, and he can give him a 10-yard start coming in for a ball and beat him to it."

"I'll take three Kreeviches in my outfield and be satisfied."

"That's different. Three Kreeviches would be a great outfield."

"I see Fred Haney says he ain't gonna let the Browns' pitchers use that backward step they're allowing this year."

"Haney ought to be grateful for any kind of a change."

"I was taking that backward step all last season and getting away with it. The umpires weren't calling it, anyway."

"Sure, every pitcher in the league was cheating. They just legalized something we were all getting away with."

"I wish they'd legalize the spit ball. I could do something with that."

"That's what you think. Better lay off those freak things. They don't do your arm any good."

"That's the reason for most of the sore arms in the big leagues. Pitchers get fooling around with new deliveries trying to get something freakish on the ball and the first thing they know they have a sore arm."

"Sure. That's what happened to my brother, Wes. He tried to get something different on the ball."

"Big George Blaeholder is responsible for a lot fo sore arms in this league. A lot of those pitchers tried to copy his slider."

"Don't I know that. It was natural with Blaeholder. That big bloke didn't have to try to pitch his slider. It was his natural pitch."

"When Blaeholder was in Cleveland, Johnny Allen and Mel Harder tried to throw his slider and the first thing they knew their arms were sore.

"I heard Vitt tell Feller to stay away from that freak stuff or he'd fine him."

"Feller don't have to worry about anything extra. They talk about his fast ball, but his curve is the best in the league."

"You said it. I'd rather hit against his fast ball anytime than his curve."

"I remember Feller when he couldn't get a wrinkle on the ball."

"He's got something more than a wrinkle on it now. And he throws it with the same delivery as his fast one. A batter is up there guessing all the time."

"Funny thing about Joe Kuhel. He could always murder Feller. Kuhel hit Feller like he owned him."

"How about that little Newsome who used to be with the A's. I didn't get him out in three years. He couldn't hit the size of his hat against a lot of punks, but he owned me."

"I'll never forget one day I pitched against Newsome. He had just come out of the hospital and was wearing one of those rubber skull caps after getting cracked on the head. Bill McGowan comes up to me and says, 'Now be easy with this guy, if he gets cracked on the head again he might be a dead pigeon.' "

"I remember that day. He belted a double off you with the bases full."

"Double, hell. It was a triple. It was the last sucker pitch I ever gave him. Skull cap or no skull cap, I always poured it into Newsome after that."

"How about the day Hank Greenberg got so sore at you in Lakeland four or five years ago?"

"That was funny. I wasn't trying to dust him off. I was just a wild green pea. My ball was breaking all over the place and Hank was ducking all afternoon. I struck him out three times that day and I'll never forget what he told Del Baker the last time he went up to bat."

"Did Baker really use to tip off Greenberg on what the pitcher was going to throw?"

"Sure he did. I seen him do it a hundred times. He'd signal that it was going to be a fast ball or a curve, and Hank would tie into it. But this day after I fanned Greenberg three times, Hank was disgusted. He yells over to Baker: 'Never mind trying to guess what this wild palooka's gonna throw. How can you tell, when he don't know himself?' "

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Tampa, March 19.—Mammoth Ernie Lombardi lay there with his eyes closed, wheezing like a contented walrus. But this time there weren't any Yankee runners shooting past him. He was on the rubbing table at the fancy-Spanish style clubhouse of the Cincinnati Reds.

CONSIDINE

"Yeah," he rumbled pleasantly, opening a kindly blue eye, "it sure raised a rumpus—me not tagging Di Maggio that day. Naw, I didn't mind what some of you fellows wrote. You gotta write 'em as you see 'em, I guess. But I'll tell you this much; Keller half knocked me cold when he hit me, when he scored the second run of that inning. They tell me he stepped on my arm with his spikes, but if he did I didn't even feel it, he hit me so hard.

"And Di Maggio? Heck, he was the third run of the inning. What if I didn't get him? Didn't hurt none. They only needed one run to beat us. Well, that's about all the people wanted to talk about, when I got back home. And, a funny thing, all that publicity seemed to get people interested in me, kind of got a ton of mail from fans during the winter, saying they were still with me and so on. Got four hundred Christmas cards from Cincinnati people alone. Everything turned out all right."

Lombardi is an arresting mound of protoplasm, on a dressing table. He weighed around 240 today, a huge and somewhat soft-looking man with a massive head and nose, a sheepish look and hands that are shockingly like two bunches of selected bananas.

He thinks the series debacle will help instead of hurt the Reds. "We would've won two of those series games, with a little luck," he rumbled on. "The first and fourth. You can't tell what would've happened if we had. They tell me Ruffing wasn't too ready to come back again. Not that those Yanks aren't a good team. They're swell, particularly that Keller. He hit everything I called for. Couldn't get him out. But what I was saying was that experiences like we had in the series won't hurt us. They teach things, especially to the young guys."

"You're right Schnoz," Paul Derringer spoke up from the next rubbing table. "The whole team ought to be better than last year's. I can't understand why so many people want to award that pennant to the Cards. Sure, they're pretty good, but what about us? Did we retire? Hell, we're just coming along in this league. With Turner around, and Moore and Thompson backing up Bucky Walters and myself, we ought to have even better pitching than last year. I don't say Bucky's going to win 27 again, or that I'm going to win 24—that's a lot to ask of a couple of fellows on the same club. But if we slip any we won't slip much, the way Bucky looks and the way I feel."

We asked Derringer about the Yanks and he said a rather surprising thing.

"The Red Sox are a tougher ball club to pitch against," he said. "The Yanks are the best defensive club I've ever seen, and they got great pitching, but I have to laugh when I read about how they murder that ball. They haven't got the best

Browns Beat Toledo With 3 Gift Runs; Foxx Homers But Red Sox Lose, 18-5

By the Associated Press

Bradenton, Fla., March 19.—Two Rookie right-handers, Marvin Breuer and Tommy Reis, pitched the world champion Yankees to their first shutout victory of the grapefruit season today—a 3-0 walloping of the Boston Bees.

The two let the Bees down with six hits—all singles. Breuer pitched five innings and Reis four.

The game looked like one that might never end, until the seventh, when the Bees defense collapsd and the Yanks scored all their runs, their hitting featured by a 420-foot triple from the bat of Babe Dahlgren, Yank first sacker.

Gift Runs Beat Toledo

San Antonio, Tex., March 19.—Three runs scored without a single hit in the first inning gave the St. Louis Browns a 6 to 4 exhibition game victory over the Toledo Mudhens of the American Association today.

After three consecutive walks filled the bases, two infield outs and an error forced in the tallies.

The farm club of the American Leaguers tied the score in the first of the third, but Sig Gryska put the Browns ahead the last of that inning, clouting a home run with a man on base.

Foxx Homer Futile

Acadia, Fla., March 19 (U.P.).—Despite Jimmy Foxx's homer with the bases loaded in the third inning, the Boston Red Sox were battered, 18 to 5, today by the Louisville Colonels, of the American Association. Three Red Sox rookie pitchers, Heflin, Dasso and Fine, yielded 20 hits to the minor leaguers.

Metha Shines For Sox

San Bernardino, Calif., March 19 (AP).—The traditional "hot corner" proved a little too sizzling for the Pittsburgh Pirates today as Rookie Third Baseman Metha paced the Chicago White Sox to a 9-to-7 victory in an exhibition game.

The American Leaguers swarmed all over the Bucs in a hectic fifth inning, scoring five runs to nullify a four-run barrage laid down by the National Leaguers in the third. In the fifth Metha doubled behind singles by Cromer and Wright, scoring both, and in the ninth brought Rosenthal and Cromer across the plate with a ringing single.

Reds Trample Tigers

Lakeland, Fla., March 19 (AP).—An eighth-inning six-run rally, topped by home runs by Billy Myers and Frankie McCormick, gave the Cincinnati Reds a 11-to-9 victory over the Detroit Tigers in a grapefruit league game here today.

Each of the four-baggers came with two men on base and Archie McKain in the box, but two errors paved the way for the outburst as the Tigers dropped their second straight exhibition.

The National League champions got 12 hits off Tommy Bridges and McKain while the Tigers collected 13 off Jim Turner and Gene (Junior) Thompson.

Tribe Bows By 4-2

Winter Haven, Fla., March 19 (AP).—Lanky Cliff Melton and Big Hy Vandenberg combined their pitching talents to hurl the Giants to 4-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians today.

Melton allowed only two hits in four innings, and Vandenberg let the Tribe down with three hits—and both their runs—in the four innings he toiled.

Lavagetto Paces Dodgers

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 19 (AP).—Cookie Lavagetto smashed an eighth inning homer with the bases loaded, to give the Brooklyn Dodgers a 5-to-4 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals today.

For over six innings the two clubs were tangled in a scoreless tie, but in the eighth the Cookie connected and the Redbirds couldn't quite recover, though they scored three times in their half of the same inning.

Curt Davis and Clyde Shoun pitched exceptionally well for the Cards in the early innings, as did Whit Wyatt for the Dodgers.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 19 (U.P.).—Don Padgett, the St. Louis Cardinals' holdout catcher, signed his contract today after a six-minute conference with Vice President Branch Rickey.

The quick agreement was unexpected because they had wrangled for four hours last night without coming to town. No announcement was made today regarding the terms.

Phils Prep for Reds

Miami Beach, Fla., March 19 (AP).—Manager Doc Prothro drove his Philadelphia Nationals through a pair of two hour and a half workouts today because he believes the Phils, who lost two straight games to major league opponents, "weren't getting enough work."

The Phils face their third major league opponent here tomorrow in the Cincinnati Reds.

Georgetown A. C.'s girl basketball team, which claims it hasn't lost a game in six years, defeated the Sherwood girls, 26-12, last night at Central High School for the championship of the D. C. Recreation Department's Civic League.

Paced by the shooting of Anna Honabach and Camille Craig, the Georgetown girls ran up an 18-7 lead at halftime and then took it easy in the final period until Sherwood pulled to within three points of their lead. Another spurt put them off to an undisputed lead. Miss Craig, with 13 points, was high scorer.

Age of Skating 'Child Wonder' Is Questioned

A protest of the eligibility of Hazel Franklin, star performer of the Ice Carnival of 1940, under the Child Labor Act yesterday created a stir among officials of the Washington Society for the Blind, which will benefit from the carnival proceeds.

Informed that Mrs. A. C. Sheldon, superintendent of the Public School Department of School Attendance and Work Permits, had questioned the girl's age, J. Leighton Cornwell, chairman for the society, announced he would prepare an affidavit of proof that Miss Franklin is 18.

"The trouble has arisen, I believe, because Hazel has been advertised in other cities as a "child wonder," Cornwell said. "Her age has been given as 13 or 14, but that isn't true. She's 18 and I can prove it."

A pair of spectacular goals by Riley enabled the Orioles to tie the score at 2-2 in the second period which was unique in that not a foul was called.

Riley's first point was made at 3:07 after he had skated the half length of the ice and eluded Washington Defense Knipfel and his second at 8:14 on a solo dash.

Sandwiched between Riley's scores was Washington's second counter, by Dewey. It was a fine play, Dewey working perfectly with his forward line mates, Kuntz and Covert. The three started in their own defensive zone, criss-crossing and exchanging passes until Covert slipped the puck to Dewey as he headed into the net from the corner. Goalie Kelly was expecting the shot but Dewey fooled him by lofting one that hit just below the top of the net.

Maddy Horn, Speed Skating Champion, To Turn Pro if Olympics Are Canceled

'Burned Up at Hitler;' Wisconsin Girl Not Bashful About Age

By Jack Munhall.

Maddy Horn, a personable strongly built young lady from Beaver Dam, Wis., is undoubtedly the world's fastest woman ice skater. Moreover, she is talented in other branches of athletics, plays with the Oshkosh girls' softball team, champions of the State, and in 1936 held the tennis championship of her home town.

But an even more remarkable thing about Miss Horn, a star performer of the Ice Carnival of 1940 which opens a three-day engagement at Riverside Stadium Saturday, is her willingness to tell her true age.

"I'm 29," she volunteered as she speared one of O'Donnell's best crab cakes and smiled understandingly at one hemming and hawing reporter. "In spite of the fact that this amounts to treason to my sex, I don't think I shall ever be ashamed of my age."

May Become a Pro

But perhaps that is because Miss Horn, like most of her ice skating contemporaries, looks several years younger than she is. Fresh-faced and vibrant and unusually straightforward, she proved a delightful interview victim.

It seems that Miss Horn is wavering on the brink of turning professional and it is all Hitler's fault to hear her tell it.

"For years my one big ambition was to be picked on the United States Olympic Team and go to Europe," she explained, "and this year I thought it was all set. But then Hitler decided there wouldn't be any Olympics and I'm burned up."

"I wouldn't want to wait another four years for the next Olympics but still I hate to hang up my skates before getting one crack at them. However, I believe if Finland cancels the games I will turn pro."

No More Worlds to Conquer

There are several reasons that prompt Miss Horn's exitus from the simon pure ranks. First of all she has no fields to conquer. Five years the peer of all North American women speed skaters, she also holds seven of the ten records. Secondly, it costs money to travel so much. And then, too, it's becoming tougher and tougher to hold the titles.

"You see being champion, I'm on the spot in every race. I have always been a lone wolf, racing unattached. But most of my rivals are with teams and they pair off to work together. One will try to pocket me while her mate gets to the front. So far this hasn't bothered me because I have been able to jump the pack at the gun and stay there."

Miss Horn's only serious accident of this nature occurred in the recent North American championships at Schenectady, N. Y. It was in the half-mile race and the one responsible for Maddy's downfall was none other than her most persistent challenger, Louise Herou, of Minneapolis. On the sprint lap, Miss Horn was leading Miss Herou by a couple of yards when the Minneapolis girl stumbled and started to fall.

"And when she did," Maddy continued, "she deliberately pulled me down with her. I was never so surprised in my life. All of a sudden I felt someone's arms go around my neck and then I lost my balance and went sprawling. But after seeing who it was I wasn't so surprised because a lot of those girls are coached to take down a favorite with them when they go down."

In this tumble Maddy escaped injury. As a matter of fact she scrambled to her feet and finished second to the amazement of the spectators. But her seven years of competitive ice skating besides enriching her by 46 trophies and 276 medals have left their indelible marks.

"I guess I've been cut more or less badly 15 or 18 times," she recalled. "I've got a hole in one leg where I bumped into a steel post and another in my head where a skate dug in. That was the result of a prank of a kid who attempted to jump over me while I was kneeling on the ice."

Her biggest thrill? "That was in the summer of 1936 when I went over to the world championships in Europe and presented King Haakon of Norway with a five-pound cake of cheese as a gift of Wisconsin."

Galento and Baer Must Pass a 'Thorough' Physical Check-up Before Bout Is Okayed

By the Associated Press

New York, March 19.—Abe J. Greene, New Jersey State athletic commission head, said today he would not permit the Tony Galento-Max Baer heavyweight fight in Jersey City May 28 until both battlers had undergone a "thorough physical check-up."

In a meeting with Managers Joe Jacobs, for Galento, and Ancil Hoffman, for Baer, and Promoter Mike Jacobs, Greene told Tony's pilot he would name two commission physicians within the next week to examine the barrel-shaped belter from Orange, N. J.

"These physicians will lay particular stress on Galento's eyes," Greene explained in commenting on rumors that the battling bartender's vision was imparied as a result of his stiff tussles with Joe Louis and Lou Nova last year.

"That's okay by me," Joe Jacobs told Greene. "I know Tony is in fine shape, and that examination will settle those reports once and for all."

Greene said Baer would have to undergo a similar examination when he arrives here for training in mid-April. Hoffman and Baer's brother, Buddy, left later for California. Buddy was to have fought Valentin Campolo, recently imported Argentine, in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, but the South American injured his shoulder and the bout was canceled.

Wings Defeat Americans In Cup Series

Detroit Scores, 2-1, In 'Sudden Death' Of Stanley Cup Game

By International News Service

Detroit, March 19.—Spectacular goal by Syd Howe after 28 seconds of "sudden death" overtime gave the Detroit Red Wings a 2 to 1 victory over the New York Americans in the first game of their Stanley Cup play-off series in Detroit tonight.

With the clubs tied at 1 all at the end of the regular playing time, Howe took the puck from the face-off to start the overtime, wound up back of his own net, avoided two forwards on the way down the ice, stick-handled his way through the New York defense and banged the puck past Robertson ankle high.

Eddie Shore, veteran defense man, who played all but about five minutes of the game, and Charley Conacher were on the defense when Howe caught them flat-footed.

"The old men of Manhattan" played heads-up "play-off" hockey until the spectacular play by Howe sent them down to defeat. Throughout the game they sat back on the defense waiting for the breaks.

Power plays in the first period while Hooley Smith and Conacher were in the penalty box availed the Red Wings nothing although Goalie Robertson was called upon to make great saves on several occasions.

Leafs Beat Hawks In Overtime, 3-2

Toronto, March 19 (AP).—Sylvanus Apps tied the game in the third period and scored in the overtime tonight to give the Toronto Maple Leafs a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks before 13,078 in their first round battle of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup play-offs.

The center-ice star from Paris, Ontario, who will seek election to Canada's Parliament next week, broke up the game after 6 minutes and 35 seconds of extra play to climax a desperate uphill battle. Chicago scored twice in the first period and fought doggedly to protect the advantage.

The teams move to Chicago for the second contest Thursday.

Bethesda Rovers Win in Long Game

After two extra five-minute periods, the Bethesda Rovers defeated the Northeast Boys Club 120-pounders in the N. E gymnasium yesterday. At the end of regulation time, the rivals were tied at 17-17. After five minutes, they were still tied at 20-20. Then the Rovers stepped out to grab the decision. Hedges led the winners with 14 points. Essex paced the losers with 9 points.

Jannazzo Signed to Meet Mamakos at Riverside April 10

High-Ranked Welter Choice Over D.C. Boy

Erwin Announced Bout Over 10-Round Route; Price War Looms in D. C.

Izzy Jannazzo, one of the Nation's top-ranked welterweight fighters, was signed yesterday for a 10-round fight with Steve Mamakos, Washington 147-pounder, April 10 at Riverside Stadium, Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin announced. Next thing in line is revelation of the hinted "popular price" scale.

A veteran puncher who has fought and defeated some of the best, Jannazzo has been campaigning in New York rings recently and is the pick of the crop of fighters Erwin has been seeking to help launch the Capital's newest fight venture at Riverside.

Jannazzo is handled by Guy Anselmi veteran manager, and will come into Washington favored to defeat Mamakos, who hasn't fought at home in almost a year.

Steve has been fighting and making hits in other precincts. His biggest triumph was a decisive beating he administered Sammy Luftspring, Canadian welterweight champion, in Toronto. It was the second time Mamakos had defeated Luftspring.

Only recently, Promoter Joe Turner offered Mamakos a $750 guarantee to fight Phil Furr, Washington's comeback-bent welterweight.

Jannazzo, in fighting Holman Williams to a recent draw, floored the tough colored battler—a rare feat—and immediately established himself as a favorite over Steve, who was beaten thoroughly by Williams in Baltimore.

A scientific fighter, Jannazzo is boasting of a "new-found punch," an old wheeze for fighters but one which has some credence after his showing against Williams.

Horse Show Training Held At Fort Myer

Hunter and Jumper Championships Are Decided Tonight

If schooling sessions are a reliable indication of what will happen in Fort Myer's horse show tonight, there will be plenty of competition for the hunter and jumper championships of the winter series, which will be awarded at the conclusion of the show.

Lieut. David Wagstaff's Enterprise, at present leading for the jumper championship with 7 points, was in her usual good form during Monday night's schooling, but surprised onlookers by knocking down a solid-looking rail.

Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, runner-up with 6 points, did not school for the event because the little chestnut mare usually performs better when she is not familiar with the fences she is to take.

The United States Government's Inclusive, with Capt. Charles McClelland up, was not at her best during schooling. She is tied for third place with Lieut. O. K. Kane's Ard Patrick and Capt. Kenneth Hoge's Broomfield, as all three horses now have 4 points each toward the championship.

Not many hunters appeared for the schooling session, a most of the horses in the battle for the hunter tricolor are tried performers who don't need additional practice. Mrs. D. N Lee's Red Fox, leading his division with 7 points, will not jump in the Myer ring until tonight's first hunter class, and neither will Charles Carrico's Recall, another consistent show horse. Recall's present rating is third, where he is tied with the Government's High Spade and Capt. T. Q. Donaldson's Muddy River, each with 4 points. In second place is Maj. Gen. Maxwell Murray's Scamp with 6 points.

The student team jumping championship, which opens tonight's activities, finds the University of Maryland's team well in the lead with a total of only 7 faults. The team, composed of Fred Hughes, jr., on Hi-Ho, Sam Pfefferkorn on Carrie Knight, Paul Weimert on Ring Master, and Bill Stevens on Cody, stands a good chance to take the big gold trophy back to College Park with them, for their closest rivals, the Landon School boys' team, is 8 points behind with a total of 15 faults.

In third place is Arlington Hall's team of girl riders with 16 faults, and Alice Deal's team is fourth with 18. If the Western High School entry had been in competition in the first show of the series, it would rate an excellent chance of being high in the awards. However, the Western quartet did not enter until last month's event and received a handicap of 63½ points, which puts them out of the running in spite of a good score last time of only 3 faults.

Tonight's classes, beginning at 7:45, include student jumping, working hunters, fault-and-out, hunter hacks, open hunters and open jumpers.

Judges are Maj Henry Leonard, Col. Sloan Doak and Maj. James T. Duke.

Turner Granted Use of Stadium For 'Big' Shows This Summer

Proposed Return Archibald-Jeffra Bout Will Be Staged at Ball Park

Another country was heard from yesterday in the Joey Archibald-Harry Jeffra featherweight title fight mess as Joe Turner announced he has been granted use of Griffith Stadium for a possible return bout and Goldie Ahearn, Turner's former partner, revealed that Al Weill had made him a promise, too.

Turner announced that Clark C. Griffith had granted him permission to use the American League park—despite the fact that Ahearn claims he has exclusive rights to the stadium for boxing shows this summer.

"Griffith told me I could have the ball park for the Archibald-Jeffra fight if we can make the match again and that furthermore I could promote all my big shows there this summer," Turner said.

N. B. A. Takes Stand

The National Boxing Association has taken an "over my dead body shall this fight come off" stand on the Archibald bout, but Turner is still agitating for a return on the strength of promises from Weill, Archibald's manager.

Turner hopes to stage the return title fight in May. Ahearn plans returning to the promotional field the same month with a big heavyweight fight show in the stadium.

"Clark Griffith isn't here, so you can't prove nothing—but Griffith is still my man, though," Goldie was quick to state upon learning of Turner's announcement.

"Griffith granted me exclusive rights to the stadium for fights with the understanding that if anybody else wanted to come in we'd get together and decide on it. If Joe has got permission to run his shows in the stadium I don't know about it yet," Ahearn said, adding:

Weill Still Promises

"I been holding conversations with Al Weill and he told me only last Friday night, 'Goldie, you'll be taken care of.' Maybe we can get together on something. You know I made that match last summer, and I lost money, too."

If the words of Heinie Miller, N. B. A. president, mean what he implied, both Turner and Ahearn are whistling in the dark. The N. B. A. says it's Pete Scalzo for Archibald next or Archibald loses his title.

"That fellow Weill has played his last straw with me," Miller said. "He's got to live up to the N. B. A.'s ruling and realize the national import of this match or blow his title."

Turner announced Tony Sarulto, of Philadelphia, will fight a newcomer, Jimmy Fantini, of Brooklyn, Monday in an 8-rounder at the W street arena.

Cox Matched With Kirilenko On Arena Card

The cast for the big unveiling tomorrow night at Turner's arena was completed yesterday with Joe Cox and Matros Kirilenko in the semifinal.

Main event is supposed to be the unmasking of The Golden Terror by none other than The Terror himself.

Probably weary of having various beefy characters tugging futilely at his heavy black hood, The Terror has promised to take off his mask the moment he gets in the ring.

At this point it's a 10-to-1 bet the fans will scream for The Terror to put it back on after one glance at his face. Fact is, there's some suspicion The Terror will play coy and not remove his mask after all.

"Any monkey business, and I'll get in there and pull it off myself," growled Turner yesterday, foreseeing this eventuality.

The preliminary routines will be performed by Tommy O'Toole versus Emil Dusek, Hymie Olson versus Abie Kaplan and Jim Coffield versus Don Evans.

Wolfe's Pin Squad Takes League Lead

The C. H. Wolfe team moved into first place in the Saturday Night Bowling League at Convention Hall by taking three games from Center Market Florists, while the erstwhile league-leading Maurice H. Katz team was losing three to Plaza Drug Co. Rabbit and Colezas, with 349 and 345, respectively, led Wolfe and H. Deavers was high for Plaza with 140 and 345.

Barratte Organizing

Vic Barratte last night obtained use of Ballston Stadium for night softball games and immediately began plans for organization of a league. Teams interested should write Barratte at 340 Wire avenue, Silver Spring.

Deal Faculty Claim Title After Victory

Beat Anacostia, 28-23, In Faculty Contest; Dallas Shirley Stars

Alice Deal Junior High faculty, paced by Dallas Shirley, laid claim to the junior high faculty championship of the District yesterday when it defeated Anacostia, 28-23.

Ten points were scored by Shirley, and Elliot Brumbaugh turned in 7 more. Best for the losers was Julian Colangelo, coach at Anacostia High. He tallied eight points. At half time the Anacostia teachers led, 13-10, but fell off in the closing minutes.

Arturo Godoy Ousts Galento As Challenger

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, March 19.—Arturo Godoy, Chile's "forgotten man," who came out of obscurity to go 15 rounds with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, today replaced Tony Galento as the National Boxing Association's choice as No. 1 contender for the Brown Bomber's title.

Fred J. Saddy, of Milwaukee, chairman of the N. B. A.'s championship rating committee, placed Godoy's performance at the top of his review for the past quarter, ahead of Henry Armstrong's knockout victory over Pedro Montanez and Armstrong's draw with Ceferino Garcia.

Galento dropped to second place among the heavyweight contenders, followed in order by Bob Pastor, Lou Nova, Tommy Farr and Max Baer. The committee placed Johnny Paychek, Louis' next foe, in eighth place.

The committee prefaced its quarterly list of champions—unchanged since December—with a blunt warning to Joey Archibald, featherweight ruler, that unless he signs for a bout with Pete Scalzo by March 28, the N. B. A. will relieve him of his title. Scalzo is No. 1 contender.

Lew Jenkins, now No. 3 lightweight contender, was "invited" to box Davy Day, No. 1, at 135 pounds, before Jenkins meets Lou Ambers, lightweight champion. The winner would be "considered a formidable opponent" for Ambers.

Champions and No. 1 contenders in other divisions, respectively, were rated as follows: Light heavyweights, Billy Conn and Gus Lesnevich; middleweights, Al Hostak and Ceferino Garcia; welterweights, Henry Armstrong and Milt Aron; bantamweights, George Pace and Lou Salica; flyweights, Little Dado and Enrico Urbinati.

Biggest jump was by Aron, from eighth place to first among welter contenders, by knocking out Fritzie Zivic. Salica got his rating by fighting a draw with Pace.

Other "best boots" listed by Saddy were those in which Melio Bettina, No. 2 light heavyweight contender, stopped Fred Apostoli, who skidded to honorable mention, and in which Tony Zale gained a decision over Middleweight Champion Al Hostak in a nontitle bout.

Columbia Club Elects Officers

The Columbia Yacht Club held its annual banquet and election of officers last night at Naylor's Restaurant. Officers elected were W. W. Barker, commodore; I. L. Greenberg, vice commodore; Charles Holden, sr., secretary-treasurer; C. L. Hubbard, treasurer; Jalmer Rolfson, director at large.

Plans for the coming season were discussed. The club plans to stage several regattas itself in addition to competing in outside events.

A musical program was furnished by Mrs. Martha Madison.

Bowie, Hyattsville Stars Win Shoot

Don Shegogue, of Bowie High School, led the boys, and Hilda Reeves, of Hyattsville High, led the girls yesterday in the annual basketball foul shooting tournament of Prince George's County at Oxon Hill High gymnasium.

Shegogue, who shot 27 out of 28, and Miss Reeves, with 24, were awarded gold basketballs. Bob Freeman, of Hyattsville, and Jack Hughes, of Mount Rainier, tied for second place in the boys' competition with 20. Mary Harrison, of Marlboro, was runner-up with 22 in the girls' shooting. Entrants were from Oxon Hill, Marlboro, Bladensburg, Hyattsville and Maryland Park High Schools.

Spring Reaches Race Page as Bowie Lists Stake Eligibles

Rough Time, Sun Egret to Vie in Rowe

Honey Cloud Named For Handicap; 33 Kindergarten Hopes; Rough Pass Listed

By Walter Haight

Yellow crocus shoots pushing through the ground are not the only sign of spring hereabouts, for yesterday the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association announced the nominations for the four stakes to mark the high spots on the racing meet opening at Bowie on April 1. The three $5,000 added fixtures, the Rowe Memorial Handicap, the Bowie Spring Handicap and the Southern Maryland Handicap, have drawn representative fields that are promising of keen action.

The $2,500 added Bowie Kindergarten, as the name implies a test for the new crop of juveniles, has drawn an army of eligibles for a battle over the half-mile course.

Although the meeting opens a week from the coming Monday, the first of the handicaps is scheduled for Wednesday, April 3. Fourteen horses have been named for the Rowe Memorial, as usual a test of 6 furlongs. The race promises a renewal of a three-cornered rivalry that has marked Maryland racing recently. The A. C. C. Stable's Sun Egret, Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud and J. Yancy Christmas' Rough Time have been named.

Rough Time Named

Rough Time, famius Maryland speedster, won the event last year, leading Benjam and Old Rosebush to the wire. The year before, Sun Egret, then a 3-year-old, scampered home in frone. Honey Cloud has never won the Rowe, but his liking for Bowie stake races is well known.

In addition to Rough Time, Christmas has made eligible his Kentucky Derby candidate, Rough Pass, winner of the Spalding Lowe Jenkins at Laurel last year among other stakes. Also shooting for the Rowe purse will be Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' Jehoover, something of a sensation in Florida this winter; Gustave Ring's Rumba Gus, winner of the Bowie Kindergarten in 1939; Richard A. Moore's Clodion, remembered for his thrilling dead heat with Honey Cloud in the Thanksgiving Day Handicap of 1938 and Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Gen'l Manager and Pagliacci, both partial to the Prince Georges County oval.

The Bowie Spring Handicap is scheduled for the first Saturday of the meeting and 18 horses are in line for the battle over the mile and 70 yards route. This is the third running of this event, won last year by Hypocrite which led Challephen and Short Distance to the wire. Hypocrite was flying the colors of the late Ral Parr and was trained by Guy Bedwell who also accounted for the 1938 renewal with the A. C. C. Stable's Sun Egret.

Sun Egret in Line

Sun Egret has been named this year along with Belair Stud's Bosley, W. L. Brann's Challephen and Aethelwold, E. K. Bryson's Clyde Tolson, Mrs. Nat Ray's Modern Age and Gustave Ring's Charlotte Girl, winner of the Kindergarten two years ago.

Thirty-three tried and untried 2-year-olds are eligible for the Bowie Kindergarten on April 10. Winter racing is well represented as are juveniles who spent the cold months hereabouts and who will be getting their first taste of competition. Mrs. Cary T. Grayson has nominated an unnamed 2-year-old. Gustave Ring shoots for the race with his Rumba Gus won last year. He is represented by Ring Star.

Saturday, April 13, will bring a distance struggle of merit in the Southern Maryland Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth. Sun Egret, Honey Cloud, Challephen, Bosley and a majority of those named for the other two $5,000 races are in line.

Complete nominations for the four races follow:

THE ROWE MEMORIAL HANDICAP—A. C. C. Stable, Sun Egret; Mrs. A. J. Abel, Honey Cloud; Belair Stud, Bosley; E. K. Bryson, Clyde Tolson; J. Y. Christmas, Rough Pass and Roush Time; Mrs. E. D. Jacobs, Jehoover; Mrs. E. Graham Lewis, General Manager and Pagliacci; Richard A. Moore, Clodion; Gustave Ring, Rumba Gus and Como No; Jouett Shouse, Arden Lass; Wheatley Stable, Sea Captain.

†Disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DELIUS, $19.10, $11.20, $6.80; EVA R., $39.10, $16.90; ADOLF, $4.80.

DELIUS, slow to begin, was taken to the outside, moved up fast entering the stretch and wore the leaders down in the final drive. EVA R. bettered her position steadily, responded to punishment, but could not stave off the winner. COME HOME, keen contender on the outside, bore over while taking command at the furlong pole, interfered with ADOLF and FAIR, for which he was disqualified. ADOLF, in the thick of contention, may have been closer, but for being troubled. DEODO came with a belated rush.

Daily Double, WITHIN and DELIUS, Paid $44.60

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:09½. Off at once. Winner, West Flagler Stable's ch. g. (3), by Ariel—Quarante. Trained by L. J. Keating. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAEAIR, $18.40, $7.60, $4.70; MAECHANCE, $4.60, $3.10; DARBY DALLAS, $4.20.

MAEAIR, away forwardly, displayed good speed while saving ground and maintained his lead with determination in the final drive. MAECHANCE, well up on the outside all the way, continued gamely to punishment to outlast DARBY DALLAS in the final drive. DARBY DALLAS, pocketed and forced to pull up leaving the backstretch, came between horses entering the stretch and was wearing MAECHANCE down. OFFICE HOUR hung through the stretch.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,100; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:37½. Off 3:39½. Winner, Circle M Ranch's blk. g. (7), by Balko—The Spare. Trained by W. B. Finnegan. Value to winner, $750; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:04.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPEED TO SPARE, $3.20, $2.50, $2.20; NIGHT TIDE, $3.20, $3.70; VEJETE, $3.40.

SPEED TO SPARE, quickest to begin, displayed high speed in the early running and shook off NIGHT TIDE through the stretch, but was ridden out briskly. NIGHT TIDE, in close attendance of the leader throughout, held on gamely to outlast VEJETE when the final issue came. VEJETE, well up all the way, lost much ground rounding the turn, finished gamely and the race should benefit him. HANDIBOY, favored by a fast pace, closed stoutly.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,300; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06½. Off 4:07. Winner, Philip Schwartz's dk. ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAPPER TANDY, $12.20, $5.90, $3.60; VISIGOTH, $4.20, $3.00; DOLLY VAL, $3.00.

NAPPER TANDY, hustled to the front in the opening furlong, bore out rounding the first turn, shook off repeated bids from VISIGOTH in the early stages and again raced wide rounding the lower turn coming extremely wide into the stretch and carrying his field with him. VISIGOTH, a keen factor, finished gamely, but could not get up. DOLLY VAL was compelled to race extremely wide in the last half mile. SUPREME SIR had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:37. Off 4:39. Winner, Mrs. E. P. Rickard's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SETTLER, $22.50, $10.60, $7.60; SURE CURE, $6.10, $4.50; GOLDEN CARGO, $6.20.

SETTLER broke alertly, forced a steady pace, and drew out at the furlong pole to hold sway to the end. SURE CURE, away slowly, slipped through on the inside all the way and closed a big gain. GOLDEN CARGO, prominent from the start, held the others safe. HEAD MASTER closed a big gap from a slow beginning.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:05. Off 5:05½. Winner, Lucky Teter's b. m. (5), by Sir Andrew—Highly. Trained by L. H. Silver. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:45⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGHMINDED, $21.10, $8.40, $6.10; FORE ISUS, $6.70, $4.80; WEARY FLOWER, $5.00.

HIGHMINDED, on the outside and forcing the pace, finished gamely to outlast FORE ISUS in the final drive. FORE ISUS broke fast, saved ground all the way, but faltered slightly in the last 70 yards. WEARY FLOWER, prominent all the way, closed stoutly. MARCHING FEET and COULEEDAM came wide into the stretch and the latter was pulled up, then came again.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:33. Off 5:33½. Winner, Eldorado Farm's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANYMOR, $12.20, $6.40, $3.40; WICKET, $7.10, $4.00; CONRAD MANN, $3.20.

MANYMOR, under steadying restraint in the early stages, moved up gamely entering the stretch and held WICKET safe at the end. WICKET, also rated off the early pace, finished gamely, but could not get up. CONRAD MANN swerved at the start and was away poorly, but closed an immense gap. SEED broke down and BLACK DEMON pulled up lame.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

You will have to get them in and get them in quickly if you want a chance for that season badge to the Bowie meeting. Last call today for those four-line (keep 'em clean) rhymes on Art Brown. Th one I consider the most clever will be the winner. Only those postmarked before midnight tonight (Wednesday) will be eligible. I have so many now that it will take me several days to go over them. But the more the merrier. So far, I have read each and every one, but I'll have to go in a huddle with myself again before announcing the winner. Received a letter yesterday from my old friend, James J. Carroll, of St. Louis, who makes a book annually on the Kentucky Derby. Carroll knows the Derby forward and backward and anything he says on the subject must be given attention. He has sent me a tip on this year's classic. I'm going to pass it along. Carroll says that the red and white of C. S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit and Kayak II, may visit the winner's circle in the big race. Howard, writes Carroll, has a colt named Mioland that is going to give Bimelech and Andy K. plenty of argument. Howard purchased Mioland especially for the Derby. The colt winged away from a field at Santa Anita and evidently is of Derby material. The colt was bred in Oregon, sired by an imported German thoroughbred. Just to prove somebody knows about the colt, he has been backed down from 50-1 to 10-1 in the winter book. Carroll rates Howard among the luckiest owners in turf history, the Californian having purchased both Seabiscuit and Kayak II for a song. Samuel Riddle was lucky in getting Man o' War for $5,000 at the Saratoga sales. However, the luck champion of the turf was Lord Roseberry. He won three English Derbies with Ladac, Sir Visto and Cicero, ridden by Dannie Maher, American jockey. In addition, he became Prime Minister of England and married a Rothschild heiress. Confucius says: Wait for Marlboro. BILL.

First race—Hi Pov appears the best suited of those gathered for the opening dash. Needs only the right handling. Arestino and Pogosy have speed and probably will find places in the money circle.

Second race—No Ending deserves the call in this field. Belongs with this kind and I see no reason for mistakes. Pont Neuf has worked well and is dangerous. Epitaph downs this brand of sprinter on occasions and will be close up at the end.

Third race—Hieronymus has been racing into best condition and seems ready to take down No. 1 money in this company. Tropical Gal is good and will be there or thereabouts. Unravelled is due some respect.

Fourth race—Ariel Star should prove the best of this event. Appears to be the best of the program and I'm going to string along. Noodles and Free Bid to fill out the money circle.

Fifth race—Forced to go back to The Thrush in this race. That last was a beaut and I see no reason for mistakes. Pretty Pet is better than generally rated and will be close. Balloter for the show end.

Sixth race—Noble Boy has the speed and conditions appear to be right for a crack down in this test. She Knows is as fit as hands make horses. Eli Yale has a bit of class that should make him a factor.

Seventh race—Speed has been fairly consistent this winter and this opposition appears to suit purposes. I'm going to be there. Red Rogue and Lina's Son deserve recommendation for places in the pay-off group.

Eighth race—Uvalde gets an edge over the company gathered for this one. I believe he can take it all. Major-Minor and Jacquella for the place and show.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Rhett, Ocean Tide and Spittenimage.

Best bet—Ariel Star.

Lem Owen, Who Pitched Perfect Game in 1923 Ready to Hang Up Glove After 25 Years

No-Hit, No-Run Games Were Former Sandlot, Pro Star's Specialty

By Al Hailey

A rather youngish-looking man whose carriage and build belied his 45 years stood gazing thoughtfully out of his window the other day—longingly watching a gang of kids walking from Fourteenth street, their arms loaded down with baseball equipment.

Obviously they were out for a little pre-season practice, out to warm up for the coming sandlot baseball campaigns. He heaved a sigh and turned back to his work. He had a sudden idea this must be the way those old fire horses had felt the first time they beheld the new-fangled "horseless wagons" screaming to a fire.

The man was Lem Owen, one of Washington's greatest sandlot pitchers of all time, and the only man to pitch a "perfect" game in District amateur baseball—no hits, no runs and no men on base.

Owen, who began his pitching back in 1912, has been something of a mound phenomenon. He played almost 10 years of professional ball—beginning in 1924 with the New York Yankees at the age most ball players begin to think of a little chicken farm in the country. He hardly counts his early experience in Salt Lake City.

This Year It's '30'

Just last year Lem was back out on the Washington sandlots where he first started attracting attention from the major leagues. He pitched four or five games for the Treasury Department and held his own rather well.

But this year Owen is hanging up his glove for keeps. Well—maybe. At any rate, that's how he felt about it yesterday.

"I'm getting too far along for that kind of thing, now," Lem said, rubbing his chin. "It's sort of wearing at my age."

Ball games, it develops, make Lem nervours now. He feels that he should be out there on the diamond throwing them over.

Lem Doesn't Yell

"I don't ever show anything—get all excited and yell out," Lem confessed. "I just sit there playing every play in my mind until I get so wrought up I'm all worn out at the end of the game. I don't go out to see many games now.

"By the way, the Nats' chances don't look so good this year, do they," he added as an afterthought. But about that perfect game.

The time was August 24, 1923. Lem, a right-hander who hardly ever weighed more than 160 pounds, was then pitching for the General Accounting Office.

It was the first game of the post-season city series against the Mail Equipment Shops nine. When it was all over, Owen had struck out 15 of the mail-bag makers, held them scoreless and hitless and not allowed a single batter to reach first base. His mates won, 6 to 0.

That game was not the first no-hit, no-run affair Lem had pitched. Back in 1914, just nine years earlier, Lem shut out the Holmes Bakery club and allowed no hits. That time, however, two men reached first base. Pitching for Vic Gauzza's old Nationals at the time, Lem was hailed as one of the greatest prospects ever seen on a sandlot diamond.

Here's Lem Owen, who holds the distinction of pitching the only perfect baseball game in Washington sandlot history, in a typical pose during his last years of professional play with the New Haven club. Lem, who plans a spectator's role this year, hurled no-hit, no-run, no-men-on-base ball on August 24, 1923, for the G. A. O. nine against the Mail Equipment club

But when his perfect game came up in 1923, major league scouts from clubs in both leagues converged upon Washington. It was at the urging of Ted Sullivan, an old White Sox pitcher and free-lance scout, that Lem signed with the Yankees and went into spring training with them at New Orleans in 1924.

When the season began he was sent to the Yankees' farm club, Hartford, Conn., along with Lou Gehrig. His first year he won 18 and lost 8, and then followed a period of traveling over the Nation with various proclubs—Memphis in the Southern League, several clubs in the Pacific Coast League. Finally he returned to the East and ended up with New Haven. One year he pitched the amazing total of 325 innings in 52 winning games.

One of Lem's first "big" games branded him as Grade A pitching material. A freshman at Georgetown University in 1915, Lem went to the mound and for five innings held Mount St. Joseph's scoreless and hitless. When the game was over he had allowed but two hits and one run. The score was 12 to 1 for the Hoyas. But baseball held a greater lure for Lem and he soon left Georgetown for the minor leagues.

In the sandlots, Lem pitched with countless numbers of teams. His main service, however, was with Agriculture, G. A. O., and Treasury. In 1915, when his Agriculture team won the District Amateur championship, he set the pitching pace that saw Washington sweep three out of four games for the intercity championship over Richmond, Va. He pitched two of the games.

Now, at 45, Lew says he's ready to turn over baseball to the young fellows. He always was a "home folks" pitcher. Lem was at his best on Washington grounds. Owen lives with his family at 1212 North Utah street in Arlington, Va., now—just another sandlot fan. But he's still with the Treasury Department he used to pitch for—he's superintendent of statistics and mailing, division of savings bonds.

Helen Dettweiler Impressive in Augusta Victory

Dot Kirby Is D. C. Star's Rival Today

Beats Mrs. Harbough In Invitational; 16-Yr.-Old Georgian Upsets Marion Miley

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., March 19.—Sixteen-year-old Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., turned in the only upset of the Augusta women's invitational golf tournament today with an opening round 4 and 2 conquest of the veteran, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky.

The remainder of the favorites, including Defending Champion Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, went into the second round with convincing victories.

Miss Suggs came back to defeat Miss Miley after making the turn all-square. Her rival tomorrow will be the veteran Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., who eliminated Mrs. Dorothy Laird, of Winnepeg, Manitoba, 7 and 5.

Miss Kirby began defense of her title with a 7 and 5 victory over youthful Jane Crum, University of South Carolina shotmaker. Tomorrow she will play Professional Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., who was equally as impressive today with a 7 and 5 margin over Mrs. Charles Harbough, of Cleveland.

Grace Amory, winter resident of Aiken, S. C., and the medalist Monday with a one-under-woman's-par 78, turned back the opening round challenge of Janet Yonker, of Elmsford, N. Y., 4 and 2. Her second round opponent will be the veteran Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., who measured young Ruth Haley, of Philadelphia, 2 and 1.

Helen Sigel, of Philadelphia, and Isabel Ogilvie, of Augusta, kept in the ranks of the contenders but the Philadelphia girl had to wipe away a one-down deficit at the turn to beat Mrs. Henry A. Prunaret, of Boston, one up. Miss Ogilvie advanced at the expense of Alice Rutherford, of Aiken, winning 5 and 4.

had a total of 11 points at the end. These, added to the 50 he made in the first two games, gives him a commanding lead for the Jim Sprigman medal, which goes to the high scorer in the unlimited class.

Al Waters, former Maryland star, and Pete Noon did the bulk of the scoring for FBI, accounting for 13 points each. The G-Men led at the end of the half by 23-12, but the Boys Club cut the margin to five points at one stage. The loss of Johnny Mandes on fouls took some of the zip out of the Central Branch.

The Hyattsville girls presented a fast passing, keen shooting combination. Four forwards took part in the scoring with Isabel Butler, Joy Jones, Betty Wood and Flora Benson dropping them in from all angles. Coach Taylor presented well drilled guards. The "Y" girls could not get going and trailed throughout. Marie Bende and Pauline Burkhard did most of the "Y" scoring.

The Aces won their 145-pound game the hard way. After holding a 16-to-9 lead at the half, the Aces lost their grip and Y. M. C. A. tied the count at 30-30. In the extra period, Johnny Poston and his brother, Bob, made the deciding baskets.

Nation's Defense More Important Than Basketball Tournament

Aviators Fly Away, Leaving Post Tournament Game Behind

Air Corps Expansion Orders Take Away 6 of Main Players on Army Team in Quarter-Finals

"You're in the army now, you're not behind the plow——" goes the old service refrain. The fact that the basketball players are in the Army has forced the crack team to withdraw from the Post-A. A. U. championship basketball tournament.

Sergt. W. P. Griffith, who directs things athletic over at Bolling Field, visited The Post sports department last night to announce that the Aviators would be unable to compete in their quarter-final game tomorrow night against the Delaware & Hudson five.

Sergt. Griffith explained that six of his ten eligible players have left, or will leave the post for other scenes before game time. Due to the Army Air Corps expansion program, the mainstays of the club that won the Government League title and finished second in the Eastern Division of the Recreational League, will be scattered from Boston to Panama.

Each member of the Bolling Field team is a specialist in some branch of aviation. Sergt. Griffith said that while they would liked to have completed their tournament engagements, they were needed elsewhere and are willing to forget athletics for a while.

The majority of the players have been together at Bolling Field for more than three years. The group includes Sergt. Raymond Hager, coach and player on the court team and well known in sandlot baseball circles. Hager leaves for Panama tomorrow morning with 126 others from the station across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac.

Privates Mucklow, Carnahan and O'Laughlin already have left for aviation school in Boston, while Kneib goes to Chanute Field, Ill., and Sherr has been transferred to Langley Field, Va.

Bolling Field has reached the quarter-finals in the tournament and would have liked to have met D. and H., a club it has been trying to schedule all season.

Mrs. Page Adds to Lead In Midsouth

By the Associated Press

Southern Pines, N. C., March 19.—Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, increased her lead in the Mid-South Women's Golf Tournament to 14 strokes by firing a 75 today to go with her opening round 76 of yesterday.

Runner-up to the former National champion's 151 was Deborah Verry, of Worcester, Mass., who got an 82 today to go with her opening 83 of 165 in the 54-hole medal play event.

Helen Waring, of Pinehurst, finished the round in third place with an 82, which, with her yesterday's 85, gave her 167.

Mrs. George Corcoran, of Greensboro, trailed Miss Waring by one stroke for fourth place.

Jeanne Cline, of Bloomington, Ill., who stayed in second place yesterday through the fourteenth hole, improved her score with an 87, one stroke better than yesterday. She had difficulty again today with her woods and putts.

Other scores included:

Mrs. Tom Rudel, New York, 84, 85—169; Betty Abernethy, Pittsburgh, 86, 92—178.

California Crew Beats Oregon State ½ Length

Venice, Calif., March 19 (AP).—University of California at Los Angeles dedicated its new crew course today with a one-half length victory over Oregon State College. It was the third consecutive triumph for the Bruin crewmen over the northerners.

Coach Ben Wallis' crew stroked the 1,900 meters in six minutes 2-5 seconds.

Houghton Signed To Coach Terrapin Golfers This Year

Maryland University's long negotiations with Beaver Dam Club ended with a double tie-up yesterday—Al Houghton, new pro at the club, was signed to coach the Terrapin golfers, and Beaver Dam granted the use of its course to Maryland for all the Old Liners' home matches.

HOUGHTON

Houghton not only will coach the Maryland golfers but will conduct classes for Terp students interested in golfing.

A busy season—opening May 2 at Beaver Dam with Cornell—looms for the Terrapin linksmen. Houghton said the Terps probably will play a 10-game schedule.

Clothiers Play Typewriters in Post Tourney

Rivals Seek Semifinal Berth Tonight; Aggies Meet Sherwood Girls

Saved from elimination when the Petworth Athletic Club ran out of substitutes last week, the United Typewriters, winners of the 1939 unlimited class championship, will try to survive a quarter-final battle tonight when they meet the Bell Clothiers. The action, of course, is in the District A. A. U. tournament, which has been offering thrill on thrill at Heurich Gymnasium for the last two weeks. This clash begins at 9:30 o'clock.

The girls' class, which has provided plenty of good basketball and keen rivalry, will bring a semifinal struggle, involving Agriculture and Sherwood Athletic Club. This game is at 8:30 o'clock. An hour earlier, 145-pounders will hold the center of the stage, with the J. C. C. tangling with Ida's Department Store.

United Typewriters, with Mills, Tipton and other stars, will have its hands full against Bell Clothiers. The Bells, coached by young Johnny Poston, who is "Mr. Basketball, himself," have proven something of dark horses. They waded through Treasury in the first round and then came back with a gallant victory over Bellman Fuel. The Clothiers may lack the star names of their rivals, but they have proven their fighting spirit. The winner moves into a semifinal battle with Northeast Boys Club in the upper bracket.

The Agriculture girls, led by the Misses Mills and Reid, will be seeking their second tournament victory against Sherwood. The Aggies turned in a good game to eliminate Macfarland Girls Club, 32 to 25, Monday night. Sherwood also was impressive in winning from Mount Rainier last week.

There will be a semifinal berth at stake when J. C. C. and Ida's Department Store clash in the 145-pound game. J. C. C. turned back Interior's lightweights without trouble. The Ida's downed Mullen's Cafe after a hard struggle.

The Huerich Gymnasium is located at Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest. Buses leave the east side of the Treasury Building.

Hoya Nine Goes Outdoors For 1st Drill

Pitchers and catchers and even infielders are numerous, but hard-hitting outfielders promise to furnish the former big leaguer most of his worry this year.

Working out at Georgetown Medical School diamond, the squad went through a long and strenuous drill. At the end Coach Judge announced that Dick Dieckelman, a southpaw hurler who waves a mean bat, would be moved to the outfield on days he doesn't pitch. That would leave only two garden spots to fill.

Best of the pitchers is Vinnie Powers, a rignthander who stood out brilliantly last season. He'll top a mound staff which includes besides Dieckelman, Capt. John Smith, Bill Wixted and Jim Kiernan. Three exceptional catchers—Stan Wnek, Stan Blaszek and Jim Castiglia—are also out for practice.

Because of the injury George Pajak, last year's third baseman, received in basketball, Lou Ghecas will be shifted from short for the first few games and Henry Mlynarski will take his spot. Julius Koshlap will probably handle second and Russ Miller first.

Continuous workouts during the Easter holidays will be staged in anticipation of the first game with Pennsylvania on March 27. A game with American U. on the 25th was postponed.

came in three shots ahead of another little man, Paul Runyan. The former P. G. A. champion and 1935 North-South winner, who was among the first to tee off, put together a fine 69 that stood up until Hogan came home late in the afternoon.

Altogether, 16 pros and one amateur bettered the No. 2 course's par of 72. The simon-pure was Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., who posted a neat 71 in spite of a 7 on one hole, and even so had only a one-stroke lead over the next ranking amateur, George Dunlap. The former national amateur champion had a 72.

Bill Ackerman

—On Fishing

Maryland had available this year for early distribution some 30,000 trout. This stocking should be completed within the next few days, and with later plantings made through the open season, should supply exceptional fishing.

ACKERMAN

Trout from the Bear Creek hatchery, unusually large and highly colored this year, will be used in the western counties—all streams west of Hancock

From the Lewistown, Cushwa and White Rock Ponds, about 15,000 trout were distributed in the streams of Frederick, Washington, Baltimore, Montgomery and Ann Arundel counties.

The reason for the delay in the plantings was, of course, the weather. During January and February the rearing ponds were frozen solid, and high waters until early last week caused further delay, for hatchery trout, until they are acclimated to stream conditions, are prone to take the easy way and go along down with the current.

The regulations just released for the Catoctin Recreational Area in Frederick County and which cover Big Owens Creek, Big Hunting and Little Hunting Creeks are little different than last year.

Little Hunting is closed to all fishing and the one exception on Big Owens is that bait fishing is allowed.

Open season is, of course, the same as in all State waters, April 1 to June 30, inclusive. Until April 30 however, fishing is permitted only between the hours of 7:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. After May 1 these hours are extended from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m.

Fishing with other than artificial flies is prohibited in the Catoctin Area (exception noted) and the creel limit is five trout over 7 inches.

It might be a pious idea to mention the fact that Maryland law counts all fish caught in the daily limit even though undersized fish must be released immediately and carefully; and that nonresident licenses do not allow an angler to fish "on such days or at such times as fishing is prohibited in the State of which the licensee is a resident."

With so many anglers fishing without creels these days, there is some criticism of this law that lays them open to a fine of from ten to a hundred bucks. And justified, looking at it from the side of the angler using dry flies with barbless hooks.

For those using wet flies and other artificial underwater baits, we fail to find a loophole to sustain their objections. If they are sporting enough to fish without a creel in the first place, why not go all the way—stay within the legal limit in the daily catch.

In Maryland, at least in Frederick and all the counties east, there is no need for anything but dry flies—we say that knowing full well there are days when trout will take wet flies better. That, however, should be only an added incentive, for trout will rise to dry flies in these waters ten months of the twelve.

With the barbless hook added, there is little need to worry about a daily limit, for a loose line, after you have taken all the fish has to offer in the way of a fight, will nine out of ten usually allow the fish to free itself.

And, if you have never used barbless hooks, you'll be surprised, not only at the way they will hold a fish, but in the additional fun.

Nation's Star Distance Men In Dengis Race

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 19.—The Pat Dengis Memorial, a race April 6 over the full marathon route of 26 miles 385 yards from Annapolis to Baltimore, is attracting the Nation's ace distance runners.

Charles R. Miller, jr., the race committee chairman, said the annual event, now named after Dengis, one of the Nation's finest marathoners who was killed in an airplane accident three months ago, had risen in importance because of Dengis' popularity.

The entries include:

Tarzan Brown, the Indian who twice won the Boston marathon, Willie Dwyer and Leslie Pawson, other Boston winners of past years, Frank Bowley, of Winterport, Me.; Frank Butler, of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Bob Whorwood, the Canadian 40 and 50 mile recordholder, and Franw Darrah, of Roxbury, Mass., former national 30-kilometer and 20-mile champion. Dwyer is from Palatine, Ill.

Dengis, who was killed while making his first air flight, had captured the national championship for the third time over the Yonkers, N. Y., course just a month before he died—setting a record of 2 hours, 33 minutes and 45.2 seconds.

Schoolboys Drill Despite Big Fire

Keller revealed, the school's ball team will engage one of the District's strongest nines, Roosevelt, this season. Devitt will alo be met, along with Georgetown Prep, Gaithersburg, Bethesda, Shepherdstown and Blair in Montgomery County, and Hyattsville in Prince Georges County.

Slated to Be Shifted

Proof of Rockville's dire straits as far as veteran material is concerned is the fact that Bob Slater, only senior on the squad, will necessarily be shifted from the outfield to the pitcher's mound this year. Hurlers are few and far between. Knowlton Burgee last year's regular backstop, has dropped out of school leaving another vacancy.

Norman Anders, first base, and Billy Hill, second base, are the only other regular leftovers. That leaves a lot of white space in the lineup that will be filled from the following candidates: Worley Cheeks, Paul Monday, Fred Ricketts, Tommy Ray, Bob Haynes, Jim Davis, Bob Stang, Thad Ingalls, Julius Martz, Ned Barrett, Ed Sprosser, Hank Alnutt, Bob Stiles and John Bell.

First game on the schedule will be against Hyattsville on April 5. Coach Keller is glad it isn't possible for the ball field to burn down between now and then.

Cubs Rained Out

Los Angeles, March 19 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs got a day of rest today when their exhibition game with the Philadelphia Athletics was washed out by rain.

Dizzy Dean, who signed his contract Sunday, took his first workout today, the drill consisting of a few half-speed pitches, three trips around the ball park and a minimum of fungo fly chasing.

Mount Harbor Note

Members of and candidates for the Mount Harbor baseball club will meet tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the unlimited team's quarters at Mount Harbor, Md., on the Defense highway.

hitter in the game, either, even though he won the batting championship.

"I don't kid myself," the articulate pitching master explained. "There are two .400 hitters in baseball today and neither is Joe Di Maggio. They're Lombardi here, and Johnny Mize. Neither of them is going to hit .400, because neither of them can run a lick. When Lombardi's batting every infielder except the first baseman moves back on the outfield grass. They know he won't bunt, and they know that even if he tops the ball and hits a slow roller they'll still have time to run in and throw him out at first. He's got the greatest eye in baseball. He knows when he hits one out of the park. So he stands there and won't begin to trot around the bases until it disappears."

The Reds' only problem is in leftfield, and they've got a Di Maggio—Vince—for that spot. He'll strikeout a lot, but he'll be more than sufficient. Jim Turner, a former Bee, may be a great help to the club. Ival Goodman hit Turner in the face with a line drive last year. It shattered his nerve, and the Bees gave up on him. He seems all right now, and he won't have to pitch to Goodman again.

The Cincinnati players I talked to didn't want to be quoted, but all doubted if Johnny Vander Meer will be of any use this year. "He's got as much stuff as eve., and plenty of heart," one of them said. "But he seems to go out of his mind out there on the mound. He's so jittery about making good that he can hardly wait to get the ball back from the catcher, to throw it again."

The Reds haven't been doing too well in the Citrus Circuit, but that isn't necessarily a harbinger of eventful woe. There is no reason to believe that the Yanks broke their spirit last year, as they broke the backs of the Cubs the year before. It's a healthy, ambitious ball club which has convinced itself that it deserved at least an even break with the greatest team of them all, in the 1939 series. I think it will win the pennant by a greater margin than it won it last year.

U. S. Monetary Inquiry Urged By Morgenthau

By Felix Cotten.

A comprehensive investigation of the Nation's monetary structure, including foreign silver purchases, was recommended to the Senate Banking Committee yesterday by Secretary Morgenthau.

Morgenthau appeared before the committee to discuss a bill introduced by Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, to discontinue foreign silver purchases.

He argued that the time was inappropriate to suspend the buying, declaring that it would "inject another disturbing element" into an already chaotic international situation.

The committee heard Morgenthau behind closed doors after a motion by Townsend to throw the doors open lost by a tie vote. Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, committee chairman, said the reason was that it was feared questions of foreign policy would be divulged which should be kept secret.

Committeee members reported that Wagner and Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, clashed at the meeting after Tobey had accused Wagner of "smothering" a monetary inquiry which the Senate authorized last summer. The Senate has voted $25,000 for the investigation.

Tobey left the secret meeting in a huff. Afterward he held a press conference at which he charged that "the policy of the Administration obviously is to keep the monetary investigation from being made during a campaign year."

Taft Questions Wagner

The quarrel started, committee members said, after Morgenthau had recommended that foreign silver purchases should be reexamined "in the light of the entire monetary structure" during the inquiry already authorized, rather than independently.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, prominently mentioned Presidential candidate, asked Wagner, it was said, whether he had sent questionnaires to interested persons seeking information as he had planned.

Wagner replied, committee members declared, that the matter was complicated, and that the questionnaire had not been prepared.

Tobey then, it is said, accused him of "playing a game of battledore and shuttlecock" with the inquiry and of attempting to smother it.

Wagner replied that such a statement was unfair. He explained that the questionnaire was being drawn with the help of experts, and would be sent to interested Governmen agencies and private organizations immediately.

Favorable Report Possible

The committee planned to meet again today to vote on the Townsend bill. Since several Democratic Senators said they would vote for it, supporters felt there was a good chance the committee would report it to the Senate favorably.

Morgenthau, it was reported, would not say the program under which foreign silver has been acquired was desirable. Congress by the 1934 Silver Purchase Act, he said, directed him to purchase silver until the price rose to $1.29 an ounce or the monetary value of silver stocks equaled 25 per cent of the value of both gold and silver stocks.

He disclosed that both those goals were far from being attained. Nevertheless, he said, there has been greater stability in the price of silver since the purchases were begun. The program, he pointed out, has been of great help to countries which have or produce silver, such as China, Mexico and Canada. They have been able, he pointed out, to obtain dollar exchange with which to buy American goods.

"Such countries would suffer, and would of necessity curtail their purchases of commodities in this country," he said, if there was a substantial decline in the silver price as a result of cessation by the Treasury of foreign purchases.

Purchases from China since June, 1936, he said, totaled 565,855,000 ounces.

As Hogan Goes, So Goes Rogan In Pinehurst Golf

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 19.—Hogan got low score for 18 holes, but Rogan got low score for one hole today in the first round of the North-South open championship.

While Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., was shooting a great 66 to lead the field, Henry Ragan, of Nyack, N. Y., hit a tee shot on the 204-yard, par three fifteenth hole that rolled into the cup for a hole-in-one. With that help, Rogan posted a 74.

Baseball Meeting

A meeting of the National City A and B Sunday unlimited baseball leagues will be held at 8 o'clock tonight at the Atlas Sports Store, with President Vic Gauzza presiding.

Colored Pupils Sing Thanks To Dr. Kindler

Washington's colored school children heard the National Symphony Orchestra for the first time in five years yesterday, and sang their thanks to Dr. Hans Kindler with such gusto he called it "the thrill of a lifetime."

An extra children's concert, compounded of the favorite numbers from the three concerts given white children during the year, was played yesterday afternoon in the Armstrong High School before 1,100 children of all ages.

As the children had not been prepared for the concert in music appreciation courses, as had those who heard the regular series Dr. Kindler, the conductor, added little explanatory talks to the musical program.

Before playing Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite," he described the oboe, English horn, bassoon, tuba and the cymbals and drums for the children, and players of those instruments demonstrated.

Philip Silverman brought squeals of delight from the children with his rendition of "Dixie" on the tuba, and they laughed at Dr. Kindler's story of how the bassoon was invented.

A medieval German monk first devised the instrument as a long horn, too big to fit in his cell, said Dr. Kindler. The end of his horn reached into the hall, and the other monks complained at the noise; so the inventor cut his horn in four parts and bound them together like sticks of wood. From the bundle of sticks comes the German name "Faggott" for the bassoon, he explained.

Besides the Tchaikovsky opus, the orchestra played Weber's "Oberon" overture, Bach's Suite No. 2 in B minor, Gluck's "Musette." Mozart's Symphony in G minor, third movement; MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose," and Chopin's "Marche Militaire." For an encore the orchestra played the all-time favorite of children's concerts, the "Hi-Yo Silver" section of Rossini's "William Tell" Overture.

The concert ended with the singing of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "America." Before saying good-by, Dr. Kindler told the children he would "like to come back here not once in three or four years, but three times every year."

Aviation Corp. Reports Loss Of $2,238,049

Fiscal Year's Deficit Compares With Net Of $187,909

By the Associated Press

New York, March 19.—The Aviation Corporation, and subsidiaries today reported consolidated net loss for the fiscal year ended November 30 of $2,238,049. This compared with net income (excluding securities transactions) for the previous 12 months of $187,909.

Victor Emanuel, president, said the past fiscal year's loss was "primarily due to the decrease of $3,071,983 in net sales of the corporation's manufacturing subsidiary and also reflected a writeoff of $464,902 of deferred engineering and tool expense," and a loss from sale of miscellaneous marketable securities.

Vultee Aircraft, Inc., had a backlog as of March 1 of $14,960,000 unfilled orders, he said, and Stinson Aircraft division and Lycoming division had a backlog of $4,464,000 as of the same date.

Interchemical Corporation

Interchemical Corporation and wholly owned subsidiaries reported for 1939 net profit of $1,581,961 or $4.10 a common share, compared with $485,383 or 30 cents a common share for the previous year. The company manufactures a wide range of printing ink and other chemical products.

Yale & Towne Mfg. Co.

Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co. and major subsidiaries reported net income for 1939 of $1,024,150, equal to $2.10 a share on common stock, compared with $68,958, or 14 cents a share, in 1938.

Wayne Pump Co.

Wayne Pump Co. and subsidiaries reported net profit for the quarter ended February 29 of $113,285, equal to 39 cents a share on common stock, compared with $69,439, or 24 cents a share, in the similar quarter a year ago. Plants are at Fort Wayne, Ind., and Los Angeles, Calif.

Novadel-Agene Corporation

Novadel-Agene Corporation and subsidiaries reported 1939 net profit of $1,740,115. This was equal to $3.66 a common share and compared with $1,535,523, or $3.23 a share, in 1938. Company markets processes for treating wheat flour.

North American Light & Power

North American Light & Power Co. reported consolidated net income for 1939 of $2,338,611, or $12.04 a preferred share, compared with $1,439,076, or $7.51 a share, in 1938. The 1939 net includes certain nonrecurring credits and savings, aggregating about $498,000, without which the earnings per share would have been $9.48.

American Cyanamid Co.

American Cyanamid Co., reported today 1939 net income of $5,524,940 or $2.07 per common share, compared with $2,452,911 or 91 cents a share for the previous year.

W. B. Bell, president, said 1939 business even before the outbreak of war was better than the previous year, and that the higher level was maintained during the fourth quarter.

Niagara Hudson Power Corp.

Niagara Hudson Power Corporation and subsidiaries reported 1939 consolidated net income of $7,323,763 or 51 cents a common share, compared with $7,195,520 or 50 cents a share for the previous year.

Total operating revenues increased 3.7 per cent from 1938's $82,370,607 to $85,413,673 for 1939.

U. S. Gold Imports Increase; Canada Ships $30,764,798

Gold imports in the week ended March 13 rose for the second straight week, to a total of $54,474,843. The Commerce Department, making the report yesterday, said the week's imports compared with $42,655,946 in the preceding week and $23,834,846 two weeks ago.

After a lapse of several weeks, Canada returned to the role of principal gold shipper, with $30,764,798. Other British shipments included $4,267,641 from the United Kingdom, $2,352,922 from India, $475,679 from Hongkong, and $3,354,190 from South Africa.

Other large shipments were $5,730,114 from Sweden, and $5,797,435 from Japan.

Silver imports also increased slightly, amounting to $1,550,734, including $573,788 from Mexico, $74,421 from Canada, and $675,672 from Japan.

No gold was exported during the week, and silver exports totaled $42,541.

C. & O. Net Income Jumps in Month

Cleveland, March 19 (AP).—Chesapeake & Ohio Railway reported today February net income of $2,279,012, an increase of $1,133,916 over February, 1939. Net for the first two months of the year was $5,031,708, up $2,298,786 from the corresponding 1939 period.

Railway operating revenues for February were $9,975,791, an increase of $1,618,926 over February, 1939. Operating income for the two-month period was $20,736,541, a gain of $3,243,238 over the comparable 1939 months.

Institute Reports Rise In U. S. Unemployment

The number of persons unemployed in the United States, after declining for five consecutive months from 11,493,000 in July last year to 9,282,000 in December, increased sharply in January to 10,479,000, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

This increase was due not only to a seasonal curtailment of employment in retail trade, but also to a slackening in manufacturing activity. Despite the increase in unemployment from December to January, there were 1,275,000 fewer persons unemployed in January than in the same month last year, the institute reported.

Figures in Giant Merger

Reserve President Reported Offered Insurance Post

By the Associated Press

New York, March 19.—George L. Harrison, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, has been offered the presidency of the New York Life Insurance Co., according to reports in financial circles today.

Harrison, who has been head of the Reserve Bank since 1928 and with the Reserve System more than 25 years, was away from the city on a wedding trip. He was married recently to Mrs. Alice Gertrude Gordon Grayson, widow of Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson.

Officials of the insurance company, one of the largest mutual life companies in the United States, declined to comment.

Thomas A. Buckner is chairman of the New York Life and Alfred L. Aiken president. Aiken formerly was governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston and president of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston and was made president of the insurance company in 1936 when Buckner became chairman of the board.

Crude Oil Output Mounts in Week To New Record

Tulsa, March 19 (AP).—Daily crude oil production climbed to a new all-time peak in the United States—3,889,964 barrels—for the week ended March 16, the Oil and Gas Journal reports.

The production was 63,601 barrels above the previous week.

Illinois displaced Oklahoma in third place in production rankings. Illinois was up 41,065 to 455,755. California gained 7,400 to 622,500; Kansas, 13,250 to 176,750 ;Michigan, 109 to 64,667 and, although East Texas was down 1,000 to 397,000, all of Texas was up 16,897 to 1,489,432.

Oklahoma declined 10,475 to 416,375; eastern fields, 2,050 to 106,200, and the Rocky Mountain area, 1,630 to 85,960.

Atlas-Curtiss Merger Terms Are Corrected

New York, March 19 (AP).—Officials of Atlas Corporation and Curtiss-Wright Corporation, in agreement on a merger of the investing company and the aviation manufacturing firm, gave out today a correction on the announced details of stock interchange making the proposal even more attractive to Atlas preferred stockholders.

They said stockholders would receive for each share of 6 per cent $50 Atlas preferred, one share of 5 per cent $50 par new preferred and one-quarter share of common stock of Curtiss-Wright, instead of only one share of 5 per cent $50 par Curtiss-Wright preferred, as announced in a joint statement Monday night.

Sears' Sales Earnings Set All-Time High

Net Is $37,255,274 Or $6.60 a Share; Sales $617,414,266

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 19.—Sears Roebuck & Co. today reported its profits and sales for the fiscal year ended January 31 were the largest in the company's history.

Net profits amounted to $37,255,273, or $6.60 per share, compared with $23,354,364, or $4.18 the preceding fiscal year.

Net sales totaled $617,414,266, compared with $501,676,644 the previous year. The previous all-time record earnings and sales were $30,828,248 and $537,242,403 in 1937.

T. J. Carney, president, said the volume performance was due largely to improved economic conditions, a more liberal time payment policy, and the company's development of the last several years.

Cotton Zigzags; Foreign Selling Acts as Anchor

Foreign selling acted as the heaviest drag on the market. Overseas orders, bluttressed by lower cables from abroad, depressed quotations at the outset.

More selling was attracted by the higher prices but the market came through with only minor scars. Near the close another dose of Wall Street buying extended the upturn.

Brokers saw war prospects and hopes of peace as of only minor interest at the present.

Wheat Buoyant As Peace Hopes Fade Abroad

Futures Show Gain Of Nearly 2 Cents In Closing Trade

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 19.—More warlike talk from Europe and pessimistic domestic crop reports lifted a bushel to the best level in a week.

The market showed strength at the opening, advancing about a cent, wheat prices today nearly 2 cents then eased moderately as interest slackened, but again climbed in late trade to new highs for the day. Statements by Prime Minister Chamberlain and Viscount Halifax defining British war policy brought some buying into the pit, much of it shortcovering. May contracts advanced to 1.03⅜, and July, representing the new crop, to 1.01⅛, both up 1⅝ cents.

Closing quotations were 1¼ to 1⅝ higher, slightly under the day's best marks, with May wheat at 1.03 to 1.02⅞ and July at 1.00⅝ to 1.00⅞. Other grains advanced with wheat. Corn finished ⅛ to ⅜ up; May, 56⅛ to 57; July, 56¾; Oats, ¼ to ⅜ up; rye, ⅜ to 1 up; soy beans, ⅛ to ¼ up; lard, 10 to 13 a hundredweight higher.

The Government's report placed the indicated acreage of all spring wheat at 19,425,000 acres, an increase of 10.8 per cent over 1939, but less than the ten-year average of 22,344,000 acres. Damage in the winter wheat belt, however, the report added, may result in a harvest area for all wheat of only 46,000,000 acres, compared with 53,696,000 last year.

Auto Industry Remains Biggest Rolled Steel User

New York, March 19 (AP).—The automobile industry in 1939 for the eighth consecutive year was the largest consumer of rolled steel products, the Iron Age reported today. The construction industry maintained its position as second largest user of steel, followed by the railroads in third place.

Reports from integrated steel companies having 96.4 per cent of the Nation's ingot capacity indicated export shipments for the year increased to 2,066,800 tons from 1,453,600 tons the previous year, but in 1939 amounted to only 6.4 per cent of total output, compared with 7.3 per cent the previous year.

Shipments of sheets, excluding tin plate and black plate for tinning, amounted to 7,832,600 tons or 24.2 per cent of all shipments. Bars formed the second largest category, with 4,313,000 tons, or 16.4 per cent of the total.

Republic Steel Votes Dividend on Arrears

Cleveland, March 19 (AP).—Directors of Republic Steel Corporation today declared a dividend of $6 a share on the arrears on 6 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock, payable May 1 to holders of record April 12. In February a payment of $1.50 was made on the issue which reduced arrears to $18 a share.

War Shares Lead Mild Rally as Peace Prospects Become Dimmer; Foreign Dollar Bonds Advance

New York, March 19.—War shares were leaders in a rally of fair proportions in the stock market today as official quarters here and abroad gave out that peace plans and prospects if any are chimerical and present belligerents apparently are resolved to fight it out. Steels and aircrafts were in the van as most groups did their about-face from the creeping decline of the last week during which price levels approached rather close to the year's lows.

Short covering by those traders who had taken positions on peace rumors aided the climb of certain pivotals. Air stocks were in the limelight because of the Curtiss-Wright Atlas deal and on account of new and astronomical figures on earnings and orders from key companies.

Wheat also picked up on the renewed war talk and closed with advances of 1¼ to 1⅝ cents a bushel. Cotton, however, stayed in a narrow range, ending 5 points down to 5 up.. In foreign exchange dealings sterling had another sinking spill, losing 2 cents against dollar rates.

Curtiss-Wright Most Active

Curtiss-Wright easily led all other 17 issues. It close at 9¾ for a net rise of ¼ was under the best of the day. Atlas made a better showing, recording a new high for the year and ending ⅝ ahead at 9¾ or precisely at the level of its merger partner. There were six other aircraft issues in the 15 most actives, monopolizing that section. Curtiss-Wright A was off more than a point but North American, Bendix and Pan American turned in good gains.

Douglas Aircraft, while not in the active class, turned in a net gain of more than 2 points on the eve of publication of its 1939 report which shows earnings and orders at New peaks. American air lines was up nearly as much and made a new high at 59¾.

Display Strength

Loft had plenty of support, closing at 30 for a net rise of 1⅝ on turnover of 22,600 shares. George Helme preferred, Dow Chemical, Martin Parry, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Savage Arms and Westinghouse were other strong spots. Radio Corporation, fourth in the list of actives was at a new high.

Steel Advance General

In the steels the advance was general, United States Steel common went above 55 but settled back to close a point higher at 54⅞. Bethlehem was up 1¼; Republic, ⅞; American Rolling Mill, ¾; Crucible, 1 point, and National, ¾. Coppers made fractional improvement although there was a little nervousness expressed by the trade at the two-price situation existing in domestic markets. Anaconda and Kennecott moved up a point each. Railroad issues as well as oils and utilities were narrow and only selected stocks in the three groups were in much request.

Motor Orders Reported

Of interest to followers of the automotive section, where prices were firm, was the appearance of reports that China and Finland would make additional truck purchases in this market. Chrysler picked up 1½ and General Motors ½ point.

Bond prices were irregular in today's dealings, with Treasury issues weak and a number of the industrials firm. In the market for United States Treasury obligations it appeared that investors were trying to discount the changing outlook for peace in Europe. Governments were soft, losses in the intermediate and long term issues ranging from 3/32 to 5/32.

Foreign Losses Higher

There were outcroppings of strength in the foreign bond list, particularly in the Scandinavians, where some new highs for the year were reached. Helsingfors 6½s were marked up 5 points and Danish and Norwegian issues scored gains of from 1 to 1⅞ points. Argentine issues were steady to higher, while Montevideo 7s advanced 3 points. Tokio issues were firm.

$25,000 Approved For Underpass, Home Planning

The District Commissioners yesterday approved and sent to the Budget Bureau supplemental budget items totaling $25,000 for use in drawing plans and specifications for the proposed Scott Circle underpass and a convalescent home at Gallinger Hospital.

Since the House District subcommittee on appropriations has completed hearings on the District budget, the two items will be brought up before the Senate committee, the commissioners stated.

The commissioners plan to use $15,000 to plan the underpass and $10,000 for the home.

Commissioner George E. Allen has recommended a convalescent home as a means for providing more efficient and economical care for patients in local health and welfare institutions who no longer require hospital care. The home, it was stated, would cost about $450,000.

Shenandoah Life Elects Directors

Roanoke, Va., March 18 (AP).—An increase in the directorate of the Shenandoah Life Insurance Co. from 18 to 19, the reelection of 17 directors and election of two new directors, both Roanokers, were announced after the annual meeting of stockholders of the company here today.

Election of two stockholder representatives to the board of trustees voting stock acquired by the company under a mutualization plan also was announced.

New directors named were L. J. Boxley and B. J. Fishburn, the latter a former member of the board. Those reelected included J. R. Gardner, E. C. Lynch and M. R. Speelman, all of Washington.

26% Increase Noted in Yield Of Income Tax

Collections to Date Are $319,090,247; Better Year Credited

By the Associated Press

Early returns on Federal income tax collections yesterday showed a 26 per cent increase over last year.

The Treasury disclosed that $319,090,247 of income taxes were recorded on the Treasury books on March 16, with some of the heaviest collections yet to be reported by regional offices. On the same date last year, collections amounted to $253,038,051.

In March, 1939, collections recorded in the first 16 days of the month were approximately half the $505,000,000 received during the whole month. If this year's March 16 returns are doubled at the end of the month, collections will total $638,000,000.

Since the current returns were based on 1939 incomes, officials said the larger returns reflected better business of that year. Another factor was Federal taxation, for the first time, of salaries of State and local government employes.

The Treasury has not made public its goal for March income taxes, but some experts indicated that $650,000,000 would be in excess of budget estimates.

National Income Trend Downward

The national income produced in the United States declined in January for the third consecutive month, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. It amounted to $6,466,000,000 in January as against $6,843,000,000 in December and the 1939 peak of $7,571,000,000 last October.

The national income in January, however, was 13.1 per cent larger than a year ago when it amounted to $5,717,000,000. Moreover, the national income in January this year was larger than in any previous January since the predepression year 1929 and it was only slightly below the income of $6,899,000,000 in January of that year, the analysis revealed.

Preliminary figures indicate that the downward trend, which began last November, was extended in February, the institute stated.

B. & O. Carloadings Increase in Week

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, March 19.—Carloadings on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for the week ended March 16, were 44,728. This was an increase of 3,230 loads over the corresponding week of last year.

During the previous week the total was 44,046, and for the corresponding week in 1930 total loads were 63,516.

D. C. Delegate To Realty Tax Parley Named

Beale Is Appointed To Conference to Be Held Here in April

By Thomas M. Cahill.

William L. Beale, a vice president of American Security & Trust Co., has been reappointed to the National Committee on Real Estate Taxation for the current year, and will represent the District of Columbia at the National Real Estate Tax Conference at Mayflower Hotel, April 25-27. Besides the National Association of Real Estate Boards, also represented at the meeting, will be the National Association of Building Owners and Managers; Mortgage Bankers Association, National Grange and National Apartment Owners Association will be represented at the meeting.

MR. BEALE

With considerable advances made in individual States in major adjustment of the tax structure to give a more equitable taxation for real estate, there is a movement in 22 States for legislation to lighten the cumulative tax burden on real estate, action on which is an essential condition for national economic recovery, according to reports made to the committee on real estate taxation of hte National Association of Real Estate Boards from its members.

Delegates from 44 States

Nominated by local real estate boards and State real estate associations as representatives of their communities and commonwealths, and appointed by President Newton C. Farr, Chicago, of the national real estate organization, the committee includes besides Mr. Beale, representatives from 44 States, Hawaii, the Philippines and two Canadian provinces.

With a growing consciousness of need for action in view of an impending collapse of the general property tax, this conference has been called by the foregoing five organizations with other farm, financing and taxpayers groups and with Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati, former Governor of Ohio, heading the joint committee. The assembly will discuss methods which have been proposed or which have been made effective anywhere in the country for modernizing the real estate tax system.

Case Study Made

In preparation for the conference, the committee on real estate taxation of the National Association of Real Estate Boards is making a case study of States in which major action has been taken in readjustment of the real estate tax load, including consideration of total tax levies, total levies on real estate, delinquency and foreclosure totals before and after adjustment was made. A meeting of this committee with Mr. Cooper presiding, will be called April 25, in advance of the joint conference. Purpose of the latter is set forth in the following statement of Chairman Cooper.

"A sound land policy for any nation is a tremendously important element of national solidarity and progress. If ownership of homes, farms, and commercial and industrial properties becomes precarious, difficult, cumbersome, or unprofitable, social welfare as well as general economic welfare is threatened. New enterprise and new construction is discouraged.

"It is the cumulative effect of overlapping taxes which must be considered. Some 175,000 taxing units exist in the country. Owners of real estate pay not only a capital tax upon their real property for support of these 175,000 governmental units, but also a national income tax upon the earnings their real estate produces and in many States a State income tax upon them as well. They pay special assessments, also, for streets and other local improvements which are used by all citizens.

"Real estate is not unwilling to pay taxes. But a situation which in some States has caused a third or more of the area of the State to go back to the Government for unpaid taxes, undermining public finances and governmental functions, is one that so directly stands in the way of new enterprise and normal employment of the capital-goods industries as to call for national thought and for action in every State."

Public Schools Close Tomorrow For Easter

"Spring fever" can have leeway on every school child's calendar this week.

The 93,000 public school pupils in the District will begin their spring holidays at dismissal time tomorrow afternoon. Shopping for Easter finery, church-going and egg-rolling on the White House lawn then will overshadow academic matters to which they will return April 1.

Parochial school pupils yesterday began their Easter vacation which will extend to March 27.

Spring vacation at Georgetown University will be from today to April 1; at George Washington University from Friday through March 27, and at American University from Friday to April 1.

Mrs. Clara Hitz, Life-Long Resident Here, Dies at 74

Mrs. Clara M. Hitz, 74, a life-long resident of Washington, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. B. Putman, 2955 Carlton avenue northeast.

Born in Georgetown November 14, 1865, the daughter of the late Benjamin Franklin and Martha Connelly Grimes, Mrs. Hitz attended local public schools.

She married Florian R. Hitz, Washington businessman, and lived in Georgetown until his death in 1919.

Mrs. Hitz was a charter member of Sherwood Presbyterian Church and was a member of the board of lady managers of the Presbyterian Home. She also held membership in East Gate Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. Hitz is survived by a son, Alexander M. Hitz, of Atlanta, Ga.; a sister, Mrs. Talmadge Chapman, of Greenville, S. C., and six grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Sherwood Presbyterian Church. Interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

At a recent championship a pair of good players were chased right into a six bid on today's hand, and were set two. Believing that the adversaries were trying to keep them out of six, they jumped belligerently to the slam. It developed that the opponents were only kidding, but they stopped the fun long enough to double. Other East-West pairs bid and made four hearts.

After the unusual bidding had ceased, North opened the seven of clubs. Declarer played the ace, led a diamond, finessed the queen, and decarded dummy's losing club under the diamond ace. A club was led and ruffed. The queen of hearts was played; South won with the ace and cashed his ace of spades. He then played the spade queen, which declarer took with the king. The queen of clubs was trumped in dummy; the ten of spades was returned and South ruled. He would have made a second heart trick in any event. Declarer claimed the balance, conceding down two, with the loss of two trumps and a spade trick.

Doubling five diamonds was the best East and West could do. They would win one spade, two diamonds and two or three clubs, for a set of three or four.

Listen! with Slocum

Upon occasion these daily epics are devoted to the printable side of the lives of WJSV's little jim-dandy, A-1 announcing corps. It has proven embarrassing now and then, because in my gullible manner I've written what the boys told me. Hastily scribbled notes from public institutions such as jails have led me to believe that our announcers didn't tell all.

Today's leading man, however, is a gentleman of such culture and refinement that I feel sure he has no relations within the third degree of kindred in any nearby bastile. His name is Gunnar Back, he hails from Wisconsin, and before joining up at WJSV was down in Miami as a program director. Before that he taught English in the University of Wisconsin.

It is because of that last that Gunnar spends all his spare time (and announcers really get plenty of that) in local museums, libraries and other such trivia, which, he informs me, Washington has a rich store. He and Mrs. Back have been in our midst but a few months, but already have covered, by foot, every square inch of Arlington Cemetery.

Currently our erudite word slinger is engrossed in an "Americans at Work" script which the CBS network commissioned him to write. It deals with Congressional secretaries, and should be a right interesting show. It certainly will be an accurate job.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

After Inspector Cramer had quizzed Neya Tormic in Wolfe's office about Percy Ludlow's murder, he learned that Wolfe had accepted her as a client. He had first acted in Neya's behalf when she was accused of stealing diamonds and Carla Lovchen, her friend, had begged his help. Wolfe had sent Archie Goodwin with Carla to Miltan's tudio, where both girls taught fencing and where Ludlow, a pupil, was murdered while Archie was in the building. But Archie escaped to report to Wolfe. Developments revealed that the col de mort used to kill Ludlow had been put in Archie's pocket. Mme. Zorka said Neya had done it, so Wolfe had Cramer send for her and for the Balkan girl, but Zorka had disappeared. When Neya admitted placing the fencing glove and col de mort in Archie's overcoat after she had found them in her robe, Cramer tried to break down her mutual alibi with Rudolph Faber. Then in walked Stahl again, of the FBI, to discuss with Wolfe the statute requiring the registration of agents of foreign principals.

Chapter 15

"YES, I understand that."

"Perhaps. Another section of the act defines an agent of a foreign principal to mean any individual, partnership, association or corporation who acts or engages as agent or representative for a foreign principal, and a foreign principal is defined to mean the government of a foreign country, a person domiciled abroad, or any foreign business, partnership, association, corporation, or political organization."

"Say it again."

He repeated it.

Wolfe shook his head. "I don't know. I don't think I need to register under the act. I am agent for a young woman named Neya Tormic. She is foreign. But she is not a business, a partnership, association, corporation or political organization, nor is she at present domiciled abroad."

"Where is she?"

"Right there."

The G-man looked at Neya; in fact, studied her. Then he switched to Wolfe and studied him. Finally he slowly shook his head. "I don't know either," he decleared. "It's a situation I haven't met. I'll have to get an opinion from the attorney general. I'll let you know.

He bowed with perfect aplomb, turned, and departed.

I tittered.

CRAMER threw up both hands, pawed the air and headed for the door. Halfway across he turned to announce, "I heard every word of that and I don't believe it. If I had it on a phonograph record and played it all day I still wouldn't believe in law enforcement. Come on, Stebbins. Bring that glove and that thing. Miss Tormic, there'll be a man at your apartment at 8:30 in the morning to bring you to my office. You'll be there?"

She said she would, and he went out with the sergeant at his heels.

Wolfe poured beer and drank. I covered a yawn.

Neya Tormic asked, with her forehead wrinkled, "Was it silly of me to admit it like that? I thought—it seemed to be the only thing I could do."

Wolfe wiped his lips, leaned back and looked at her. "Anyhow, it was one thing to do, and you did it. Was it the truth?"

"Yes."

"Is Faber's story, which you have confirmed, and which gives you both an alibi, also true?"

"Yes."

"You realize, I suppose, that without that alibi you would probably now be under arrest, charged with murder."

"Yes."

"Did you know that Ludlow was an agent of the British government?"

"Yes."

"And that Faber is an agent of the German government?"

"Yes."

"Are you a government agent, or is Miss Lovchen?"

"No."

"Do you know who killed Ludlow?"

"No."

"Have you any idea?"

"No."

His eyes darted aside. "Did you kill Ludlow, Miss Lovchen?"

"No, sir."

"Have you any idea who did?"

"No, sir."

Wolfe sighed. "Now. Take those others. Mr. and Mrs. Miltan, Driscoll, Gill, Barrett, Miss Reade, Madame Zorka. Do you know whether they were involved with Ludlow, either politically or personally?"

Neya's eyes shifted to Carla and then returned to Wolfe. She opened her mouth, closed it, and then spoke. "I don't know how much involved. They all knew each other. We haven't been there very long ourselves."

"Did you first meet Ludlow and Faber at Miltan's?"

"Yes."

"How did you learn they were Government agents?"

"Why . . . they told me."

"Indeed. Just told you to make conversation?"

"They . . . well, they told me." She smiled at him. "Under certain conditions—I mean, a man is apt to tell a girl things if the conditions are such that he feels like it."

"Were you intimate with Mr. Ludlow? Are you intimate with Mr. Faber?"

"Oh, no." Her nose seemed to go up. "Not intimate."

"Yet they told you—never mind. You say you are not a Government agent. Are you a political agent? Did you come to this country on a political mission?"

"No."

"Did you, Miss Lovchen?"

"No, sir."

"You're both lying."

THEY STARED at him. Neya's chin went up. Carla's eyes narrowed, which left them still wide enough for ordinary purposes.

Wolfe snapped, "As an intrigante, Miss Lovchen, you are incredibly maladroit. Twice since you entered you have glanced at the place on the bookshelves where my copy of "United Yugoslavia" stands. I know you put that paper there. I've removed it and put it somewhere else."

Neya merely continued to stare, but Carla jumped up, with her face white, and started to sputter at him, "But I—I only meant——"

"I know." He showed her a palm. "You only meant to leave it there a while for safekeeping. It's even safer where I put it. The reason I mention it——"

"Where is it?" Neya Tormic's eyes were two epees going through him and her tone was a dagger whizzing at him. She was up and at the edge of his desk in one swift movement that reminded me of the lunge Miltan had made with his championship sticker to show me how it was done. She threw the dagger again, at short range: "Where is it?"

She turned, because Carla was up too and had grabbed her arm. She shook herself loose, but Carla seized her elbow again and told her abruptly, "Neya—Neya! Sit down! Neya—you know——"

Neya spouted a torrent at her that I would have had no symbols for if I had been at my notebook. Carla returned it, but not in a torrent; she was cool and controlled.

Wolfe said, "I understand Serbo-Croat."

They both said, "Oh!"

He nodded. "I used to knock around. I did some work for the Austrian government when I was too young to know better. And I was in your country in 1921, and adopted a daughter——"

"I want that paper."

"I know you do, Miss Lovchen. But I won't even discuss it, let alone return it to you, unless you children sit down and behave yourselves. None of this jumping up and caterwauling; I don't like it; besides, it won't do you any good. Sit down!"

They sat.

"That's better. I mentioned that paper only to show you how I knew you were lying when you said you aren't in this country on a political mission—and by the way, I suppose you lied to the police too? Of course you did. Now that the paper's been mentioned—where did you get it, Miss Lovchen?"

". . ." She fingered her skirt. "I got it."

"Where and how? Is it yours?"

"I stole it."

Neya snapped, "You did not! I stole it myself!"

Wolfe shrugged. "Split the honors. Who did you steal it from?"

"From the person who had it."

"From the Princess Vladanka Donevitch?"

"I won't tell you."

"Good. That's better than trying to lie. Is the princess in New York now?"

"I won't tell you anything about that paper."

"You are in danger. You are actually in peril of your life. Faber's unsupported alibi is the only thing between you and an indictment for murder. Do you want my assistance in the removal of that danger?"

"Yes." It looked for an instant as if she were going to smile at him, but she didn't. "Yes," she repeated, "I do."

"Are you prepared to pay me? My usual fee? Several thousand dollars, for instance?"

"My God, no." She glanced at Carla and back at him. "But . . . I might."

"But when you sent Miss Lovchen here in the first place, you expected me to help you because you are my adopted daughter, didn't you?"

She nodded. "I thought you might feel——"

"I carry this fat to insulate my feelings. They got too strong for me once or twice and I had that idea. If I had stayed lean and kept moving around I would have been dead long ago. You are aware that I have no proof that you are my daughter. You sent Miss Lovchen here with that record of adoption bearing my signature. Another paper. Did you steal that too?"

Carla ejaculated something indignant. Neya was on her feet, with her eyes flashing. "If you think I did that, there's no use——"

"I DON'T think you did that. I just don't know. I asked you to stop jumping up. Please sit down, Miss Tormic. Thank you. I used to be idiotically romantic. I still am, but I've got it in hand. I thought it romantic, when I was a boy, twenty-five years ago, to be a secret agent of the Austrian government. My progress toward maturity got interrupted by the World War and my experience with it. War doesn't mature men; it merely pickles them in the brine of disgust and dread. Pfui! After the war I was still lean and I moved around. In Montenegro I assumed responsibility for the sustenance and mental and physical thrift of a 3-year-old orphan girl by adopting her. I did something else there too, which advanced my maturity, but that has nothing to do with you. I saw that girl's ribs. The something else I did finished Montenegro for me, and I left the girl, I thought, in good hands, and returned to America."

Wolfe leaned back and let his lids down a little. "You go on from there, please."

Neya said, "You left me in Zagreb with Pero Brovnik and his wife."

"That's right. Your name?"

"My name was Anna. When I was 8 years old they were arrested as revolutionaries and shot. I don't remember that very well, but I know all about it."

"Yes." Wolfe looked grim. "And for three years the money I continued to send to Zagreb was appropriated by someone in Brovnik's name, and when I got suspicious and went over there, in spite of the fact that I was no longer lean, I got nowhere. I couldn't find the girl. I got no satisfaction about the money. I got put in jail, and the American consul got me out and I was given 10 hours to leave the country." He made a face. "I have not been in Europe, nor in jail, since. Where were you?"

"I was 11 years old then."

"Yes. I can add. Where were you?"

She looked at him for a while before she spoke. "I can't tell you that."

"You'll either tell me that or march out of here and not come back. And I have the paper which you stole and your friend left in my book for safekeeping. Now don't start caterwauling."

Carla said, "Tell him, Neya."

"But Carla! Then he'll know——"

"Tell him."

"And tell the truth," Wolfe advised, "or I'll know that, and I'll know it even better after I've cabled Europe."

She told him. "When the Brovniks were arrested I was sent to an institution. A year later I was taken out by a woman named Mrs. Campbell."

"Who was she?"

"She was the English secretary of Prince Peter Donevitch."

"What did she want with you?"

"She visited the institution and took a liking to me. My ribs didn't show then. She wanted to adopt me, but she couldn't legally, on account of you."

"Why didn't she communicate with me?"

"Because . . . her connection with Prince Donevitch. The kind of friends you had had in Yugoslavia, like the Brovniks. They knew you would make trouble, and they didn't want trouble from an American."

"No. You can't take an American out and shoot him. So she just stole the money I sent for three years."

"I don't know anything about that."
